Dear Dr. Mitchell:

I am anxious to learn if there are any Fellows of the South Regional Council in Miami.

The enclosed sheet may give you some indication of my reasons for desiring this information. It summarizes precisely the courses which I am offering and expect to offer through the Department of Human Relations at the University of Miami.

It was my privilege to know Dr. Guy Johnson quite well--as a matter of fact, he was on my graduate committee several years ago at the University of North Carolina.

Sincerely yours,

Gordon W. Lovejoy

NEW COURSE IN HUMAN RELATIONS

The Department of Human Relations offers students an opportunity to learn about the many inter-race and inter-faith activities characterizing to an increasing degree, contemporary life in the United States. From these activities arise some of the serious racial and religious problems confronting our democratic society, and, therefore, basic to every course offered in this department is the belief that learning to live together within the spirit of our national motto "One From Many" is the greatest single challenge facing us today. With this thought in mind, courses in the Department of Human Relations are recommended especially to students entering law, teaching, the ministry, social work, or other occupations dealing with people of varied creeds and races.

For the fall semester of 1947 only one course in the department is being offered - "Patterns of Human Relations 201". It is described below. In the near future additional courses will be offered. These may well include ones entitled "American Minority Peoples", "Techniques and Materials in the Teaching of Human Relations", "Community Action Programs", "Field Studies (Special Research Projects", and "Workshops in Human Relations".

Students should note that "Patterns of Human Relations 201", may be taken as an elective or as credit in sociology.

For additional information about the Department of Human Relations contact either Dean H. Franklin Williams, College of Liberal Arts, or Dr. Gordon W. Lovejoy, Professor of Human Relations.

201 - Patterns of Human Relations -- 8:30 MWF - Room 623 - New Campus

A general survey of the human relations problems characterizing majority and minority groups in the present-day United States. Emphasis is placed upon the diverse racial and cultural backgrounds of the American people in an effort to show how inter-group tensions arise. Consideration is given also to the various action programs operating to lessen these tensions. Extensive use is made of current films and written materials. Visits to several local places of interest are contemplated.

Credit in this course may be used to satisfy three hours of the basic sociology requirements.

Prerequisite: Sophomore standing or permission of the instructor.

Professor of Human Relations
The University of Florida
Coral Gables 34, Florida

Dear Mr. Lovejoy:

My apologies in delay for not answering your letter of November 5. We have had the annual meeting of our Council, and that has had us all spinning.

Our only Florida Fellow, I regret to say, is Mr. Chester Cowart, 610 West Duval Street, Jacksonville, Florida. He works at the Afro-American Life Insurance at Jacksonville, Florida.

We are very much interested in your new courses. Are you using any of the pamphlets which Guy put out? As one of our valued members you have had them. Could we supply you with additional copies of any of them as materials for your students? We would attach our usual slight charge.

I dare say that Guy would like to nominate you to become one of our "Fellows". I hope that in that event you would be good enough to accept. We make of too little use of our Fellows, but do try to find the money to bring them in for a meeting at least every two years. They are also a considerable resource for us in getting spot information.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell

Nov. 26, 1947

Dear George:

Thanks for passing on the letter from the lady at the Commonwealth Fund in New York. I have just written her a letter giving her my favorable opinion of the NAACP.

Thanks also for the note, etc., concerning Lovejoy of University of Miami, Florida. Lovejoy is one of our UNC Ph.D.'s. He is a gentleman, a scholar, and a veritable dynamo. Get him to be a Fellow of SRC, by all means! I am returning his letter and memo.

Let me say again that I thought the annual meeting was very good. I believe there was a general feeling that much good is being accomplished and will be accomplished.

Here's hoping you are having a little season of rest and Thanksgiving at this time. My regards to all at SRC.

Sincerely yours,

Guy

Dr. Johnson: If I recall correctly, you have other Nominees for Fellows -?

Here's list of those from Miss Hamilton.

Believe you were going to "screen" them - or something - before sending invitations ?

I still have the draft of letter you thought OK for writing them.

Dear Mr. Turner:

It is a pleasure to tell you that you have been nominated as an Honorary Fellow of the Southern Regional Council by Miss Margaret Fletcher, St. Mary's House, Greensboro, North Carolina.

The purpose of these Fellowships is to enlist the assistance ot a selected group of Southerners who have shown exceptional talent for constructive leadership. Fellows who are not Council members at the time of the election automatically become members and have all the rights and obligations of members except that they are exempted from payment of dues.

On November 14 and 15 the Honorary Fellows met in Atlanta for their first annual conference. The December issue of New South, copy of which is enclosed, carries portions of he reports as given by each Fellow at this meeting.

Please fill in the sheet headed "How Fellows Can Serve the Council,". and enclose it with your reply. I hope you will accept membership as a Fellow.

Dr. A. D. Beittel
Chairman, Alabama Division, SRC
Talladega College
Talladega, Alabama

Dear Dr. Beittel:

The By-Laws of the Southern Regional Council provide that there shall be 100 Honorary Fellows of the Council; at present there are only 43. In setting about increasing the number, we want to provide some measure of equitable distribution by states. At present Alabama has two Fellows, whereas she should have seven. The two are Dr. T. Ruth Brett, Box 445, Tuskegee Institute, and Dr. Charles G. Gomillion, Box 31, Tuskegee Institute.

Attached are some suggestions for nominating Fellows. If you will set up a special committee, or place the matter in the hands of your executive committee, or in some other way nominate eight or ten young Alabamians as Fellows, the Fellows Committee of the Council will then choose five additional Fellows from Alabama from that group. Fellows function within their respective states as well as in the Council as a whole.

If we can be of any further help to you in this matter, let us know.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell

Dear Mr. Dabbs:

The By-Laws of the Southern Regional Council provide that there shall be one hundred Honorary Fellows of the Council; at present there are only forty-three. In setting about increasing the number of Fellows, we want to provide some measure of equitable distribution by states. South Carolina now has three Fellows, whereas she should have seven.

South Carolina Fellows are Howard J. Kester, Penn School, St. Helena Island, Frogmore; John Avery Potts, Avery Institute, Charleston; Dr. Rosamonde Wimberly Boyd, 537 Palmetto Street, Spartanburg.

Attached are some suggestions for nominating Fellows. If you will set up a special committee, or place the matter in the hands of your executive committee, or in some other way nominate six or eight South Carolinians as Fellows, the Fellows Committee of the Council will choose four additional Fellows from South Carolina from that group.

As you probably know, Fellows function within their respective states, as well as in the Council as a whole.

If we can be of any further help to you in this matter, let us know.

In setting about increasing the number of Fellows, we want to provide some measure of equitable distribution by states. Mississippi now has three Fellows, whereas she should have eight. The three are Dr. Dorothy Dickins, Mississippi Experiment Station, State College; Dr. W. H. Pipes, Alcorn A. & M. College, Alcorn; and Mr. V. L. Wharton, Millsaps College, Jackson.

Attached are some suggestions for nominating Fellows. If you will set up a special committee, or place the matter in the hands of your executive committee, or in some other way nominate eight or ten Mississippians as Fellows, the Fellows Committee of the Council will choose from that group five Fellows.

As you probably know, Fellows function within their respective states, as well as in the Council as a whole.

Dr. William H. Gray
Vice-Chairman, Florida Division, SRC
Florida A. & M. College
Tallahassee, Florida

Dear Dr. Gray:

The By-Laws of the Southern Regional Council provide that there shall be 100 Honorary Fellows of the Council; at present we have only 43. In setting about increasing the number of Fellows, we want to provide some measure of equitable distribution by states. At present Florida has only one Fellow--Chester W. Cowart, 610 West Duval Street, Jacksonville. She should have seven Fellows.

Attached are some suggestions for nominating Fellows. If you will set up a special committee, or place the matter in the hands of your executive committee, or in some other way nominate ten or twelve Floridians as Fellows, the Fellows Committee of the Council will then choose six additional Fellows from Florida from that group. Fellows function within their respective states as well as in the Council as a whole.

This office has already received three suggestions for Florida Fellows, which we will pass on to your for consideration. They are (1) Miss Caroline Lee Gillespie, Apt. 3, 632 Riverside Avenue, Jacksonville. Miss Gillespie is an executive in the Jacksonville Chapter of the American Red Cross. She has been quite interested in interracial work and has in mind the development of an interracial community center on some of her property in South Carolina. Mrs. Havens will know of her. (2) Dr. Gordon W. Lovejoy, Professor of Human Relations at the University of Miami. Dr. Guy Johnson recommends him quite highly: "Lovejoy is one of our U.N.C. Ph.D.'s. He is a gentleman, a scholar, and a veritable dynamo. Get him to be a Fellow of SRC, by all means!" Dr. Lovejoy is an SRC member already, as is Miss Gillespie. (3) The Rev. Mr. Henry Havens, Jr, Episcopal rector in Milton, Florida, and son of our field secretary, Mrs. Havens. Mr. Havens has demonstrated in many ways his interest in race relations and community development. He also is a member of SRC.

If we can be of any further help to you in this matter, let us know.

Dear Mr. Tydings:

The By-Laws of the Southern Regional Council provide that there shall be one hundred Honorary Fellows of the Council; at present we have only forty-three. In setting about increasing the number of Fellows, we want to provide some measure of equitable distribution by states. Kentucky now has only one Fellow--G. D. Wilson, 3344 Grand Avenue, Louisville--whereas she should have seven.

Attached are some suggestions for nominating Fellows. If you will set up a special committee, or place the matter in the hands of your executive committee, or in some other way nominate eight or ten Kentuckians as Fellows, the Fellows Committee of the Council will choose six additional Fellows from Kentucky from that group.

As you probably know, Fellows function within their respective states, as well as in the Council as a whole.

Dr. John R. Ewbank
Philander Smith College
Little Rock, Arkansas

Dear Dr. Ewbank:

The By-Laws of the Southern Regional Council provide that there shall be one hundred Honorary Fellows of the Council; at present we have only forty-three.

In setting about increasing the number of Fellows, we want to provide some measure of equitable distribution by states. Arkansas now has three Fellows, whereas she should have seven. The three are yourself, Dr. Samuel F. Freeman, Jr., and Mr. Paul Clanton, 14th and Pine Streets, Pine Bluff.

We are wondering if you will serve as chairman of a committee, chosen by yourself, to nominate six or eight persons from Arkansas from whom the Fellows Committee of the Council can choose four Fellows. Since the three Arkansas Fellows are white men, we suggest that you include several Negroes and women in your list of nominees. For this reason, particularly, it would be well to include Negroes on your nominating committee. Attached are suggestions for nominating Fellows.

This office has already received a suggestion for an Arkansas Fellow which we will pass on to you for consideration. He is Dr. Stephen A. Stephan, Department of Sociology, University of Arkansas.

Dear Mrs. Crate:

The By-Laws of the Southern Regional Council provide that there shall be one hundred Honorary Fellows of the Council; at present there are only forty-three. In setting about increasing the number of Fellows, we want to provide some measure of equitable distribution by states. Texas now has two Fellows, whereas she should have ten. The two are Mr. Jackson Valtair, 5201 Belmont Street, Dallas, and Mr. Ernest E. Neal of Bishop College, now studying at the University of Michigan.

Attached are some suggestions for nominating Fellows. If you will set up a special committee from the Texas Interracial Committee, or place the matter in the hands of your executive committee, or in some other way nominate twelve or fourteen persons as Fellows, the Fellows Committee of the Council will choose from that group eight additional Fellows from Texas.

As you probably know, Fellows function within their respective states as well as in the Council as a whole.

This office has already received a suggestion for a Texas Fellow, which we will pass on to you for consideration. He is Mr. James Marcellus Tatum, Head of Department of Social Science at Butler College, Tyler, Texas. Attached is a brief resume' of his educational and interest qualifications.

Mayesville, South Carolina

Dear Mr. Dabbs:

We are wondering what action has been taken by the South Carolina Division in regard to recommending additional Fellows of the Council.

As you may recall, South Carolina presently has three Fellows--Howard J. Kester, Frogmore; John Avery Potts, Charleston; and Dr. Rosamonde Wimberly Boyd, Spartanburg--and should have four more. My letter of March 18 gave particulars for nominating Fellows.

We would like to choose new Fellows in the near future. May we not hear from you?

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell

Dear Dr. Gray:

We are wondering what action has been taken by the Florida Division in regard to recommending additional Fellows of the Council.

As you may recall, Chester A. Cowart, 610 West Duval, Jacksonville, is the only Florida Fellow. My letter of March 18 gave particulars for nominating additional Fellows.

We would like to choose new Fellows in the near future. May we not hear from you?

Dear Mr. Mitchell:

Since receiving your first letter of March 24, I have been occupied more than usual with a number of rather pressing matters and as your letter of June 16 reached me this morning, I am preparing to leave the city tomorrow for Geneva where I am going at the request of the State Department as a member of the U. S. delegation to the World Health Assembly.

It is likely that I should not get back to New Orleans until the early part of August and since I have already delayed working on the matter of Honorary Fellows, I would suggest that you ask Father O'Connell to proceed in the drawing up of a list of persons who might be considered as Fellows.

I regret that my situation has prevented my giving attention to this matter as you request.

Sincerely yours,

Dr. George W. Snowden
Dillard University
New Orleans 19, Louisiana

Dear Dr. Snowden:

We are trying to increase the number of Honorary Fellows of the Southern Regional Council to one hundred, as provided in the By-Laws, distributing them by states with some degree of equity. Louisiana has one Fellow--Father Jerome A. Drolet, 3924 General Taylor Street, New Orleans--whereas she should have eight.

A Fellows Committee from the Council will choose Fellows from nominations submitted by committees from each state. We are asking you to serve on the committee from Louisiana, along with Dr. Marion B. Smith of LSU and Father Vincent J. O'Connell, 2901 South Carrollton Avenue, New Orleans, as chairman. This committee should nominate ten or twelve persons from Louisiana from among whom the Council Fellows Committee will choose the seven additional Louisiana Fellows.

Attached are suggestions for nominating Fellows.

We'll appreciate your serving on the state committee. Father O'Connell will contact you as to dates, procedures, etc. If this office can be of any further assistance in the matter, we shall be happy to do so.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell
Executive Director

Dear Father O'Connell:

A letter from Dr. A. W. Dent this morning says that he is leaving for Geneva, Switzerland, and will therefore be unable to serve as chairman of the Fellows Committee from Louisiana.

We are wondering if you will consent to serve as chairman of the committee? We are asking Dr. George W. Snowden of Dillard University to serve in Dr. Dent's place. Dr. Marion B. Smith of LSU is the third member of the committee.

To review briefly what the committee should do--Louisiana should have eight Fellows instead of the one now serving at present. Your committee should nominate ten or twelve persons from Louisiana from among whom the Fellows Committee of the Council will choose seven additional Louisiana Fellows.

We'll appreciate your serving as chairman of the Louisiana committee, and will leave it to you to bring the committee together. If this office can be of any assistance, we shall be happy to do so.

I know the Mr. Williams mentioned above. He is a very active Negro leader here; recently President of the Chamber of Commerce; active in Negro Y.M.C.A. work. He has never been active in SRC.

I suggest Msgr. Joseph Brunini, a member of our Executive Committee and active in our work. He is assistant to Bishop Gerow here and has been chairman of the effort to raise $3,000,000 for a new Roman Catholic Hospital. Mrs. Paul Arrington, Jackson, you and Mrs. Tilly know better than I do. Dr. P. W. Hill, Clarksdale, (dentist) is a Negro leader and active in SRC. Miss Arenia Mallory, Lexington, president of Saints Industrial and Literary School, is active in SRC and very prominent in Negro circles.

Dear Dr. Ewbank:

An Advisory Committee of the Council met the other day and discussed recommendations for Fellows.

They liked your recommendations but had a few further suggestions: Miss Sadie Thompson of the Little Rock Urban League; Mr. William Harry Bass, Jr., also of the Urban League; and Dr. Hugh Brown of the State Tuberculosis Sanitorium. Can you give us any information on these men and women? What would be your feeling about adding their names to your list of nominees?

The Committee suggested that Dr. Stephen A. Stephan, Department of Sociology of the University of Arkansas, be accepted as the new white Fellow from Arkansas. The three or four Negro Fellows will be chosen from the names submitted by you and by the Advisory Committee, if you approve their suggestions.

We do not know the exact address of the Tuberculosis Sanitorium. Can you give it to us?

Dear Dr. Mitchell:

Below is the additional information recently requested by you in regard to the proposed Council fellows from South Carolina.

1. Mr. John Scott, Florence, white, lawyer, chairman of the local interracial committee, ex-G.I. with bureau of investigation experience, in which he learned, he says, his interest in Negroes and other minority groups.
2. Miss Cassandra Maxwell, Orangeburg, lawyer and librarian of the new law school at State College there. Forceful and attractive personality.
3. Mrs. Marion Paul, Columbia, Negro. Asst. state home demonstration agent. Episcopalian.
4. Mrs. Iola Jones, Florence, Negro. Public child welfare worker for Florence Co. Dept. of Public Welfare. Excellent person, but Mrs. Spearman wonders now if she is forceful enough for the job of Council fellow.
5. Mr. Paul Webber, Orangeburg, Negro. Professor at State College, particularly interested in recreation and community organization at Orangeburg.

We would also approve the nominations suggested in your letter of Sept. 21.

6. Mr. Arthur Clement, Charleston, Negro. N. C. Mutual Ins. Co., executive secretary for the state of the Progressive Democratic Party. Understood to be brilliant; probably inclined to be radical. Certainly outspoken.
7. Dr. Dorothy Jones, Sociology Dept., Winthrop College, Rock Hill, white. Pried of Guy Johnson's, at University of N. C. Said to be key professor at Winthrop who could be successfully used in the work of the SRC, It is said that most Winthrop professors are THOUGHT to be radical and out of touch with the people. Such a thought would suggest to me that the people are also out of touch with the professors!
8. We could not learn who Dr. Martin of Columbia was. There is a Negro, Dr. Mance, in Columbia, who is excellent and whom we would approve. Mrs. Spearman thinks, however, that he is well past 40.

Sincerely yours,

J. M. Dabbs

J. M. Dabbs, Chairman,
S. C. Division of the SRC, Inc.

P.S. Kempson and Ayers are both excellent. Both are deeply interested and active in SRC work. Ayers, as student secretary for the Baptists of the State, probably touches more young people than any of the rest of us; he says that in a few years he hopes to brings those he touches up to SRC standards.

Dear Dr. Mitchell:

I have written to Mr. Shores suggesting that a young lawyer in his office had been recommended as a Fellow of the Southern Regional Council. Mr. Shores replied that he has two young men in his office, Frederick A. Curtis and David Hood, Jr. Mr. Shores says he does not know which one had been recommended to you, but that he would endorse either of the young men. I am sorry that I do not know either of the men. If you care to write to them, you can send a letter in care of Arthur D. Shores, 1630 Fourth Avenue, North, Birmingham, Alabama.

Dear Mr. Mitchell:

Mr. Tydings and I seem to have gotten ourselves a bit balled up about the procedure for choosing Kentucky Fellows for the Council. I really think we got balled up because he could not understand the English language! However, I am terribly sorry that this important matter has been delayed. Since he suggested to me in correspondence, which was forwarded to me in Connecticut in August, that he wanted to go ahead with this matter and not await my return, I feel now that he should do that, and I am asking to be relieved from the chairmanship of that committee. No hard feelings, of course! I am sure you know how interested I am in the Southern Regional Council and it's work in Kentucky.

I have before me your letter of April 20th with the names of Council members in Berea. I shall try this month to get out a letter to other people on the campus who I am sure would like to become members.

With all good wishes to you.

Mr. J. M. Tydings

Dear Mr. Tydings:

I am really sorry that we seem to have gotten ourselves so balled up about this business of calling together the Fellows Committee, which you appointed to sign Fellows for the Southern Regional Conference in Kentucky. I really worked on this matter last April, as you know, and tried my best to get answers from the members of the committee giving the names which they suggested. I was not able to get any reply at all from one member of the committee, Mr. Perry, and did finally have a letter from Dr. McDowell, saying that he would not be able to work on a list of suggestions, or come to a committee meeting any time in May. I sent you this information about these two committee members, along with the fine suggestions that I received from Miss Poynter and Dr. Atwood, in a letter which I wrote you on May 13th. Since you had said you did not feel we could choose the Fellows by mail, and since we had no chance of getting the complete committee together in the spring, I said to you in my letter of May 13th:

"Our Berea Commencement comes on May 31st, and after that I shall be tied up with special meetings here, and then away for the summer. I am wondering if you do not agree with me that it would be best for us to plan a meeting of this committee for September. If we decide to do that, I can write Mr. Perry and Dr. McDowell, asking them to get their suggestions for us during the summer".

In your answering letter of May 18th you said that under the circumstances you thought the meeting of the Fellows Committee ought to be postponed. You further suggested that it would be good to go ahead with a meeting after June 2nd. Since I had already written you that it would be impossible for me to meet any time in June, July or August, I did not write you again. I simply did not have time to consider the matter again until September, as I had stated clearly in my May 13th letter. I was surprised to get a long distance call from you when I happened to be in Berea for a day or two between jumps. In that telephone conversation I explained to you again that I would not be able to meet with the committee during the summer. I was further surprised and confused to have a letter forwarded to me later in the summer to Connecticut, in which you again raised the question of our having a meeting in the summer. I had understood from my last correspondence with you that you felt you should go ahead and call this committee together without me. I really believe under the circumstances that is the best thing for you to do.

I am sending you the notes I have on this whole matter, and I hope that you will be able yourself to call the group together, or to appoint some other chairman. I can see now that you really should have had some one who was going to be in Kentucky last summer, and who would have been available to pursue this matter at that time.

I am sorry that you and I did not seem to be able to make ourselves clear to each other, and that you have thus had this long delay in getting this important work underway. I shall really be glad to accept some other assignment some time for the Kentucky Division of the Southern Regional Council, as I am very much interested.

Sincerely yours,

We still have no nominations for Kentucky Fellows.

Six additional Fellows are to be chosen. Can you send us names of eight or ten, with a sketch of their qualifications, so the roster can be chosen by the annual meeting in November? The one Fellow from Kentucky is Mr. G. D. Wilson of Louisville.

Enclosed is a summary of duties and qualifications of Fellows.

MEMORANDUM

TO: MP
FROM: GSM
RE: Mrs. E. B. Goode

Be's I not mistaken, Mr. Nelson Jackson nominated Mrs. Goode of Mobile as a Fellow. Mrs. Goode was in town today and kindly came to see me. She is a housewife, but an alert one, interested in various good causes thereabouts, particularly in voting. She was for some time officially identified with the YWCA, but a recent backward-looking revolution in YW affairs in Mobile chucked out her and her interest in a once official, now discontinued interracial committee. She is adequately under the 40 age line.

I told her she might expect to be asked to be a Fellow, come the November meeting.

As Fellows are members of the Council free of charge, she is, therefore, a new member.

Her name: Mrs. E. B. Goode
Mobile 20, Alabama

She says her Mobile interracial committee has continued under new guises, to wit, the Council of Church Women, and that under this new guise it is seeking a new job to do. I told her what a lovely thing a Jacksonville survey is and she bought a $1 big one. I stuffed an envelope full of pamphlets for her and sent her off to Mobile. Things to do:

1. See that she is on the roster as a member.
2. Process her toward becoming a Fellow.
3. So set the books that she will henceforth get 5 copies of New South. I did say something about 10, but I don't see any use in starting her off on a bad habit.
4. Present me with correspondence prepared for signature such as to notify Beittel of our action anent this lady.
5. Cause to be noted in some appropriate place that she is a prospect for doing a survey, and so leave matters that long after you are married and gone, others will flood Mrs. Goode with survey dope when and if issued.

Dear Dr. Mitchell:

Replying to your letters of September 20-21, I would say that Dr. Paul B. Foreman of this institution would be an excellent prospect as a white fellow of the Council. He is enuthusiatic in his interests in race problems; he is energetic and active. If he has any drawbacks, it would be that he is a little assertive, impulsive, and lacking in tact. However, I think these are minor considerations in his case, and would recommend him strongly.

Mrs. Cernoria Johnson of the Oklahoma City Urban League is a very fine person. I do not know her too intimately, but I have been a participant in several meetings in which she was present, and she has impressed me each time by her good judgment, her intelligence, and her competence in general. I would recommend her with enthusiasm.

I do not know Mr, James Stewart, and cannot comment on his qualifications. I may have met him, but at present his name does not seem to be associated with any distinct personality in my mind. You might find out more by writing Mrs. Thelma A. Perry, Langston University, Langston, Oklahoma. She has lived in Oklahoma City for a long time, and since her father is a prominent Negro physician there, I feel certain that she would know almost any Negro business man of importance there.

Perhaps she is too busy to accept, but Mrs. Perry herself would make an excellent fellow. She is a a lawyer in addition to being a college teacher of history and political science. Her father, Dr. A. I. Davis, 1015 N. E. Sixth Street, Oklahoma City, would also make an excellent contact man. He is, of course, above the age limit, and Mrs. Perry is approaching it pretty closely. I happen to know these fine Negro people personally, and I believe they could help you better than I can in the matter of making acquaintances in this state.

Incidentally, the Daily Oklahoman of September 23, I believe it was, carried a little story saying that the Secretary of the State Election Board in Oklhoma City had ruled that when a Negro is a candidate for office in Oklahoma the word Negro must be printed on the ballot beside his name, e.g. William Jones, Negro. When did a man's race become a part of his name? I think this ought to be looked into and exposed, condemned, and published far and wide. Of course, I cannot do it, but I wish you would take the tip from me and have it done.

I suppose that by the same token it should be necessary to put Indian, Irish, Jew, Scotch, blonde, Brunette, and give a long biological record if Oklahoma wants to be consistent. This is not a new thing perhaps, but it is an insulting thing in the face of the fact that a man has the constitutional right to run for office without any restrictions as to race. In the South, Negroes do not often run for offices, but here in Oklahoma it is becoming rather frequent. I understand that there are two Negro candidates for minor offices , such as justice of the peace, in Oklahoma City. I hope that they get elected because they are living in almost solid Negro districts.

Any time when I can be of service to you, let me know, and I shall be happy to conform within the limits of my time and resources.

Sincerely yours,

O. D. Duncan

RE: Clarence E. Morgan

I was to look up a doctor in Columbia who had been mentioned as a Fellow. We recorded his name as Morton. Actually, it is Clarence E. Morgan, 2029 Taylor Street. I was told by Mr. John McCray that Morgan is a fine young man, interested in the sort of thing we are interested in and, by reason of his connection with Dr. G. B. Johnson, has already an excellent practice.

McCray thought Morgan would be very suitable as a Fellow, though I must say McCray had no elaborated knowledge of what a Fellow is.

Dear Sir;

Your letter concerning the regional fellows is at hand. Miss Sadie Thompson of the Urban League would be a good Regional Fellow in my opinion. She has done considerable work with me here at the College. She had the capacity and the interest and I feel that she would be a good choice.

Doctor Hugh Brown of the of the State Tuberculosis Sanitorium would be a good choice. He is a fine man and would bring a sincere interest to this program. His address is box 123, Alexander, Arkansas.

Mr. William Harry Bass holds an important position and perhaps it would not be best to appoint some of the others unless he also is appointed. He is more of the type that "rushes in where angels fear to tread" type. While he will make a contribution and perhaps should be considered,.I am of the opinion that this matter should be given careful consideration.

We need persons who will go ahead. We need to be careful of securing too many who might be too bold; too crude; too out of place. Since the total progress in the South depends upon taking most of the people along with us, we need to secure as much as possible those persons whom most Southern people would go along with.

Hoping this will give you the data you desire and wishing you and your staff a good year, I remain

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

Dr. George S. Mitchell
Southern Regional Council
63 Auburn Avenue Northeast
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Dr. Mitchell:

Permit me to formally acknowledge your letters of September 20 and 21, as well as your previous communications on the matter of fellows for the state of Florida.

I feel that it would be very helpful indeed if the Reverend Mr. Henry Havens of Milton, Florida, and Dr. Gordon W. Lovejoy were elected as Florida fellows. I trust that favorable action was taken on their names at the last meeting of the Board. I feel that Mr. L. I. Alexander of Jacksonville, Florida, and Dr. V. D. Mizell, of Fort Lauderdale, Florida, would also be representative persons to be elected fellows for this state. You inquired about the latter two persons in your letter of September 21.

I would like also at this time to suggest the following persons as fellows, with the hope that you might contact them directly from your offices and in the hope that they might accept the privilege of membership that would be extended by your office. They are:

Mrs. Margaret Bristol, Florida State University, Tallahassee, Florida
Mrs. Tillie M. Anthony, 52 East Concord Avenue, Orlando, Florida
Mrs. Constance P. Rudd, Florida State Conference of Social Work, P. O. Box 629, Saint Petersburg, Florida

You may recall that you first wrote me concerning this matter on June 16, and I wanted to clear it up. I trust that you will pardon the delay on our part in responding to your earlier inquiry.

Respectfully yours,

Wm. H. Gray, Jr.

November 30, 1948

No nominations have been made for Fellows from Tennessee. If all the elected Fellows accept, we have 97 Fellows, leaving a vacancy of three. Perhaps Mr. Mynders should get a letter telling him that there are three vacancies for Fellows, and asking him to make nominations for Tennessee. Then the next Executive Committee meeting could take action on the matter.

I note that Mr. Gray of Florida wrote on November 15, approving our suggestions for Fellows and nominating three additional Fellows. If we give the three vacancies to Tennessee, which should have them, there is no place for the three additional Florida people. That being the case, Mr. Gray should be written to that effect. You asked me to draft a reply for your signature, but I haven't done it as yet. Sorry.

We will notify each of these persons of his election.

The Fellows approved by the Board meeting bring the total number up to 97. We are limited in the by-laws to a hundred. Because of the late organization of the Tennessee Division, we have as yet no new Fellows from Tennessee, and only three from that state held over.

I would like to save those three vacancies for Tennessee nominations. This would mean that the new names suggested in your letter of November 15 would be held in suspense, pending the outcome of requests to Tennessee for nominations or pending refusal of some of those approved by the Board last month.

You will recall that the three names you suggested were: Miss Margaret Bristol, Mrs. Tillie M. Anthony, and Mrs. Constance Rudd.

I will recall those three names as first alternates, except for Tennessee's priority to any new vacancies.

We appreciate your help in getting the list together.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell

Mr. Alfred D. Mynders, Editor
The Chattanooga Times
Chattanooga, Tennessee

Dear Mr. Mynders:

Here is an item for the kind attention of the next meeting of the Executive Committee of the Tennessee Division of the Council.

The Council has long intended to have a total of a hundred Fellows. Until lately, we had only forty-odd. At the last meeting of the Board, additional Fellows were appointed, bringing the total number up to ninety-seven. That leaves three vacancies.

In getting ready for stepping up the list to ninety-seven, we consulted officially the people in each state division or affiliated committee except the Tennessee Division. We delayed with your division because of its recent organization.

We would now welcome recommendations from the Tennessee Division for three additional Fellows. Tennessee's present Fellows are:

Mr. J. H. Daves, Knoxville
Dr. Merle Eppse, Nashville
Miss Josephine Hamilton, Chattanooga

Of your three new nominations, perhaps two should be white persons.

I enclose material descriptive of the work of the Fellows. We will be grateful for word from your Division as to people whom it would think suitable to fill these places. They are being held for Tennessee.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell
Executive Director

Dr. Peyton Williams, Pastor

Dear Dr. Williams:

The Southern Regional Council is anxious to increase its honorary Fellowships to one-hundred in number. It now has only forty-odd.

The Tennessee division has three Fellows (Mr. J. H. Daves, Knoxville; Dr. Merle Eppse, Knoxville; Miss Josephine Hamilton, Chattanooga). I wonder if you can suggest the name of one or more people interested in the objectives of the Southern Regional Council for me to nominate as Fellows.

The Fellowships are honorary and, therefore, are exempt from the payment of dues to the Southern Regional Council.

The duties of the Fellows is to cooperate with the Council as observers, advisors, correspondents or as special representatives. If the Fellows incur any expense in gathering information for the Council they are reimbursed. The term of the Fellowship is for two years.

The Fellowships are limited to Southerners who have exceptional talent for constructive leadership.

I shall be grateful if you can forward me the names of likely candidates. Of course, Fellows are either white persons or Negroes, and of either sex.

Faithfully yours,

Alfred Mynders
Chairman, Tennessee Division

Dear Mr. Mynders:

Thank you very much for your long and helpful letter about Fellows. With so rich a list of names, it will be possible for the Advisory Committee here to make an easy selection. The names so recommended will be brought to the next meeting of our Executive Committee, which is in mid-March, and thereafter, we should be able to invite three, four, or five of the Fellows.

It was most kind of you to send your check for $50, which we greatly appreciate. We will write you in July if your own arrangements have not brought the other $50 to your attention by then.

It seems to me one of the greatest things to drive on this year is equal school facilities. The things that happened in King George County, Virginia, make it clear that in the next few months the whole South will have to come around on this anyway. So much better to do it in advance, by agreement! At the very least, we can all begin to educate the South on the cost and the unavoidability, as well as the justice, of doing this job.

Mrs. Havens, I believe, is still expecting a joint trip through the State to get the Tennessee Division in motion.

I will be happy to come to Chattanooga at almost any time to see you. Let me know some days when you are going to be there, and I will be glad to come up.

JAN 10 1949
Southern Regional Council

Dear Dr. Mitchell:

I have secured names of a number of good people for Fellows in the Southern Regional Council.

First, I have discussed it with George F. Hull, expert photographer of The Chattanooga Times. Mr. Hull is an intelligent progressive and was chairman of the local A.D.A. He will feel honored to serve.

You did not say whether I should contact the others but I give you the list and await word from you as to the customary procedure.

From Dr. Charles Johnson, President of Fisk University, I have the following excellent suggestions:

(x) Dr. Harold D. West -- Professor of Bio-Chemistry, Chairman, Department of Bio-Chemistry, Acting Chairman, Division of Pre-Clinical Sciences - Meharry Medical College.

The Rev. Joe Brown Love -- Director of the Wesley Foundation, Methodist Student Program of the University Center.

Mr. Nat Caldwell -- Special Staff Writer -- The Nashville Tennessean.

Miss Edith Simester -- Assistant Professor of Literature and History of the Bible -- Scarritt College.

Mr. Delbert Mann -- Professor of Sociology -- Scarritt College.

The Rev. Jonathan Mitchell -- Vicar, St. Georges Chapel.

(x) Dr. J. Mark Cox -- Medical Superintendent -- Riverside Sanitarium.

(x) Dr. E. Perry Crump -- Associate Professor and Chairman of the Department of Pediatrics - Meharry Medical College.

(x) Mrs. Lettie S. Galloway -- Director, Eighteenth Avenue Youth Center.

I think we should have one or two from Nashville, including one of the Negroes. Those with an (x) mark in front of them are Negroes. I happen to know, also, that Mr. Nat Caldwell, suggested by Dr. Johnson, is excellent material for a Fellow.

From Dr. William E. Cole, of the University of Tennessee, I have the following suggestions for Fellows:

Dr. W. B. Jones, Jr., Professor of Sociology, University of Tennessee, Knoxville, Tennessee.

Rev. Merton Seymour, Pastor, First Methodist Church, Knoxville, Tennessee.

Rev. William Lea, Rector, St. John's Episcopal Church, Knoxville, Tennessee.

Since Dr. Cole is head of the Department of Sociology, I imagine that Dr. Jones, whom he mentions as a professor in that department, would be glad to accept and work with Dr. Cole. I know Bill Lea well and he is a very fine person. I do not know Dr. Seymour.

I am studying the membership promotion data prepared by Mr. Fleming and will let you have my suggestions. On first reading, I think it is splendid.

I enclose half of my pledge for 1949 and will send the rest in the mid-year when reminded, if I am delinquent.

— To A Mitch

ms

I want to drive down soon and talk to you. While Tennessee has made remarkable progress during the year, both as to prosperity of the low income white people and as to better conditions for Negroes, I feel that the Tennessee division has not progressed as a division. I want to find out what the other state chairmen do.

At any rate, please let me know the next step on the Fellows. I think we have some excellent suggestions from Dr. Johnson and Dr. Cole and I know that Mr. George F. Hull would fill the bill excellently.

I have made some investigations on the Memphis situation. We have a fine executive board member down there in Ed Barry. We have Walter Chandler as a member of our Council but I have been informed that the Interracial Commission which formerly existed in Memphis has become inoperative.

I am further informed that one preacher who was active in it lost his pulpit because of that activity.

I am writing Dr. Marshall Wingfield on the status of the situation and hope that we can get something started for a Memphis chapter with the aid of some people I know down there.

RE: Mynders letter about Tennessee Fellows

Tennessee has ~~Three~~ Four Fellows at present,

Mr.J. H. Daves, Knoxville (N)
Dr. Merle Eppse, Nashville (N)
Miss Josephine Hamilton, Chattanooga (W)
Mr Abbot L. Ferriss - Box 1164 - Vanderbilt. (moved from N. Carolina) recently

The Tennessee group, under Mr. Mynders' chairmanship, was to nominate for three additional Fellows.
GSM suggested that TWO of the new Fellows be white.
Mynders suggested that one or two of the new Fellows be from Nashville, and that one of the Nashvillians be Negro.

13 names have been sent in by the Tennessee group.

Mynders sent one nomination: yes

George F Hull ....."expert photographer fot the Chat. Times; intelligent, progressive ; chairman of the local A.D.A."

(Mynders says that he has already discussed the matter with Hull,who says he will feel honored to serve. It seems, then, that Mr. Hull has already received a tentative invitation to Fellowship.)

Charles Johnson sent nine nominations, at Mynders' request:

Dr. Harold West (N) .....Prof. of Bio-Chemistry, Chairman Dept. Bio-Chemistry, Acting Chairman, Division of Pre-Clinical Sciences...Meharry Medical College. yes

The Rev. Joe Brown Love... Director of the Wesley Foundation, Methodist Student Program of the Univ. Center.

Mr. Nat Caldwell.....Special Staffwriter, The Nashville Tennessean

yes

(Mynders says that he knows Caldwell, and knows that he would be excellent material for a Fellow.)

Miss Edith Simester...Assistant Prof. of Literature and History of the Bible, Scarritt College.

Charles Johnson's nominations, CON'T.

Mr. Delbert Mann.....Professor of Sociology, scarritt college.

The Rev. Jonathan Mitchell....Vicar, St, George's Chapel

Dr. Mark J. Cox (N)....Medical Superintendent, Riverside Sanitarium.

Dr. E. Perry Crump (N).. Associate Prof. and Chairman of the Dept. of Pediatrics, Meharry Medical College.

yes Mrs Lettie S. Galloway..Director, Eighteenth Ave. Youth Center. (N)

William Cole of the Univ. of Tennessee sent three nominations, at Mynders' request. :

Dr. W.B. Jones, Jr..... Prof. of Sociology, University of Tennessee, Knoxville, Tenn.

(Mynders says that since Dr. Cole is the Head of the Sociology Dept., and Dr. Jones a Professor in that Dept., that Jones would probably "be glad to accept and work with Dr Cole.")

Rev. Merton Seymour...Pastor, First Methodist Church, Knoxville.

Rev. William Lea.....Rector, St. John's Episcopal Church, Knoxville, Tenn. (Mynders does not know him.)

(Mynders says, "I know Bill Lea well, and he is a very fine person".)

Mr. Mynders wants to know the procedure of choosing and inviting these Three new Fellows.

I gather that the Advisory Committee adds any names that they may wish to suggest to this list, and that the list goes to the Fellows Committee for discussion and choice of new Fellows. Also that the invitations go out from this office. All of which Mr. Mynders evidently would like to be told.

RE: The letter from Father O'Connell about the misspelling of Father FICHTER'S name.

We have changed the name on our records. An acceptance was received from Father FICHTER, so he must have received the invitation.
Perhaps an apology for the mistake could be proffered to him when his letter of "welcome to Fellowship" goes to him...

Dear Mr. Gray:

In Dr. Mitchell's letter of December 16 he told you that the three names you submitted in your letter of November 15 would be held in suspense, pending the organization of the Tennessee Division and the appointment of Fellows for that State.

We found that even after the necessary number of places had been held for the Tennessee Fellows, that there were some still unfilled. Therefore the names you submitted were considered and two of your nominees have been elected as Fellows of the Council for a renewable two-year term. They are:

Mrs. Margaret Bristol
Florida State University
Tallahassee, Florida

Mrs. Constance P. Rudd
Florida State Conference of Social Work
P. O. Box 629
Saint Petersburg, Florida.

We will notify each of these persons of her election.

Because we like to keep the number of Fellows from each race evenly distributed, I would appreciate your informing me about these two.

We certainly appreciate all that you have done to help us with the matter of finding and nominating reliable Fellows.

Sincerely,

Margaret Boyd

Dear Mr. Mynders:

Dr. Mitchell has asked me to notify you that the Advisory Committee has met, the names you sent were considered, and four of your nominees have been elected as Fellows of the Council for a renewable two-year term. They are:

Mr. George F. Hull
The Chattanooga Times
Chattanooga

Mr. Nat Caldwell
The Nashville Tennesseean
Nashville

Dr. Harold West
Chairman, Dept. Bio-Chemistry
Meharry Medical School,
Nashville

Mrs. Lettie S. Galloway
Director, Eighteenth Ave. Youth Center,
Nashville

We will notify each of these persons of his election.

Thank you again for your valuable aid in submitting nominees.

Sincerely,

Margaret Boyd

To: Margaret Boyd
Re: Kentucky Fellows

One of the Kentucky persons invited to be a Fellow was Mrs. Francelle H. Armstrong (incorrectly listed to me as Mrs. Franelle H. Armstrong).

Mr. Atwood, vice chairman of the Kentucky Division, told me at Louisville February 12 that Mrs. Armstrong had told Mr. Atwood that she was so loaded with things to do that she could not accept this responsibility. So I suppose that X's her off.

I asked Mr. Tydings to send me names of two, three, or four more possible Fellows from which we would pick two more. I told him to stick some women on there.

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

Miss Margaret Boyd
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
Room 432

Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Miss Boyd:

This acknowledges with thanks your letter of February 14.

The two persons who have recently been elected as Fellows of the Council, Mrs. Margaret Bristol, and Mrs. Constance P Rudd, are white. As I think about the work of the organization, I feel that it would be to the advantage of the organization to have a majority of the Fellows from the white race. This does not mean that I minimize at all the importance of having members of the Negro race as Fellows, and feel they too can make a very significant contribution to the work.

Respectfully yours,

Wm. H. Gray, Jr.

Dear Mrs. Bristol:

The Southern Regional Council has been fortunate from its beginning in having the help of selected individuals over the South who accept appointment as Honorary Fellows of the Council.

Under the by-laws, the total number of Fellows does not exceed one hundred.

Fellows serve as eyes and ears for the Council. Ordinarily they are youngish persons with a place in the life of the South which gives them a special insight into needs and possibilities for action. They are widely distributed in location by religion, by race, and by occupation.

I append a formal statement as to the things that Fellows do.

The Executive Committee of the Council, on advice from people in your state, have elected you to one of the few remaining places as Fellow. We do hope that you will be able to accept. The term is for two years, renewable at the pleasure of the Board of Directors of the Council.

Other Fellows already serving in your state are :

Mr. Chester W. Cowart
Jacksonville

Mr. L. I. Alexander

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, Inc.

ROOM 432, 63 AUBURN AVENUE, N. E.

TO HONORARY FELLOWS
OF THE
SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

Purpose of the Fellowships

The purpose of these Honorary Fellowships is set forth in the by-laws of the SRC as follows:

> ARTICLE III, SECTION 1. Fellows. The Board of Directors may award honorary fellowships, not exceeding one hundred (100) in number, to Southerners who have demonstrated exceptional talent for constructive leadership. Fellows shall be chosen in such manner as the Board of Directors may prescribe, provided they are well distributed as to race, sex, creed, occupation, and place of residence. The duties of fellows shall be to cooperate with the Council as observers, advisers, correspondents, and special representatives. Fellows may receive such honoraria or reimbursement of expenses incurred at the request of the Executive Committee as the Board may direct. The term of a fellowship shall be for two years, unless otherwise provided by the Board of Directors, and fellowships may be renewed or withdrawn at the discretion of the Board. Fellows need not be members of the corporation at the time of their appointment, but they shall, during the term of their fellowship, be members with all the rights and obligations of members, except that they shall be exempted from the payment of dues.

The Fellowships, then, offer an opportunity for mutual assistance. As a Fellow, you can help the Council in its program of social interpretation and social action. The Council can help you to gain experience and greater maturity in techniques of leadership. We believe that the cumulative efforts of one hundred young Southerners who are willing to do the little chores in local situations can contribute a great deal to the realization of democracy in the South.

The Southern Regional Council Program

The Council's main objects are to promote "the improvement of economic, civic, and racial conditions in the South" and "to attain through research and action programs the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the region." Some immediate problems which the Council wishes to work on are: (1) inclusion of the interests of all citizens in the post-war plans which are now being made; (2) full employment after the war; (3) fair standards and wages in domestic service; (4) suffrage reform in the South; (5) equalization of school facilities and teachers' salaries; (6) the police and race tensions; (7) housing for low-income groups.

The techniques for working on these problems include: (1) educational work through pamphlets, press, radio, addresses, etc; (2) cooperation with other agencies and use of coordinated organizational influences; (3) personal influence upon key people, such as editors, employers, mayors, chiefs of police, governors, legislators, congressmen, etc; (4) public statements or appeals by groups of influential citizens; (5) constructive political action wherever possible.

How Fellows Can Help

As a Fellow you can help the Council and serve the cause of a better South in various ways. Here are some suggestions:

1. Write us regularly, reporting on trends, incidents, and problems in your local area. We want to discover and advertise good practices as well as combat bad practices. And, of course, we want to know about your own activities in behalf of a more democratic South.

2. Make special investigations. From time to time we might ask you to obtain further details about some situation in your area. For example, we might ask you to investigate a lynching or a prevented lynching, a local health situation, or a progressive community project.

3. Help us make public opinion polls. We hope to develop a system of making reliable surveys of public opinion by sampling.

4. Send us clippings from local papers -- news stories, editorials, letters to the editor relating to the South and Southern problems. We have a clipping service, but it does not give us a complete coverage.

5. Help us to find persons who would make good members of the Council or who might contribute substantially to the financial support of the Council.

6. Stimulate the organization of a local Interracial Committee or Council of Human Relations. If such an organization already exists, try to put new life into it.

7. Make it your task to "educate" one or more public officials or other influential persons to a better understanding of the Negro and of the social, economic, and political issues confronting the South.

8. Write brief articles for SOUTHERN FRONTIER, the Council's monthly paper, and help us to find other contributors to the FRONTIER.

9. Enlist in our Speakers' Bureau. We get many more invitations to speak than our staff and budget can accommodate. It will greatly facilitate our work if we can call upon Fellows to speak in their local areas in so far as their time permits. We will supply literature, exhibit material, film strips, etc., on various subjects.

10. Advise us freely on what the Council might do to improve its program and strategy.

Naturally no one is expected to do all of these things, but we hope that from this list you will select one or more types of activities which you pledge yourself to carry on to the best of your ability.

Direction and Supervision of Fellows

The Council's Committee on Fellows selects the Fellows and decides upon matters of general policy affecting them. The personnel of the Committee is as follows: President Goodrich C. White, Emory University, and Dr. Forrester B. Washington, Atlanta University School of Social Work, Co-Chairmen; George S. Mitchell, Atlanta; Dean T. S. Staples, Conway, Arkansas; James T. Taylor, Durham, North Carolina; Clark Foreman, Black Mountain, North Carolina; and President Horace Mann Bond, Fort Valley, Georgia. However, the Executive Directors of the Council will be in direct charge of the activities of the Fellows, and all routine correspondence by Fellows should be addressed to Guy B. Johnson, Executive Director, or Ira De A. Reid, Associate Executive Director, Room 432, 63 Auburn Avenue, N. E., Atlanta, Georgia. We hope eventually to have a staff member who can devote a good part of his time to work with Fellows.

As the work of the Fellows develops, we want to issue a regular mimeographed bulletin which will serve as a clearing-house for ideas and activities of Fellows. Furthermore, we plan to hold an annual conference of Fellows as soon as our budget permits. Although the Council's budget at present does not permit the payment of regular stipends to Fellows, it will reimburse Fellows for expenses incurred in connection with specific assignments done at our request.

Memo . . . FROM THE DESK OF
GEORGE S. MITCHELL

1/28

Margaret:

All of these Fellows have been written to, so you may keep the folders, or put them in the files, whichever you are going to do.

Good idea to check their addresses as they respond. No doubt you are doing so already. Note change of address of Mr. Koeninger, attached.

Would you please make a note of the Fellows Dr. Mitchell has promised to send the home-town survey manual to (there are several in the ones I have just written) and follow up when the manual is ready?

Skal!

Studies and Education
University of Tennessee
Knoxville, Tennessee

Dear John:

Thanks for your letter of January 10. It is, of course, a great disappointment to us that you feel that you can not be one of our Honorary Fellows. However, I know that you are exceedingly busy, and I can quite understand why you hesitate to take on a responsibility to which you might not be able to do justice. We shall certainly give you a "rain-check" in the hope that later on you may be able to accept appointment.

All good wishes to you and Miss Lou.

Cordially yours,

Dear Guy:

I have delayed in answering your letter of December 27, hoping that the past two weeks would give me more definite information regarding my responsibilities for the next year. The situation has clarified somewhat; it looks as though our program will be continued on a more intensive basis during the coming year.

In view of my heavy schedule for the next eighteen months, I am afraid that I could not make the active contribution to your program which you would hope each of your Fellows might make. And, since I note that you will restrict the honorary fellowships to one hundred individuals, I assume that you want each person accepting your invitation to feel that he could make a contribution worthy of the honor bestowed upon him by his election as an Honorary Fellow. I hope that you will not take this as a refusal but rather as a request for a "rain check." This will allow you to offer the fellowship to someone else and perhaps consider me for appointment sometime in the future.

It goes without saying that I appreciate very greatly the honor of being elected to Honorary Fellowship in the Southern Regional Council, Inc. From a study of the materials attached to your recent letter, it seems to me that the idea of having a group of interested and active Council associates, such as the Honorary Fellows would provide, will go far toward augmenting the work of your staff and toward giving you throughout the region local contacts not otherwise easily obtainable.

I am sure you have thought of this already; but it occurs to me that, as you develop your program for the direction and supervision of the Fellows, you may want to consider using an administrative principle which will provide for maximum participation of the Fellows, through some type of advisory relationship, in reviewing proposed policies before final adoption by the Council's Board of Directors. If this principle were developed, the procedure for implementing it might serve as an excellent educational technique which would give the Fellows greater interest in the program and motivation for action. It might be also that, unless this type of procedure were developed, some of the Fellows might find themselves faced with the problem of having endorsed policies and principles made by the Board of Directors which might be contrary to their personal views. I make this suggestion as a type of reaction called for in Item 10 on page 3 of your letter to Honorary Fellows of the Southern Regional Council, Incorporated.

Although I feel at this time that it is impossible for me to accept your kind invitation, you may be sure that I have a very deep interest in the program of the Council and in its basic objectives; also, you may be sure that, as in the past, whenever possible I will take every opportunity to make some concrete contribution toward the attainment of your objectives.

Best wishes.

Sincerely yours,

John

Mr. John D. Lane
Clemson College, South Carolina

Dear Lane:

I am terribly embarrassed over this long delay in replying to your good letter of January 6. I have been out on trips so much during the past month that I have had very little time to keep caught up with my office work.

I am sorry that you are having to cut down on your work and take care of the old physical apparatus. I think you are doing the sensible thing in declining outside responsibilities. I hope that at a later time you will be free to accept appointment as an honorary fellow of the Council.

Yes, I am rather amused by some of the honor rolls such as the one published by the Chicago Defender. I think that people ought to do something better than resigning from something or just raising a little hell in order to qualify for a real roll of honor.

With highest regards to you and years,

Cordially yours,

Dr.Guy B.Johnson
Executive Director
Southern Regional Council
Atlanta,Georgia

Dear Dr.Johnson:

My inexcusable delay in replying to your letter naming me as an Honorary Fellow has been due to influenza,Christmas,and lack of knowledge necessary to make proper reply.

During the past three months I have been taking a vacation from classroom duties at the recommendation of my physician. Until last week I had not received my final report before the second semester. It now appears that I am to resume my classroom duties but to decline outside activities. My teaching load is to be reduced to one-half the normal job for one more semester only. I had not had a vacation in five years. The authorities are going beyond the doctor's recommendations in an effort to rest me properly,and I feel that I must cooperate by declining to accept any outside responsibilities.

If I should be selected at some later date,I should be glad to serve. Thank you for the recognition.

I suppose you have seen the Chicago Defender's honor roll for 1945. I rather liked a former student's editorial in the Charlotte News, suggesting that Frank Graham and a number of Southerners in doing "less" did more. Harry Ashmore's point was that the Southerner labors under so much greater difficulty that his efforts, though not so dramatic or sensational as Frank Sinatra's, are more worthy of recognition. Among the articulate on the race question,I consider the Negro press and its results like unto the ignorant,intolerant white and his mouthings. I am beginning to be convinced that they both serve essentially the same purpose,though I defend their right to speak.

Kindest personal regards to Mrs.Johnson.

Sincerely, Jno D Lane

Clemson College, S. C.

Dear Mr. Lane:

It is my pleasure to inform you that you have been selected as an Honorary Fellow of the Southern Regional Council. The purpose of these Fellowships is to enlist the assistance of a selected group of Southerners who have shown exceptional talent for constructive leadership.

Fellows who are not Council members at the time of their election automatically become members and have all the rights and obligations of membership except that they are exempted from payment of dues. The enclosed material will, I trust, provide you with the information which you would like to have concerning the Southern Regional Council and the responsibilities and activities of Fellows. The Council cannot at present undertake to remunerate Fellows with regular stipends, but it may reimburse them for expenses incurred at our request.

I hope that you will accept election to Honorary Fellowship and that you will cooperate with the Council and with other Fellows in our common task of building a better South. Please fill in the sheet headed "How Fellows Can Serve the Council", and enclose it with your reply. I hope to hear from you soon.

Dear Sir:

Thank you for your letter of December 23, 1948.

I am deeply grateful for the honor you have bestowed upon me in electing me as a Fellow of the Southern Regional Council. Yours is a fine organization and I am in sympathy with your aims and principles.

I regret that I cannot accept the Fellowship at this time. Last Spring when Dr. Atwood of Kentucky State College asked me if I would be interested in becoming a Fellow, I told him I would be pleased and honored and would gladly accept if I were so elected. However, present circumstances, of an entirely personal nature, do not permit me to accept the Fellowship; I could not adequately fulfill the obligations of a Fellow at this time.

I hope that at some future date you might again consider me for this honor. I am deeply interested in improving race relations and in raising educational, economic, health and agricultural standards in Kentucky and all the South — for all citizens.

Again I wish to thank you and to express my regret that I am unable to accept the Fellowship at this time.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. Mitchell:

Your letter of December 23 regrettably became tangled in Christmas mail and has just reappeared. I am sorry it wasn't answered with the promptness it deserved.

The Council's set-up is well devised to spread its eyes and ears geographically and to make active those enrolled directly in the program. Such organization cannot fail to be effective in attaining its goals, particularly because "New South" and other Council materials I have seen bespeak the earnestness underlying the planning and conducting of the program.

I appreciate the consideration given by the Council to my nomination as an honorary fellow from Virginia, but I regret that I am unable to accept the appointment or to serve as a person must to be effective in the Council's activities.

On The News Leader we are deep in a busy period of change to which I must give considerable attention during and after working hours. Extra-curricular commitments too have increased since September to the point where more would mean becoming ineffective in all. I can't in fairness risk reaching that point, and so I must decline to become active in Council activities.

Thank you and Mr. Williams, who I assume is responsible, for the opportunity outlined in your letter.

Sincerely,

John E. Leard

Dear Mr. Mitchell:

This is to thank you for your kind letters (one of them concerning our brief notice of your organization in ST. AUGUSTINE'S MESSENGER) and for the proffered honorary Fellowship in the Southern Regional Council. I am unreservedly interested in the work which you are doing, and I deeply appreciate the honor offered me.

However, since my present position would prevent me from obligating myself to work formally in any one of the eight fields you suggest, I feel that I must regretfully decline acceptance of the Fellowship. Besides being (in name at least) Editor-in-Chief of the MESSENGER, I have recently been appointed vice-rector of St. Augustine's Seminary -- and this, together with the many duties I have as full-time teacher here at the Seminary (not to speak of my regular priestly duties), serves to keep me on the campus almost all of the time.

But you may be interested to hear that I did find time on January 10th to give a talk on interracial justice to a group of about 200 white students, delegates from seven high schools along the Mississippi Gulf Coast. The youth of Mississippi are definitely becoming interested in this question. And Governor Wright's announced intention of appointing an interracial committee to study educational inequalities will serve to focus the attention of yet more Mississippians upon the status of race relations in this state.

Asking God's blessing on the SRC and its great work, I am,

Sincerely yours in Christ,

Clarence J. Howard, S.V.D.

Dear Mrs. Bristol:

We are sorry not to have you as a Fellow. My own guess would be that you are overly impressed with the difference of background; that whole matter is just a little like people who all their lives feel shy about not having been to college. If you like this part of the world, you belong.

Howsomever, we will accept your judgment, of course.

I do hope you got the survey, and a circular or two about it. If you can help us find a Florida town that would like to do it, we would be appreciative.

I should have written to you before about the appointment as Honorary Fellow about which you wrote on March 11. As you know I have been interested in the Southern Regional Council for a long time and if it seemed advisable I would be delighted to accept this appointment. However, it is my considered opinion that I could not be of any real value to the Council in this capacity.

You may not know, but I am not a native Southerner, having been in the south only 11 years. I have enjoyed living here and feel really more at home than at any other place where I have lived. There has never been any real serious adjustment in my being accepted. However, every once in a while it becomes evident that in the community of Tallahassee here and there it is remembered that I am from without the region. In view of this, it is my honest belief that it would be better for you to invite someone else to serve in this capacity. I shall be very happy to make suggestions if you wish to invite someone else from this area.

Sincerely,

Dear Mrs. Rudd:

We are sorry not to have you as a Fellow, but shall appreciate your help from time to time.

Could we get you to become a member of the Council? It costs three dollars a year, but it does bring you all of our publications, including the monthly magazine New South.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell

Dear Mr. Mitchell:

I was indeed complimented to receive your letter of March 11th., in which you advised me that the Executive Committee of the Southern Regional Council has elected me as a Honorary Fellow of the Council.

It is with sincere regret that I must decline this honor. After careful thought I have determined that I can best serve the purpose to which your organization is dedicated without official connection. You have my interest and I would be pleased if you will include me on your mailing list.

I hope you will understand that I am appreciative of this honor and that my reply has been carefully weighed.

With sincere best wishes for a successful year ahead.

Miss Margaret G. Mayorga

My dear Miss Mayorga:

Since we are proposing also to permit our plays to be produced without a royalty, it is quite in line with our policy for you to print "Lawd, Does You Undahstan'?" in your anthology of one-act plays.

We have already had the play published since our correspondence with Samuel French & Company had come to a dead-end something like two months ago. The requests for the plays have been coming in so steadily and the time for the use of them approaching so closely, it was necessary that we have them printed by an independent printer.

Please forward the contract which you mention. The play belongs to the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching and not to the author.

Sincerely yours,

Jessie Daniel Ames.

September 19, 1936.

My dear Miss Ames,

Mr. Sheil of Samuel French and Co., New York, asked me to read your two plays because I am collecting new MSS for a one-act anthology. I should like to print LAWD, DOES YOU UNDAHSTAN' in my collection. We expect that the anthology will have wide distribution, for we are offering twenty plays free of royalty until 1940.

If it is agreeable to the author- and the MS I have does not state whether you or someone else is the author of the play- I shall ask Mr. Sheil to draw the contract and send it to you. There will be no charges.

This particular contract has nothing to do with the other play, COUNTRY SUNDAY, which I understand you are discussing with Mr. Sheil, and about which I expect you will hear from him soon.

Please let me know the author's name + address and whether I may have the pleasure of including LAWD, DOES YOU UNDAHSTAN' in my collection.

Sincerely yours,

Margaret G. Mayorga

Dear Sir:

If you will refer to the letter written Miss Mayorga, you will see that I told her that I had already had "Lawd, Does Yo' Undahstan'?" printed privately, and in a letter to you on the twelfth I told you that both these plays have been copyrighted. Will you please return the author's original of "Lawd, Does Yo' Undah stan'?"

I regret that the long delay in hearing from you necessitated our publishing the play ourselves.

Dear Miss Ames:

As per your recent correspondence with Miss Margaret G. Mayorga, we are sending you enclosed three copies of a form of agreement covering the play entitled LAWD, DOES YOU UNDAHSTAND? If you will kindly sign and return all three copies to this office, having your signature witnessed and notarized, we shall be pleased to execute same, and return you one copy for your files. Please be sure to initial the addenda at the bottom of the second page of these agreements.

Dear Miss Mayorga:

Mrs. Ames was in the office for a while yesterday and asked me to tell you that she hopes to find time within the next day or two to give further consideration to the contract sent her by Samuel French.

You may expect to hear from Mrs. Ames by the end of the week.

Very truly yours,

MARGARET G. MAYORGA ‹› 3 HILLSIDE AVENUE ‹› MANHASSET, NEW YORK

October 28, 1936.

Dear Mrs. Ames,

There seems to be a little misunderstanding about the matter of including LAWD, DOES YOU UNDAHSTAN' in the anthology. In your letter to me of September 21, you stated that it would be quite allright for me to include it and to forward the contract. I mentioned the fact to French that you had already had the plays privately printed; so they added an addenda to their regular contract form to this effect. They understand, of course, that the plays have already been copyrighted by you in the private collection, but this does not interfere with their further publication with your consent.

I know that publisher's contracts are always formidable things; I am always quite terrified myself when I sign one. But if there is anything about the contract you would like to have changed, it usually can be arranged. Please let me know, and I will do my best to adjust it.

I should like to include the play, I let another anti-lynching one pass because I liked this one better. My last anthology had a better than 20,000 circulation, and the authors included were all more than pleased.

I shall look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely yours,

Margaret G. Mayorga

Miss Margaret G. Mayorga
3 Hillside Avenue
Manhasset, New York

My dear Miss Mayorga:

You will just have to go ahead and think that I am either dumb or terribly suspicious. I will not deny the former, but I do deny the latter.

You see, this is the first time that I have ever seen a printed contract, but this is what I want to know and the thing that confuses me. French and Company did not reply to my inquiry about the plays until too late for us to let them do the publishing. You wrote and asked me if you could include "Lawd, Does Yo' Undahstan'?" in your anthology. I gathered that you were one of the readers to pass upon the plays.

When I said send on the contract, I judged that it was a contract that would give you official and legal permission to include the play in your anthology. I did not know that it involved a contract that signed over to French the entire printing and handling of the play. I am perfectly willing to sign a contract which will allow you to use the play in your anthology - I should like for you to use it. I am perfectly willing to sign a contract to French and Company for publication of the play, provided this contract does not interfere with the handling of the play from my end of the country.

So, it comes to this: Does this contract that French sent me prohibit or limit my power to have the play presented in the South? If it does not, could you have French send to me three copies of a second addenda to be pasted on as a rider to the contract?

If you will do this I think everything will run along smoothly.

Very truly yours,

Jessie Daniel Ames

Mrs. T. S. Richards
331 E. Tinsley Street
Griffin, Georgia

My dear Mrs. Richards:

Much of the value of "Lawd, Does Yo' Undahstan'?" will be lost if you present it and do not have a representative local white group present. We are so aware of the fact that the lynchers are white people that we try to expose as many of us as possible to educational processes against lynching, and we are inclined to be almost insistent in our desire to have white people present whenever either play is produced.

In almost every town of any size in the South we know some white people whom we could interest in attending a presentation of either play. If you will let us know at least two weeks ahead of time when you propose to put the play on, this will enable us to get in touch with key women of the State who will write to their local women about the play, urging them to attend.

I shall be interested in hearing from you further about the presentation of this play.

My dear Miss Gray:

I will take up with Mrs. Tilly immediately the matter of working up the attendance at the play "Lawd, Does Yo' Undahstan?", which you are presenting on the twelfth of December. I will supply her with enough of the reviews of the play so that their desire to attend will be heightened.

I am sorry that I am not going to be able to be there but, unfortunately for this enterprise, I was out of the office all last week and Christmas is around the corner and I must bring up my work, which will entail my being somewhat occupied over the weekend.

This play "Lawd, Does Yo' Undahstan'?" is to be printed in an anthology of one-act plays by Samuel French. This morning I had a letter from Miss Mayorga, the woman who has it in charge, asking for a list of the original cast. Since your presentation is the first one of which I have official notice, if you will send me immediately your cast of characters, their names will be included in this anthology of one-act plays, which will be published sometime early in the spring.

Again regretting that I cannot possibly be with you, I am

Miss Ann Seymour
Strawn, Texas

My dear Miss Seymour:

The six plays have already gone to you.

I think you will be interested in a copy of a letter which I received from Miss Mayorga, who is preparing an anthology of one-act plays and is including "Lawd, Does Yo' Undahstan'?" Samuel French had the two winning plays to consider and evidently their reader decided that your play offered an approach to the problem and a beauty in the manner with which it is dealt, far superior to the more stereotyped form of "Country Sunday".

You have our permission to use "Lawd, Does Yo' Undahstan?" in as many places and as often as you can. What we would like to keep a record of is the number of places it is produced and the approximate number of people who see it, particularly white people. Paine College in Augusta, Georgia, put the play on first. Paine is the Negro college which is the joint property of the Colored Methodist Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; and since that is what might be termed the original cast, it will be included in the anthology of one-act plays.

With cordial good wishes for a happy vacation, I am

A JOB FOR CHURCH WOMEN

I, as a church woman, am concerned that our Constitutional freedoms are not shared by all our people; my religion convinces me that they must be and gives me courage to study, work and lead others to the fulfillment of equal justice under law. I am willing to sit in the courts and to visit police and other law enforcement agencies to learn how law is administered in my community. I will work with others in times of tension to see that the rights of all are protected.

Church women all over the South are signing this pledge. They are banding themselves into a "Fellowship of the Concerned."

These women are not going to be content to sit around in glorified sewing circles —without the sewing—and talk about the serious inequalities in our courts and law enforcement which everybody knows still prevail in the South, lagging far behind public sentiment.

They are going to do something about it. They are going to find out what is going on in all the little courts in all the counties and all the cities of the South, and they are going to raise their voice in protest when wrong things are done.

They are going to express themselves publicly and openly and if that does no good they are going to go to work at election time and see what they can make happen then.

They are going to express themselves publicly and openly and if that does no good they are going to go to work at election time and see what they can make happen then.

They know that Negro citizens frequently suffer from the discrimination of law enforcement officers, judges, and even juries. They know also that the measure of justice to Whites is too often influenced by how much money they have. They know that too often poorly chosen, poorly paid and poorly trained law enforcement officers are brutal and contemptuous of that individual human dignity which is the common heritage of every American.

They are going to practice their religion by devoting time to informing themselves and others concretely about this problem.

This program, the potential impact of which is tremendous, putting into action the ideals of all religions and of the democratic spirit, is one of the many activities sponsored and spearheaded by the Southern Regional Council, an organization largely inspired by important people in the various churches to make a better and a happier Southland.

It came directly out of a meeting of 150 leaders of church women's groups in Atlanta last September. The meeting was called by the Council, the National Board of the YWCA and other organizations. Its "Fellowship of the Concerned" implies a union for action among people who care what happens to other people. It implies that there are thousands who see in their religion more than sitting stiffly in a pew on the Sabbath day under one's best bonnet.

Other activities of the Southern Regional Council, which has just concluded its annual meeting in Atlanta, include campaigns for the employment of Negro policemen, steady work for equal educational opportunities for all races, the fostering of self surveys in Southern towns, the encouraging of improved practices in the handling of racial news in Southern newspapers.

Women can find out more about the "Fellowship of the Concerned" and men and women can find out what they learn and do to satisfy their own consciences about things they know are wrong by writing the Southern Regional Council, 63 Auburn Ave., N. E., Atlanta 3, Ga. If they enclose $2 or more, they may become members of the Council, along with thousands of other forward-looking Southerners.—H. M. D.

We're in the path of change
And I must go to meet the change
Being unable to live unaltered.
--- Christopher Fry

THE CHALLENGES FACED:

I. The Supreme Court decision on segregated schools -- acceptance or evasion.
Efforts to evade: (a) constitutional amendments, legislation.
(b) Citizens' Councils and like organizations.

II. The "Child in the Midst" -- the fate and destiny of eleven million school children today and those that follow after.

III. Interpretation of the official stand of church bodies to the local member in the local church.

IV. Framework for action.

V. Finding the spiritual strength and power to be Firm in conviction, never afraid to speak,
Persuasive in conversation,
Patient and understanding with those who do not agree . . .
"Fervent in spirit serving the Lord"

FRAMEWORK FOR ACTION

TWO THINGS IMPORTANT -- I. Knowledge of the Facts
II. Interpretation of the Facts

I. KNOWLEDGE OF THE FACTS

A. Know what the Scriptures say about our relationship to our fellow man.
Knowledge and understanding of our own religious teachings on God and Man.
Know the stand taken by our own regional or national church body on the Supreme Court decision on segregated schools.
Knowledge of amendments to state constitutions (Ga., S.C., La., Miss.) and of bills passed and those introduced but not passed by State Legislatures.

B. Resource Materials --
From own denomination
From United Church Women
From Southern Regional Council -- "Christian Conscience and the Supreme Court Decision" as a guide to conscience, "Checklist" as a guide to community study, "Changing Patterns" for background information, "Answers for Action."
"Southern School News" (monthly paper, free), from Southern Education Reporting Service, P.O. Box 6156 Acklen Station, Nashville, Tennessee.
"Now is the Time" by Lillian Smith.

II. INTERPRETATION OF THE FACTS

From the discussion:

"It must be kept in mind that segregation is a national issue; this must be a basic part of our approach.

"Practices which exist in the South also exist in the rest of the nation, there is only a marked emphasis by law in the South. Housing segregation -- directly related to segregated schools -- is evident throughout the nation and is just as important elsewhere as it is in the South. . . . The South must feel that it is a part of the national scene and laws passed by Congress and rulings handed down by the Supreme Court are directed at the nation as a whole.

"Integration is taking place with greater speed in all parts of the country because of the ruling of the Supreme Court. Many phases of segregation are being studied not only in the South but all over the country; the South is a part of a wide national movement which ties in with the world scene."

"School boards are not yet ready to take any action until after the Supreme Court makes its final decrees. This makes it all the more important for the women's groups to make their voices heard now and help create the climate which will help to integrate the schools."

Suggestion from Dr. Hunt:

During this time of "creating the climate" for integration, strong arguing points would be -- "If public schools are abolished, what will happen to creditations...?, to property...?, to attendance laws...?, to teachers tenure...?, etc.

II. INTERPRETATION OF FACTS (continued)

A. Channels

a) Small neighborhood discussion groups might be a beginning.
b) People of both racial backgrounds working together on common community problems, such as schools, recreation, health, etc.
c) The local church and its groups might be a focus for initiating study groups or neighborhood groups bringing together people of different religious and racial backgrounds.
d) Use "READY-MADE" channels -- teachers' groups, PTA's, YWCA, United Church Women, League of Women Voters (resource materials could be obtained from each).

B. Sit in on meetings of school boards.

C. Work to get qualified Negroes elected to school boards.

D. Help the church face its own sins of discrimination and segregation.

E. Concerning the reaction against the official stand of church bodies, Dr. Hunt suggested that each woman's group might take a secret ballot on the official stand of their church body regarding integration. He felt that such a tabulation of opinion would show that there is sufficient backing for the church bodies' resolutions. He said that such polls could start with the women's groups and from there move on to fuller groups until the full local church had been polled. Then a conference might follow.

One of the group agreed this would be a good idea. People would not be embarrassed or afraid if a secret ballot were used; an individual would have time to think clearly by himself and would find, when the results are shown, that many others feel the same way and would not be afraid to express himself in public. The delegate agreed that such a sampling of opinion would show a substantial support for the positions which have been taken by the churches.

F. Other suggestions:

Officials must make a pledge to uphold the Constitution of the United States when they take public office. When such officials make statements not to follow the Supreme Court decision, this point can be used against them -- they are acting contrary to their pledge of allegiance

At a time when the law has been made clear, let it be heard in each community that any school which flies the flag of the United States cannot in good conscience maintain segregation.

G. Concerning "Loneliness":

Mr. Art Levin, Anti-Defamation League: "People feel very much alone as individuals and even in groups, and do not realize their strength because they have no communication with each other. If the lack of communication could be overcome, there would be solidarity and reinforcement in the knowledge that many, many people support desegregation."

G. Concerning "Loneliness" (continued)

Miss Stamats: "In reference to Mr. Levin's point on communication, I have received many letters from women who feel they stand alone on the question of integration. Do not be afraid to be among the first -- speak up and you will find that others feel the same way."

Miss Stevens: Referred to article in Saturday Evening Post regarding integration on the University of Virginia campus (Feb. 19, 1955). "Each woman must take the courage to stand up and be counted and she will find she is not alone. There is a need to come together as little groups in the churches and organizations, talk on matters relating to desegregation and integration in small home gatherings, encourage others, until a little nucleus is developed here and there, all building together into a larger group to show the ministers they have support. Bring together prayer groups with emphasis on desegregation."

Dr. Rembert Sisson, President of the Atlanta Christian Council: "We are all afraid of shadows which we only imagine."

H. THESE THINGS WE SAID WE WOULD DO AT ONCE -- From the slips signed by the delegates of the group as they left the conference:

(1) Set a Christian example of brotherliness. Be courteously vocal in making my stand known.
(2) Visit new Negro housing development in interest of furthering establishment of new church.
(3) As circle chairman, through literature and prayer will strive to change the prejudices of members.
(4) Will keep eyes and ears open for every expression on the part of others of like feeling.

A letter will go next week to approximately 50 women suggesting sources of information to use and a few specific things to do. These are the 16 states of our General Assembly. This will be an official responsibility.

Will send out letters to all District Secretaries of Christian Social Relations which will carry the program we wish started, asking them to begin in local societies to put program into action.

Will attend the inclusive groups already operating in my county. Will take at least one "new" person to each. Will pray for guidance for next steps.

Church women can sit in on the school boards with the same effect as was had on the courts. And if boards have nothing to hide, they will welcome it.

In our "Week of Prayer" for Home Missions (Baptist) the Negro is part of our concern and study. We will bring some of these findings there.

In my small community I can make a discussion group from my Ladies' Bible Class.

H. THESE THINGS WE SAID WE WOULD DO AT ONCE (continued)

Home conversations. Create "climate" of acceptance of integration. Entertain school teachers, discuss attitudes. Ask for reactions among high school pupils.

Talk with publisher of County Seat paper. Express appreciation for improved publicity on race. Will let personal stand be known on Supreme Court decision (this was done two weeks ago).

Next move will be personal conversation with the Negro High School principal and his wife on problems and how to meet them. Later I shall continue conversation with a liberal judge of our County and give him literature to read. He is well read but not too much on this.

Inform the women of my community on what they can do as individuals to create an atmosphere of hope and good will toward the definite goal of the Supreme Court decision on desegregation.

In December I had a group of twelve women (leaders in our Sunday school and women's church work) in my home for lunch. We agreed at that time we would let our pastor know that if Negroes came to our church, we would be happy to have them seated next to us so there would be no embarrassment for anyone.

We agreed that we would seek to get information and give it out to groups in which we participate as we have opportunity.

With this foundation, I already have a group to whom I can next week bring this valuable information given to us in this meeting.

Invite colored students to debate or to be part of program for PTA. Invite Negroes with college degrees to address PTA groups.

I am speaking to a group of Baptist women next week on our Negro Work at West End.

I will try to promote a small integrated group for discussion in my community.

Start "Study Cells" on state school laws of my state.

I expect to mail a letter immediately the first of the week enclosing a bulletin with information concerning this meeting and also enclosing a copy of Changing Patterns to each of Methodist Secretaries of Christian Social Relations.

Have already talked and made plans for a statewide workshop -- at least nine or ten -- using the channel of Florida United Church Women. Will expect to begin the groundwork for these workshops next week with the Conference Study and Action Committee.

Will try to get my district secretaries to become members of the North Carolina State Regional Council that they may have the actual information with which to lead on.

Next week I will redouble my efforts to move toward the statewide leadership forum, where we hope to pool opinion and resources, and which because of unity in strength just might change the social climate.

H. THESE THINGS WE SAID WE WOULD DO (Continued)

1. As Christian Social Relations Committee member of UCW -- emphasize value of UCW leading in given communities in discussion of problem and constructive action.
2. In my home community, get together a group (a) to study facts and (b) to interpret facts in community.
3. Mail letters to CRS chairmen sharing new courage and strength gained here.

Have a group of friends across racial lines to discuss with each other and help each other discover ways we can each be helpful in making it possible for children in the South to grow up in schools which allow them to study, think, and play together. Have such groups once a month.

Get a student group to see what we have discussed and start them thinking on what they can do. Get action, if possible.

Through an interracial International League for Peace and Freedom group see what we can do, not as ILPF, unless we can see it as a Peace movement, but to solicit members from this group to serve as nucleus for movement.

Next week in state meeting of Council of United Church Women, will
1. Advocate the beginning of small integrated discussion groups to study local conditions and study SRC materials.
2. Advocate attendance at school board meetings.
3. Try to promote understanding of people of like culture in both races.

Contact Human Relations Council and organize small integrated group.

Next week I hope to get out a letter to my Christian Social Relations Committee and State Board of U.C.W. and local presidents and CSR chairman reporting this meeting and giving them the challenge as best as I can.

I will contact my local chairman of CSR and discuss with her what can be done in my community.

I will attempt to get a meeting of the Florida Christian Social Relations Committee and outline the strategy and approach to meet the objective of this meeting.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

1. What is the Southern Regional Council? See leaflet attached.

2. Will the constitutional amendments passed by Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina and the laws passed by the legislatures of these states help keep school segregation?

Mr. Harold Fleming, Southern Regional Council: Georgia, South Carolina, Mississippi and Louisiana have passed laws and constitutional amendments which are supposed to keep school segregation despite the Supreme Court decision. In considering them, there are several points to keep in mind:

(1) There is little doubt that all of these measures will be knocked out by court action. Southern authorities on constitutional law have agreed that they will eventually be held unconstitutional. Of course, such legal action will take some time.

2. The sponsors of these measures must know that they will not stand up in court. But meanwhile they serve as a delaying action and also as "propaganda" devices.
3. The backers of these legal dodges claim that most Negroes and almost all white people are behind them. Yet it is significant that the segregation measures provide heavy penalties for local school authorities who voluntarily choose to comply with the court decision. Evidently the politicians fear the people.
4. We have been through this before. The same devices were used in an attempt to evade the court decisions opening the "white primaries" to Negro voters, and the Federal courts struck down every one.
5. The real danger is that our public schools and the education of our children will be seriously damaged before these drastic measures are ruled out by the courts.

3. We need to know something about the N.A.A.C.P.

Dr. George Mitchell, Southern Regional Council: The N.A.A.C.P. is legal, orderly, American, working dutifully for the enforcement of the constitution. It never has been attacked by any Congressional committee, by the United States or any state attorney general, not even by the attorney general of California or Georgia. All N.A.A.C.P.'s officers are impeccable, loyal, hard-working. America is lucky to have its most oppressed minority working through established, legal, democratic processes -- contrast this to the violence and revolutionary character of the demands of oppressed peoples in other countries. Law was originally the white man's game -- Negroes learned how to play it and have scored a point on the basis of established law -- now the white man in the South wants to change it and play by new rules. We should welcome vigorous, aggressive N.A.A.C.P. leadership at the community level -- this type of leadership is beneficial; the vigorous leaders truly represent their people and can be trusted, whereas the less progressive leaders may be making bargains that are both unwelcome and untenable in view of the demands of most of the Negro community.

Delegate: I suggest that church women carry on a campaign to educate the community about the work of N.A.A.C.P. There is a great deal of misunderstanding among otherwise intelligent and educated white people as to what N.A.A.C.P. is doing and how it works. We must learn the facts about it if we don't already know them; make people realize that N.A.A.C.P. has a just cause and that the legal problems it is concerned with are real. We must do a job of interpretation.

Miss Stevens: We must not only do a job of interpretation, but churches must rethink their whole philosophy toward social change. Our generation was brought up to think that the churches could educate toward change, but must not touch the law or get involved with litigation. Churches must now recognize the fact that lawsuits and court action are an effective way of instituting social change. Passing laws is another, but this is slower. The churches must not only re-interpret the legal approach to social change, but must also undergird the processes set in motion by N.A.A.C.P. and others who initiate social change through legal action.

Dr. Calhoun --

Church groups for the most part have spoken against the evil of enforced segregation of the races. The teaching of the Bible makes it clear that God, the Creator of mankind, is no respecter of persons. His good purpose for all people is demonstrated in His work of Creation, in his Providence, in His Redemption, and in His Judgment. Our nation under God has been founded upon principles inherited from our forefathers in the Judeo-Christian faith. In the Declaration of Independence it is declared that man is endowed with certain "unalienable rights," including "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

No doubt there are times when some of us feel that we are too few and too frail to cope with the difficult problems involved. We must not forget, however, that our strength is in God and "If God be for us, who can be against us?" Centuries ago an effort was made to destroy Christianity because of the new way of life which interfered with custom and tradition. When members of the Council thought to pronounce sentence against certain Christians, Gamaliel, a teacher of the law, made the following statement which should be remembered by Christian believers as they confront difficulties and hardships: "Keep away from these men and let them alone for if this plan or this undertaking is of men it will fail; but if it is of God, you will not be able to overthrow them. You might even be found opposing God!" (Acts 5:38,39) Let us be grateful for the privilege of sharing in an undertaking which we believe has been initiated by the Spirit of Almighty God working within our hearts and minds.

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

toward the South of the future

Southern Regional Council, Inc.

63 AUBURN AVENUE, N. E. • ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

An organization of Southerners of both races working together in the interest of all the people of the South.

how it began

As the successor of the Southwide Commission on Interracial Cooperation, the Southern Regional Council goes back, in friendship and reputation, to 1919. A group of leading Southerners representing both races, many occupations, all faiths and denominations, met in 1943 to discuss the problems and promise of the region. They decided that a strong new regional organization was needed, in which Southerners themselves could join together in a cooperative effort to solve their common problems. The result was the Southern Regional Council.

• Through a regional office in Atlanta, which services state organizations and carries on Southwide activities under the direction of its membership and executive committe. Its officers and members are drawn from church leaders of many denominations, businessmen, educators, labor leaders, outstanding men and women in the professions.

• Through affiliated organizations in 12 Southern States, each of which has its own membership, governing board, officers, and staff. Within the coming months, these state organizations will provide each Southern State with a full-time human relations service, available to both public officials and private citizens, maintained and directed by local leadership. The states included are Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia.

The Southern Regional Council and affiliated state organizations are non-profit, non-political and non-denominational.

what it does

• Through careful study, collects the facts about our region's health, housing, education, law enforcement, and other public services. Makes the facts and their significance widely available through pamphlets, newspapers, radio, television, and speakers.

• Publishes a monthly bulletin—New South—which provides editors, students, and public-minded citizens with timely, authentic information on developments in the region.

• Assists state organizations in planning and carrying out programs suited to local need.

• Advises private and official agencies through both the regional office and state organizations.

• Through state staff, works in the community with civic clubs, church groups, labor organizations, and others to find democratic solutions to local problems.

what you can do

The Southern Regional Council is based firmly on the belief that the problems of the Southern Region may best be attacked by Southerners who are willing to admit the South's shortcomings and join together in a constructive effort to overcome them.

There is no room for narrow sectionalism in such a program. The Council welcomes support and understanding from all sincere individuals and organizations, wherever they may be found. However, general membership—which is available in the state organizations—is limited to persons living in the South.

Here is how you can play your part in this forward-looking effort:

• If you live in the South, join your state affiliate of the Southern Regional Council. This entitles you to receive NEW SOUTH and other publications of the regional office.

• If you live elsewhere, enroll as an Associate of the Southern Regional Council. This entitles you to receive all regular and special publications of the Council.

• If you prefer, you may become a non-member subscriber to NEW SOUTH.

Fill out and mail the application blank on the back of this page.

the South of the future

toward which our efforts are directed, is a South freed of stultifying inheritances from the past. It is a South where the measure of a man will be his ability, not his race; where a common citizenship will work in democratic understanding for the common good; where all who labor will be rewarded in proportion to their skill and achievement; where all can feel confident of personal safety and equality before the law; where there will exist no double standard in housing, health, education, or other public services; where segregation will be recognized as a cruel and needless penalty on the human spirit, and will no longer be imposed; where, above all, every individual will enjoy a full share of dignity and self-respect, in recognition of his creation in the image of God.

We're in the path of change
And I must go to meet the change
Being unable to live unaltered.
--- Christopher Fry

THE CHALLENGES FACED:

I. The Supreme Court decision on segregated schools -- acceptance or evasion.
Efforts to evade: (a) constitutional amendments, legislation
(b) Citizen's Councils and like organizations.

II. The "Child in the Midst" -- the fate and destiny of eleven million school children today and those that follow after.

III. Interpretation of the official stand of church bodies to the local member in the local church.

IV. Framework for action.

V. Finding the spiritual strength and power to be Firm in conviction, never afraid to speak,
Persuasive in conversation,
Patient and understanding with those who do not agree...
"Fervent in spirit serving the Lord"

Mrs. M. E. Tilly

"The Fellowship of the Concerned" has just been Church Women of South meeting whenever crises in the section or nation need to be faced. We've met under different circumstances through the years - and now our concern is the Supreme Court decision on schools and our task as God's women to be interpreters and "shock- absorbers" to a disturbed South.

Some things we should remember:

(1) The Supreme Court could make no other decision.

(2) The effect on law and order of the defiance and attempted evasion of the decision of our highest tribunal by our legislatures - our law making bodies;are any of us safe if our law makers can destroy law ? I stood and saw the auguration of a governor and him swear allegiance to the Constitution of the U.S. and then him say: "As long as I am governor, there will be segregation of the races in the schools of this state."

(3) Study what your denomination has said on the subject.

(4) The child in our midst - the twelve million children, Negro and white - who will be victims or victors of the change in proportion of how well they will be prepared for this new adventure in brotherhood.

(5) Think what you would in this situation if you were not afraid of what what you would say.

A CITIZEN'S RESPONSIBILITY TO HIS GOVERNMENT

Mrs. Venice Spraggs, Washington, D.C.
Member, Democratic National Committee

We have committed our sons, husbands, sweethearts to the battlefields for our democracy which has been challenged because we believe in the rights of citizens to run themselves under the law. It is this refusal upon the part of certain leadership in our community to try to find methods to circumvent the law which should be of great concern to us today. How can we maintain our leadership in the world when men of law at some time or other make laws that are in direct conflict with the constitution of the United States. The highest court in the United States has said separation of children is illegal. We who are law abiding citizens who support those officials of government are as guilty of violating the democracy which we believe in as the individuals who initiate the things we have seen happening today. The Court has acted. We have pledged to uphold the court. This has happened in instances where citizens have given support to the fellow who upholds the law. In Western Europe, families because of their religious beliefs, are persecuted and killed. We cannot separate our welfare from any other place in the world. Whatever happens soon happens to all of us. These things soon get to be a real problem. In Florida, a Negro's home was bombed. Many of the good citizens may have talked about it and thought how terrible it was, but little else was done. Then, they began to bomb the Jewish Synagogues and the Catholic churches and businesses. It was only after it had passed the state of race that they began to really think about it and decided to try to find out who was doing it, and do something about it.

One of my chief concerns is the business of the so called peace and resistance groups that have risen in several states. It doesn't matter very much who the members of these groups are or where they branch out from, the whole truth of the matter is that their goal is that of circumvention, that of making up their own minds for the community as to what the law should be in that community. We have worked successfully in the South to do away with certain hate groups, but if we are not careful there will arise other hate groups under the name of piety to do more harm in our community.

In Mississippi these groups have started off as peaceful groups. In JET there is the article on a Negro minister in Mississippi who has been killed because he refused to take his name off voting list and encouraged others to keep their names on the list. This man was tracked down by two white men and a Negro informer. This man was killed and the so called law enforcement in the community said he had a car accident. His car was supposed to have turned over the embankment although competent people said there were bullet holes and gunpowder. Some of the people tried to get long distance calls through and the long distance operators refused to put th their calls through.

In Jackson a Negro grocer's shelves are bare because wholesalers refuse to sel him the goods. We of the minority group realize that it does require a great deal of courage to face the possibility of economic disaster. We are being trained to obtain rights in the community that we are entitled to. We are like the small voice calling in the wilderness when we stay within our own community. We must quietly assert ourselves and try to help otherpeople to believe and stand with us. When the war broke out we needed every possible hand because as a peace loving nation we had not spent money preparing for war. Because of our separated democracy, we didn't have trained hands.

In the South 75% of the Negroes did not have competency to go in defense plants of the nation to build things that were necessary to build military might that would be respected by other nations. We have to learn to talk in terms of basic principles in our communities rather than in terms of differences in people. NAACP reported last year that in 500 communities some 250,000 young people, white and colored, who had been required to attend segregated schools are now to integrate their schools. The first thing that comes to mind is that the Negro teachers are go ng to lose their jobs. On the basis of the NAACP survey, this has not been true. 45 Negro teachers have been replaced. If a Negro teacher is qualified to teach one child, then she can teach all children. Immediately as I saw these figures and the list of states I wanted to look at the relationship between states in which there had been volunteer compliance as to the percentage of Negroes that had qualified to vote. There is a very real relationship. It means that they have acted as responsible citizens in their communities through preparing themselves for the election of men and women to office who believe the constitution means exactly what the United States Supreme Court states it means. That gave courage to people who are basicly good in heart but are afraid to lose face. They said we are ready to support you in office if you have the courage to act on what is right or put you out of office if you cannot stand for what is right.

Members of your organizations and citizens of your communities should (1) hold officials responsible to carry out dutiesof office that give us our rights; (2) we, who believe in our principles, should not allow dirty politicians in our government. When we accept government as dirty politics, we have admitted our own irresponsibility as bad citizens. We, who have the experience and ability, should seek public office. Louisiana hascommitted itseld to unyielding resistance to the Supreme Court Decision. We should first acquaint ourselves with all the figures, then study them and talk with each other, and come up with a platform of action; and once we have done so we should act accordingly. Then we will achieve without violence and bloodshed in our communities our rights as citizens of the United States. In Shreveport a survey was made of 60 students. They were asked if they planned to stay in Louisiana. Only one little girl said she would stay. Most students will not continue to be driven like cattle in this community by other people. These young people will not put up with the kind of thing that has been maintained in most of our southern communities by those people who have a vested interest in segregation. Many northern capitalist leaders have a hand in this resistance of the Supreme Court Decision. They are able to get cheap labor down in the South. We are all one under God. We should not be deprived of any of the opportunities under the law that are denied us because of our race, religion or national origin.

ARKANSAS' EXPERIENCE WITH INTEGRATED SCHOOLS

Mrs. E. N. Sparling, Hot Springs, Arkansas
Vice-President, National Y.W.C.A.
Formerly Member, Arkansas Board of Education

The Arkansas state board of education divided the school districts into certain sections and then had a representative from each department for a meeting of the boards of both white and Negro schools to talk over this situation. This was the first time that the two races had been together and talked over a common problem.

Arkansas' first step towards anything of accepting Negroes into the white schools was in 1947 when the Board of Trustees of the University of Arkansas stated that any eligible candidate will be admitted to the school for any study that could not be gotten at the state supported school. Since that time there have been numerous students there. In Fayetteville they have integrated on the high school level. There were no major incidents. They have been accepted. The elementary schools in Fayetteville have not been integrated at request of Negro parents. The school is located in their community and they have formed a community center around it and would like it to continue. In Charleston they have very quietly and without any fanfare integrated a group of 11 into that high school. There have been no incidents In Sheridan, after the directory of May 21, the board voted to accept a small number of students for the September term. The day after that this was resinded by a mass meeting of about 500 parents and so these pupils are sent to a neighboring county, cost $4000 for tuition, $4000 for board to transfer these students. This is a problem that the Council of Church Women can work on in Sheridan.

Little Rock is going to continue under its present 2 school system until further direction from the Supreme Court. They say they will conform with whatever the Supreme Court says. I think they will go into integration fully. In no way are they trying to circumvent the decision of the Supreme Court. The Governor says that is the law of the land, Arkansas has always operated under the law of the land. The graduate school of Arkansas located at Little Rock has been on a non-segregated basis. The state department of education is planning a series of sessions together with the Negro and the white school people for fall meetings. They are on equalization and they feel that it is a better basis of understanding where Arkansas can move forward. We can see more integration in 1955 and 1956. In Southern and eastern Arkansas it will perhaps take a good while. On June 22 of last year there were 275 Negro churchmen and religious Negroes met and voted financial support of NAACP for immediate implementation of the Supreme Court Decision. Maybe we could not do it in certain areas immediately but if there was a correct approach it would come. The Arkansas Teachers Association, which is the Negro teachers' association, made this statement:

"The pattern of desegregation is still a legal question which should be left to the courts but the problems involved in desegregation is local and peculiar to each district. When the citizens unite for these common problems satisfactory result will come." The ChristianChruch in a vote meeting made this statement, "No person has the right to deny the admittance of another person to the house of God. We cannot separate integration in education from integration in the churches." Rev. Mitchell of Little Rock said we should meet this segregation issue squarely. We have done very well up to this point. Some districts get as high as 90 percent of the money from the state funds for the support of the schools in their district -- white and Negro-- but after the money is allocated to the district the state department does not have anything to say about how they use it. We have come through the year in a very acreditable fashion since we are one of the southern states. I think before the next assembly meets in two years we all will be very busily about our Father's work.

I think the church people of Arkansas are going to attack this problem and work in every way to give people the chance to work with people of another race. I am a great believerof the responsibility of women on these issues. We have a great feeling for what happens to other people. We have a little more freedom to think and study. I know there are a group of church women in Arkansas who want to attack the problem there. Fayetteville had been conditioned to integrate schools because they are used to seeing Negro students up at the University. I think that would be a good point of departure here in Louisiana. It is not only the percentage of Negro population but also the education that is going to have a lot to do with it. In eastern Arkansas the counties are very much smaller than that would be in Little Rock and I think thatLittle Rock could be integrated because of the educational stands. About the church relationship schools have in Arkansas--they have not kept step with the state supported schools and I inquired from various people if there was any church related school admitting Negroes. In answer, I don't think they are admitting Negroes.

SUGGESTIONS FROM GROUP

1. Here in New Orleans we do have a peculiar situation. The percentage of children in the school in elementary schools is about 50-50. On this basis the groups will comingle at the same percentage. One of the first things is for the people to become informed and write to the school board to get a report on the school system. One of the ideas was that some efforts should be made to do away with segregation on busses, transportation and restaurants and hotels. If these things could be accomplished first, then the integration in the schools should follow. People could get together to find out what is going on in other parts of the country. If integration is atarted, I think it should be started in lower school level.

2. Before we admit defeat we should learn what has been done. We should have more meetings such as this interracial and interfaith so that information may be passed on. Other orgaizations should be urged to include a study of this kind in their existing programs.

3. In church organizations we should welcome Negroes to our meetings. A better understanding will be reached. The school teachers can have joint meetings at times and discuss problems of integration. Set up an interracial committee to discuss integration; also in recreation. Encourage Negroes to register in great numbers. We will therefore have more voters.

4. We can have church picnics and joint meetings for recreation. Each needs to consider starting in the home with our children. They must be taught that we are all God's children. We need some way of getting acquainted with children of other races now so that when they go to school together they will not feel so strange. The one thing that we need to learn is that there is one race under God and every man can be reached from God and this should be said from the pulpits.

5. Need nore groups to discuss this kind of meeting; needs to publicize so that Negro and white churches can get together for the purpose of discussion. Needs to be more small group discussions with people of varying experiences. Get people to say what they are afraid of in this situation. We need to relieve our fears and take action. Get together on activities other than race relations. If you can work on something other than race relations you can bring more agreement and understanding.

We have got to live everyday what we believe. We should let the government and the legislators know how we feel about it.

We should have meetings in places where everyone can go and let people know that they can go there.

Lets start integration at the kindergarten level.

Some of the Negro churches could invite the white to come into their services to see what they are doing.

I do think the time has come when Methodist women should meet together.

The churches are supposed to be open so let him go to church where ever he wants to go to church.

In seeking around for ways to find things to do to implement these problems, we should like to invite you to become members of the Louisiana Council on Human Relations. We can help you to use a lot of talents and interest you may have.

I think that we should feel that the fact that this group has come together and have been able to get the value by coming together -- has made this meeting a success.

FELLOWSHIP HOUSE - AN APPROACH IN HUMAN RELATIONS

November 1955

Introduction

This paper is designed to offer a description and analysis of one approach and program in human relations within the total community framework which has been developed over the last 25 years in several communities. "Human Relations" is becoming a field that is increasingly recognized and important in this country. It is now attracting attention of social science research as well as of community leadership, management and labor, educational and religious groups and national and international leaders. Considerable research has already been conducted, especially in the areas of causes of prejudice and the effects of certain types of controlled experiments, mostly with student groups and in industry. A few social scientists have begun exploratory inquiries and analyses of programs attempting to combat prejudice and discrimination on a broader scale, but to date their analyses have necessarily been limited due to the lack of written data and evaluative studies of the variety of programs now in existence.

Although this paper will analyze Fellowship House in terms of organizational structure, content and function, it may be more realistic to consider this approach as a "movement", rather than as another human relations agency, for while the approach has been cultivated and developed as far as I know most clearly and intensively by Fellowship House, most of the principles and practices are being used increasingly by all kinds of other groups and individuals both in this country and elsewhere in the world.

The data and analyses herewith presented are based on the following:

1. A survey of the 13 Fellowship Houses conducted in the spring of 1955 under the auspices of the Fellowship Houses Development Committee in Philadelphia - a committee consisting of several Board and staff members from the Philadelphia Fellowship House together with consultants from the Philadelphia area.

2. Personal experience of the writer with 2 Fellowships: 1 year as a volunteer staff worker with the Washington Fellowship; 3 years as Director of the Kansas City Fellowship House.

3. Intermittent visits and consultations with Philadelphia and other Fellowships before and after the Survey.

The survey method consisted of 1) a survey questionnaire given to the staff or volunteer person most qualified to know factual data concerning the organization; 2) interview given to several key persons in the group; 3) informal discussion with other members and interested community leaders; and 4) as much participant-observation as possible.

Purpose and Approach

The main purpose of Fellowship House has been conceived and expressed in a number of different ways. Perhaps the simplest way of putting it is to say that the main object is not to change civil rights per se, but rather to change peoples' lives. The idea is that given opportunity, direction and training, people can do positive work whoever and wherever they are - each person can make a difference.

Fellowship House has been offering a unique experience and opportunity in the community. To point up the difference between Fellowship and other groups with similar goals, the following definition of Fellowship House is suggested: Fellowship Houses (or groups) are specifically set up to offer on a year round basis to the total community opportunities for all kinds of people to meet and learn to know one another on an equal basis, and to work together on projects aimed at building a community of peace and understanding. To clarify the relationship between this and other groups, one could point out that most organizations interested in promoting intergroup and interpersonal relations tend to fall into one or more of the following categories:

1. Community or neighborhood centers having an orientation in one or another religious, racial, socio-economic, age, sex or geographical area - rather than being for members of all such groups. For example, the YWCA, where completely integrated racially, still has a Christian, female and primarily adult orientation, though its activities may include Jewish and male participation and occasional children's activities. The Jewish and Catholic community centers represent Jewish and Catholic orientations; settlement houses are oriented toward a particular neighborhood and socio-economic group; International houses and institutes are primarily for foreign students and visitors, or to aid immigrant groups.

2. Agencies dealing primarily with specific problem areas - such as housing or employment, for instance the Urban League; or legislative action in the case of the NAACP (in addition to being oriented primarily toward Negro-white relations).

3. Such agencies as Community Relations Councils, National Conference of Christians and Jews, Civil Liberties Union, anti-discrimination committees, and city Human Relations Commissions, which offer a wide variety of techniques - films, workshops, literature and mass media approaches, as well as working on specific tension areas. These differ from the Fellowship idea in that they emphasize either mass media or conference-type programs, or work with other city officials on individual incidents, rather than the continuing year in and year out programs of face to face contacts and personal growth and involvement offered by Fellowship House.

There appear to be no other groups than Fellowship House which combine the ideas of being: 1) a center and groupwork agency for the total community open to all equally; 2) a laboratory for developing techniques to intensify and spread the fellowship experience and idea and to equip the average individual to make a difference wherever he is; and 3) an organization which offers and emphasizes personal, face-to-face experience as the primary basis for developing positive intergroup attitudes.

It should be further pointed out that Fellowship House emphasizes the positive approach in its philosophy and program. This means that the program emphasizes planting seeds in peoples' minds, encouraging right attitudes and behaviour wherever tendencies in that direction are found, dramatizing and selling the idea in as many different ways and to as many different groups as possible, and above all, starting with oneself - practising what one preaches - demonstrating continually by one's own approach and behavior, and through the Fellowship group's approach and behavior, that the Fellowship experience and idea is sound, rewarding, and works. Thus while many other groups expend considerable energy and effort in a more negative form of action - protests, denunciations, and other expressions of disapproval of discriminatory actions in the community, Fellowship House, at least in theory, takes its stand by making positive affirmative statements wherever there is an opportunity and tries to suggest, encourage or persuade right action rather than deploring wrong action.

In Philadelphia, at least, the approach of Fellowship House is conceived as having a definite religious motivation or orientation. The religious aspect is not denominational or particularized in any form, although one might say it is to a large extent oriented in the Judeo-Christian tradition, but rather it is an overwhelming conviction upon the part of many of the leaders that Fellowship has to be an inner thing before it is an outer thing - and this concept colors everything done by Fellowship House. Problems arise because of differences in religious viewpoint, but there is a common respect for one another, and the primary technique used - silence - is one that is universally accepted as meaningful and useful.

Program

The variety and range of programs conducted to further the aims of Fellowship House are great. The Philadelphia House - being the oldest, largest and most fully developed - has a vast network of projects reaching into many areas of community living; the potential programming for all the Fellowships is practically unlimited. The programs most commonly and successfully developed may be classified roughly into the following broad areas:

1. Programs oriented primarily toward adult members' personal experience and growth.

   Examples:

   Membership dinners and meetings - where members meet old friends and make new friends; where folks learn, discuss and exchange ideas together.

   Programs rooted in the spiritual bases of Fellowship - some Houses have interfaith community services or informal seminars. Many feel that the roots of any movement that seeks to overcome prejudice must be very deep. Fellowshippers, Protestant, Catholic, Jew and those with no religious affiliation, find their faith strengthened in Religious Fellowship - not a new religion, not a watering down of old religions, but a seeking and sharing together of deeper levels of thinking and feeling about fellowship.

   Work Camps - weekends of working, discussing and living together - and of sharing in helping needy folks in the community.

   Day Conferences and Weekend or Week-long Workshops - for staff, community groups, students, families etc.

2. Programs primarily designed to offer training in human relations theory (and practice).

   Examples:

   Forums, workshops, orientation courses. In Philadelphia there are 10 sessions of a "Units for Unity" series. Graduates of this course are better equipped with practical skills for working in incidents or tension situations. Some go back to churches, synagogues, clubs and schools. Others stay in the House and enlist for active service in other Fellowship projects or for advanced study.

Socio-drama Workshops - "Incident Control" - where students learn through role-playing and discussion some principles and techniques of handling situations where bigoted remarks are made.

In-service training for teachers - a formal program of accredited courses for public school teachers in the Philadelphia area.

3. Programs taken out to the community

Examples:

Choral presentations - most Fellowships have their own Choirs which offer musical programs together with a Fellowship experience. In Philadelphia, the 100-voice Choir has also produced a joint concert with 25 choirs from all over the city called "Singing City". In addition, a group from the Choir makes tours in the South and Middle West presenting the choral-drama "The Unborn Child" to audiences in communities in those areas.

The Fellowship Doll Program - developed in many cities - takes portrait dolls to children's groups all over the city to tell the life story of the great men and women of many races and cultures represented by the dolls.

Speakers Bureau - offering panels, trios, solo speakers or other types of presentation of the Fellowship story - bringing to groups all over the community a feeling for what is happening to people in their own city.

ARROW PROGRAM - an all day pageant of presentations and child participation telling the Fellowship story to the children in the Philadelphia elementary schools.

Other techniques - a variety of demonstration programs using films, flannel boards, chalk talks, home festival, Incident Control or Rumor Clinic demonstrations etc.

4. Social Action

Examples:

Testing of practices in local restaurants, theatres and other places of public accommodation.

Demonstration - Fellowship groups participating in community life as a public witness to the Fellowship ideals.

Other action - neighborhood projects, testifying, petitioning, representation at conferences, interviews, official letters, distribution of literature, cooperative work with other agencies etc.

5. Programs for Youth

Examples:

Young adult groups
High school Fellowship
Children's programs
Day camps or day nurseries

6. Miscellaneous cultural, social and/or fundraising programs

Examples: recitals, exhibitions, festivals, Parandas, pilgrimmages, celebrating feast days, speakers on cultural subjects, bazaars, fairs, block parties.

Running through all of these programs is a thread of social enjoyment and personal enrichment through the numerous contacts and deepening friendships with many kinds of people. For active members there is a continual process of learning to work together better - a process of gaining new insights and sensitivities - through the day to day experience and through joint participation in Fellowship programs. Thus all programs have an educational function for the participant along with the other functions of the program.

Two other aspects of program should be mentioned: 1) although the membership at large is drawn from all over the greater metropolitan area, and participants come from even further afield, including foreign countries, yet there is also a certain amount of work done in the immediate neighborhood, at least by the Philadelphia Fellowship House. The success of this work is demonstrated by the kinds of cooperation offered by the neighbors as well as the growth of their interest and concern; 2) Another aspect of program is an increasing interest in working with whole families as well as with individuals.

Another outgrowth of the Fellowship program in Philadelphia is the "Pottstown Plan" developed in Pottstown, Pennsylvania, by local citizens in consultation with Fellowship House staff. This plan is designed for small communities - to involve citizens in promoting better human relations in their community. The Plan is simple: it is for each business, each organization or institution to do one act each year to improve human relations in the community. This may be conducting an interracial event, or opening up previously segregated facilities or employment opportunities, or some other tangible expression of cooperation.

Taking the Fellowship program and approach in light of Allport's grouping of action programs as outlined in his book on Prejudice, one finds that Fellowship activities are primarily centered in his categories 1) contact and acquaintance (though with a less superficial aspect than he has implied since there is a core of persons with a year round friendship involved in each program); 2) informational - with a lot of emphasis on the project approach; and 3) formal education - developed most highly at Philadelphia. There is some work done along three other of Allport's lines: 1) group retraining - in the Incident Control workshop; 2) mass media; and 3) exhortation - in some of the speaking programs. There is practically no emphasis on the other three categories: 1) legal work - except in informing members and public concerning new developments and some social action done in cooperation with the legal-minded agencies; 2) research - which is an area that might well be developed; and 3) individual therapy - in the sense of being handled by psychiatrists or trained social workers. Of course, on an informal basis, the redirecting of attitudes and emotions of individuals is perhaps the greatest accomplishment of Fellowship work.

History

Philadelphia: The way in which the various Fellowship groups got started varies quite a bit from one community to another. The first group began in Philadelphia in 1931 when a group of young church people were called on by the Quakers to work on the problem of how to get everyday people together to build a community of "equal opportunities for all and peace among all racial groups". This group - the Young Peoples Interracial Fellowship - developed many programs in race relations, including testing civil rights in town. In 1938 when a wave of anti-semitism hit Philadelphia, the Fellowship group felt that they must tackle this too - and do it together with Jews. In 1941, the group with one part-time secretary and no funds, felt they had to open a door to all people in the community. They wanted to be in a conflict area so that their work, starting at their own doorstep, would be a practical demonstration. A bleak weathered building with no furnace was found, and Fellowship had no money for coal. But on a bitter January morning, dungareed debutantes and clerks, businessmen and day-laborers came. Armed with mops and brushes, they scrubbed and cleaned. Thus was launched the first Fellowship House with its members learning "from the ground up".

Other Fellowships: While the idea was originally developed among a group of Quakers in Philadelphia, it grew in various other groups elsewhere. In Kansas City it took hold in the local FOR group; in West Chester it was at an NAACP meeting; in Cincinnati the idea was developed by a group in the Woman's City Club. Some communities developed the idea as a result of contact with the Philadelphia Fellowship House; others began independently and learned of the Philadelphia experiment later. All together about 15 communities took up the Fellowship idea in one way or another, and to some extent patterned their programs after the Philadelphia House, drawing from time to time on its experience and resources.

The groups which in 1955 continued to carry on some form of Fellowship program and remain in contact with each other were:

On or near the Eastern seaboard: Brooklyn, N.Y.; Media, Reading, West Chester and Philadelphia, PA.; Baltimore, MD; and Washington, D.C.
In the South: Knoxville, Tenn.
In the Central states: Cincinnati and Columbus Ohio; Kansas City, Mo.

There were a few other groups that had the Fellowship idea in part, but varied in certain respects, and have now either petered out or are felt to be sufficiently different not to affiliate with the other Fellowship Houses. There are undoubtedly many like-minded informal groups throughout the country which either do not know of Fellowship House, or are not sufficiently organized to become an established Fellowship House, or else differ in some respect so that they would not qualify as a Fellowship group in the sense outlined in this paper.

The Fellowship groups listed above formed in 1950 a very loose Federation which consists mainly of 1) some exchange of news bulletins and other materials; 2) an annual meeting of delegates from the Houses for a week's conference at the Philadelphia Fellowship House Farm; 3) a relationship with the Philadelphia Fellowship through which the smaller houses may seek help of various kinds e.g. programming, seeking staff, advice on organization, fund-raising, policy etc. The document adopted at the 1950 conference expressed the relationship of the Houses and the criteria for becoming a member of the Federation as follows:

"Fellowship groups across the country are linked together by a strong bond-belief in the brotherhood of all people and dedication to the task of seeking out and increasing the forces that draw human beings one to another.

We wish this document to strengthen and to publicly declare this bond which in spirit already exists among us. At the same time we respect each other's autonomy, recognizing that this condition harbors one of the most important well-springs for fresh inspiration; so we consider this Federation to be the instrument of its autonomous members. We feel that it is good to "be joined together, to share experiences and information, to help each other when necessary, and to encourage other Fellowship groups to grow and to become a part of us.

THE FELLOWSHIP YARDSTICK

We agree from common experience that a group having the following characteristics is a Fellowship House, though it may not yet have a house nor use this name as its title:

1. Fellowship works toward the following goals:

   a. The stimulation of personal growth for each member - growth toward identity with all other human beings, and deep concern for the welfare of other human beings.

   b. The development of a better understanding of the various racial, religious and national elements in American life through sharing in experience, in discussion, and in common tasks.

   c. Equal opportunity for all men to learn, work, play, dwell and worship side by side, without discrimination in a free community.

   d. Spirited cooperation with other agencies seeking similar goals.

2. Each group has at least 25 active members from three or more racial, religious or nationality groups. [And is open to members of all groups]

3. Each group offers a regularly scheduled orientation or training course.

4. Each group is engaged in at least one activity that aims toward the achievement of the goals of a Fellowship and that, at the same time, reaches out to other people in the community."

Physical Facilities

Philadelphia operates a 4-story house in town, and a 125-acre farm about 30 miles outside of Philadelphia which serves as a summer training, workcamp, and conference center. Baltimore, Reading, Media, Cincinnati and Kansas City all have houses, though some are too small for all the programs. Brooklyn and Washington D.C. have offices where their business is conducted; West Chester, Knoxville, and Columbus have no facilities of their own at all. These groups without houses must conduct their program in community centers, schools, Y's, churches and private homes. As can easily be imagined they work under considerable handicap having no center of their own.

Organization

Most of the Fellowship Houses are governed by a Board of Directors drawn from the active membership and interested community leaders. In some cases there is also an executive committee and/or advisory board. Philadelphia Fellowship House has a staff of about 12 persons who work with hundreds of volunteers; the other Houses have for the most part only one full or part-time director plus volunteers. West Chester, Knoxville and Columbus have never had any staff. All the Houses are dependent for the bulk of their work on the leadership and participation of volunteers. It is in the very nature of the Fellowship that the structure of the personnel organization should be in concentric and overlapping circles - from the most active members to the less active - rather than in a hierarchy of positions.

Financing and Sponsorship

Fellowships are financed for the most part by membership dues, contributions and gifts of interested persons and groups in the community. This is supplemented by fund-raising events put on by the Fellowship. A few programs are self-supporting in the sense that the participants pay for the few materials needed. There is no support or sponsorship from any other campaigns or agencies locally or nationally. There have been occasional gifts to individual Houses from funds or foundations. The problems of fund-raising present a difficult challenge to the Fellowships since time and energy spent in this direction divert staff and volunteers from carrying forward the programming of the House. However, it is felt that for members to have a certain amount of financial stake and a sharing of the financial responsibility of the House is sound and healthy. The problem arises because there is an overloading of this responsibility on persons with neither the means, nor the contacts or skills necessary to acquire the means, to carry the load. Current attempts to alleviate this severe problem include 1) attempts to make the local campaigns more organized and professionally guided, and 2) hopes of eventually finding foundations, corporations or individuals with vision and interest in promoting this work.

Who Participates in Fellowship House

Membership is open to everyone who believes in the idea and pays his minimum dues. The Fellowship group encourages the participation of as many different types of people as possible: different racial, religious, nationality, and other ethnic groups; people from different socio-economic and occupational groups; different age levels; and any other breakdowns which cut across the community population. Actually, the membership is predominantly made up of Protestants - white and Negro - Jews, a few Catholics, and a sprinkling from other groups. The membership largely comes from the middle socio-economic group, from a variety of occupations, with relatively few from the upper and lower income groups. While in many Fellowships, there tend to be mostly adult programs, some of the Fellowships carry on an extensive program with children, youth and whole families.

Fellowship members include average citizens from all over the greater community together with some community leaders from various fields. The most active members are those who have a deep concern for people - for finding ways to combat prejudice and all its manifestations in the community, for working with all kinds of other people - even those they may disagree with - to further their ideals, believing that this ideal cannot be meaningfully expressed or demonstrated unless one starts with oneself. There are persons who bring with them special skills which help in administration, programming and house maintenance; others pitch in wherever they can at all levels of activity. The persons who have interest and leadership abilities become trained and in turn train others to carry the idea out to large groups of people who have not given much time or thought to these problems before, many of whom have a latent potential interest which has never been cultivated. The largest number of people to whom these community programs are offered are probably in this "middle of the road" or "fence-sitter class. If out and out bigots are reached by the program and any effect made on them, so much the better, but no deliberate attempt is made to reach persons with deeply entrenched prejudices.

Individual Motivations, Concepts and Involvement

Persons who become involved in Fellowship House work appear to have a variety of motivations. The following breakdown is an indication of the three most common extremes of motivation or viewpoint towards what Fellowship House should be:

1. An interest primarily in abolishing community patterns without much concern about attitudes, with the idea that the changing of the patterns themselves would eventually affect attitudes as much as is necessary. This approach seems to be one held by concerned people interested in social or direct action who are willing to make personal sacrifice in terms of time, financial support, bearing through unpleasant experiences, and whatever infringement this makes on their personal lives. Individual growth is not the aim - but the person might well get involved in a substantial carry over into personal life in terms of associations with the interracially-minded ingroup, but would exclude the total approach towards all persons, and specifically, the racially or religiously prejudiced and the apathetic.

2. An approach consisting essentially of professional development toward the goal of changing patterns and attitudes in the community - following through from simple techniques and small group work development to highly skilled and sophisticated techniques of stimulating and appealing to intellects and emotions both of the masses of people and oc community leadership. This approach involves rapid expansion and ample funds. Individual growth of participants is primarily in professional and experiential directions. There is not inherent in this approach much carry over into personal life - where personal involvement develops, it is a by-product.

3. A personal involvement in developing human relationships as a full time living experience and as a job experience or high priority avocation where possible. This approach essential requires people who similar to category (1) are willing to make great personal sacrifice, but who at the same time must be concerned with changing attitudes of others as in category (2), and further - with continual self-growth as well, thus learning to personally approach literally all people at all times in a "fellowship" spirit. The ultimate goal here both for personal development, group development and demonstration to the community involves not a carry over into an outside personal life, but a total living together in the first place - an experiment in community living. The theory here is presumably that realistically the key people attempt to carry this idea through toward its ultimate goal, but the outer circle of friends and participants, while in sympathy with the concept, carry it out to the best of their ability in terms of their personal circumstances and living arrangements.

There appear to be other channels in the community for work of the type described in categories (1) and (2), whereas there is little or no opportunity for the kind of total experimental approach of category (3). However, as one might expect, only a few coming into Fellowship House with a strong orientation and background in one category or another or a personal need in one area or another conceive of the operation and their part in it as totally one or another of these extremes. Rather, Fellowship House seems to offer to the average person with "liberal" or "religious" outlook an opportunity to work in an organization with elements of all three approaches and to participate in programs involving the positive aspects of any of these three directions or all three simultaneously.

When it comes to the question of how people are introduced to and involved in Fellowship House, the following general observations may be made: first, due to staff limitations and hence lack of much publicity or direct recruitment activity, there has tended to be a rather haphazard system of locating volunteer personnel. Most new members are introduced by friends who are already involved, or are in some fashion brought in through a person to person process. A few come through publicity, professional channels, or interest in some aspect of the program such as music, art, children or the like. There are in addition a few who seek out Fellowship House and a few who are sought out by Fellowship House because of their talents, personality or other attributes.

What do Individuals and the Community get out of Fellowship House?

For the individual participants in the Fellowship House program, the Survey findings indicated that there were many kinds of consciously experienced personal rewards, growth and outlets received through their association with Fellowship House. These might be categorized as follows:

1. A psychological maturing - expressed in terms of gaining better understanding and perception, greater awareness, a personal growth or personality enrichment.

2. Social enjoyment, broadening and development. This included rewards of new friendships, contacts, etc. and for some, a learning to feel at ease with different kinds of people.

3. A feeling of courage and reinforcement; feelings of security and acceptance; of not standing alone.

4. Outlet for service to the community - an opportunity to do a job, to do one's duty, to carry out one's convictions in a meaningful direction.

5. Professional growth - experience with people, an opportunity for leadership or testing of professional ideas. And to the non-professional, an aid in various human relations areas in the individual's life - in his job, home, or new skill in dealing with people generally in his every day life.

6. A redirection or reorientation of way of life and of relating self to others, expressed by such phrases as "an invitation to live"; "an answer to why I'm here"; a "sense of oneness"; a "we concept" - a fulfillment of a desire to be more than what one already is - a part of something bigger than oneself.

In regard to the community, Fellowship House also has many meanings. These meanings depend considerably on the local situation - the size of the community, social climate, the success Fellowship House has had, and the existence of other inter-group agencies and opportunities in the community. It was found that in some cities, Fellowship House was the only center where all could meet on a really equal basis in a natural, friendly atmosphere. In other towns, it was the only place where persons who cared about these ideals could become trained and find a way to work toward them in the community together with others on a day to day basis. It was apt to be the only center which could serve as a continuing laboratory in human relations, where new techniques could be developed and tested. It was usually the only place where people were approaching the problem of human relations by a continuous living demonstration of their beliefs. One could say that in all communities, whatever else Fellowship House represented to the community, it represented a symbol of the idea of a true democracy, a practical, concrete expression, however feebly developed, of the concern of at least one group of people in the community.

From what has been outlined so far, one might say that Fellowship House is a sound project to embark on in most communities. While the idea of interracial and interfaith cooperation is highly controversial in southern and borderline states, yet one would expect, and it seems to be the case, that except in the deep south it could be approached without too much opposition within the framework in which Fellowship House has been operating.

From the point of view of research studies, the fundamental premises of the organization seem to be sound - the psychological principles used, the approach to community groups and problem areas, and the types of programming adopted. It would seem that all that was needed to start a Fellowship House would be a handful of people with sufficient interest, time and ability. However, the fact is that it has been exceedingly difficult to organize a Fellowship House, and even more difficult to keep it going once organized. Some of the Fellowships, after years of struggle, have hardly been able to stay on their feet, are little known, have not been able to get adequate funds, facilities or staff, and in fact have hardly amounted to more than a small symbol of good will in the community. Even Philadelphia, though it is successful and doing a big and vital job in the community, is not able to begin to meet the demand for its services, programs and resources.

After completing the Survey and studying the questions raised by it, at least some tentative observations were possible about the nature of the underlying problems besetting the Fellowship Houses. Roughly they seem to be as follows:

1. Leadership and Pioneering Problems

There appear to be a number of factors involved in finding and keeping adequate leadership for Fellowship groups. When a community first gets interested in the Fellowship idea, volunteers have to be available and competent to get the organization started and sufficient funds have to be raised through volunteer efforts to hire staff. Next, a staff person has to be found with a difficult combination of qualifications: 1) obviously there has to be interest and deep concern for the cause of better human relations together with a "Fellowship" approach towards it; 2) there have to be multiple skills and abilities since the lone staff person has to organize and participate in all phases of the work until a volunteer can be found to take over each responsibility-- this includes: administrative ability, public speaking and public relations, program directorship, office and clerical skills, house and grounds maintenance, and fund raising - to name a few; 3) there has to be the kind of personality that will attract people, inspire them and be able to project the Fellowship idea effectively to them; 4) there has to be such a total commitment and involvement that the person will sacrifice most personal life and be available for all these activities; this also often includes financial sacrifice and ability to tide over until the fundraising program is developed.

It can easily be understood from the above that persons of this sort are not readily available. In the smaller Fellowships, the job often proved to be too much for the few who did attempt it. Hence there has been a big turnover of directors in those Fellowships which were able to afford one at all - with the exception of Philadelphia. Philadelphia, besides being the first and oldest, is the only one which has had a continuity of staff direction since the beginning.

As has already been pointed out, the pioneering aspect of this enterprise is one which daunts many a staff prospect. In our society the values of job security, prestige and recognition by certain community figures and institutions are generally more important to job applicatns in the field of human relations, as in other fields, than the nature of the job to be done. The building of an institution from scratch - including its financing - is not the kind of job which appeals to most young job seekers these days. The difficulties are particularly acute in the more southern communities where the project is not only controversial, but is rejected by most community leaders. It is also probably true that certain types of interested persons favor a more militant approach and reject the positive, affirmative approach believing it to be based on fears and insecurities rather than on a philosophical and psychological approach to human relations.

2. Sponsorship and Group Process

As has been pointed out, the Fellowships have no backing from a specific group which has been established and is known locally or nationally. This makes it potentially a more truly representative group - a cross section of the community - with policy growing out of group process and group decision rather than being handed down or strongly influenced by one interest group or a group set up for other purposes. It at the same time slows up the acceptance of the new Fellowship group by community leaders and persons who might aid it financially. Another related problem is that the policy makers are selected more for their concern in human relations than because of their contacts or executive ability. This makes public relations and fundraising a more difficult task. For example, when foundations or community leaders are approached for financial aid, the question invariably raised is "who is on your Board?" And inability to point to known "names" in the community is considered to be a weakness.

There is also a slowing down of the growth of the Fellowship because there is an insistence within the group of developing the Fellowship idea within the group itself in order to sell it to the community. Thus instead of becoming absorbed with various program or action techniques in themselves, or publicity stunts, or other gimmicks which have proved successful elsewhere, there is a struggle - often without adequate leadership - to build a group first, and out of that group to train and send out individuals to develop such and such a program. When a potential leader is found in the community who is interested in the idea but unable or unwilling to spend the time and effort to grow in and with the Fellowship group, there is a conflict situation that is not always easily resolved. A certain amount of criticism is levelled at Fellowship House for this "in-group" approach, but on the other hand, where no attempt is made, or it proves impossible, to train volunteers within the Fellowship group, the idea is seldom adequately expressed when taken by them out to the community. Philadelphia is the only House which has crystallized and successfully developed this concept, and has demonstrated the value of building a qualitative base first before spreading the idea quantitatively.

Future Steps

The Philadelphia Fellowship House has a series of plans and dreams which indicate some of the directions in which the group is moving. Some of these are: 1) the developing of a training center for younger and for older people, offering a concrete way for persons to learn ways to devote their work effort and their lives to Fellowship; 2) an extension of the "Singing City" project to include such experiments as the use of Fellowship music in industry; 3) an extension and development of expression of Fellowship through the other arts; 4) encouragement of family-centered neighborhood Fellowship houses; 5) development of whole Fellowship communities.

In addition to these ideas, there are various possible steps that might be taken to overcome some of the problems outlined above. As has been indicated, these problems are both administrative ones and ones which are partly inevitable because of the nature of the organization and its interaction with contemporary value systems and social mores. While it is easy to suggest methods of alleviating the situation, it is far less easy to follow through with remedial action - the well-known vicious circle of "no funds, no program; no program, no funds!" is a hard one to break through. Neverthless, a few suggestions seem appropriate:

1. It would undoubtedly be helpful if the Fellowship Houses became better known in certain circles throughout the country - especially professional circles, student circles, and wherever there is a possibility of interest and aid either through funds or locating personnel.

2. Concentration on the proposal of further training programs at the Philadelphia Fellowship House and Farm. There is already a training program for internes from this country and abroad, but on a small scale.

3. Although the Fellowships are not ready now to join together in a closer association than already exists, there is the possibility that they will find it to their mutual advantage to do so later on.

4. Financial aid would very clearly alleviate many of the growing pains and serious obstacles to Fellowship growth. Funds for specific programs, such as the ARROW program, or for development of the training opportunities, or for the overall development of the Houses as a whole, would all be possibilities.

5. Research would be a valuable aid to the growth of Fellowship ideas and programs. While it might not be easy or advisable to attempt the kind of controlled experiments used in the class room or industrial plant, new techniques might be devised to study the effects of Fellowship programs and actions.

In any event, whatever possibilities lie in the above suggestions, there will clearly continue to be a slow development of those Houses which have gotten off to a good start. It is a matter of speeding up the process, making it available to other communities, and finding more effective ways of developing the ideas and program which present a challenge.

SUMMARY

There are 11 Fellowship Houses or groups in this country working within the total community to combat prejudice and discrimination in positive ways, and to help build understanding and peaceful attitudes among peoples of the community. The Fellowships work with all racial, religious, ethnic, age and socio-economic groups. They are centers where face-to-face contacts and building of friendships across ethnic barriers are possible, and at the same time they are laboratories where techniques are developed and persons trained to take the Fellowship experience and idea out to groups all over the community.

Philadelphia Fellowship House is the oldest and most highly developed. All of the Fellowships have faced difficult problems in finding leadership with the approach, personality, multiple skills and willingness to commit and involve themselves to the extent necessary to do the job. The fact that this is a pioneering enterprise, not well known, not sponsored by many well known "names" or established institutions, and is governed by persons selected more because of their concern for human relations than because of their contacts or executive ability, has made progress slow. The insistence on a democratic group process, group growth, and a qualitative inner base as a prerequisite to quantitative programming, has also slowed down the development of the organization.

There are possibilities for a faster and more effective development of the Fellowships in existence and for the growth of new Fellowship groups elsewhere if 1) the Fellowship Houses and program become better known in interested circles; 2) the Philadelphia Fellowship House offers and publicizes a more extensive training program for potential staff and volunteer workers; 3) the groups which are now joined in a very loose Federation become more unified and strengthen their joint approach while maintaining their local autonomy as before; 4) substantial financial aid is offered by interested foundations, individuals, or corporations in addition to - not in place of - local fundraising efforts; and 5) the possibilities of research programs are explored.

With any or all of these aids, new strengthening and more effective development of the Fellowship Houses might well result. Meanwhile, the Philadelphia Fellowship House is thinking increasingly in terms of the following developments: 1) training center possibilities, 2) extending its musical program to industry, 3) developing the other arts as media for expressing Fellowship, 4) developing family Fellowship houses, and 5) developing the idea of a Fellowship community. Philadelphia Fellowship House and several of the smaller Houses appear to be continuing in any event to develop slowly their approach and program as established during the past 10 years. They are having an increasing impact on individuals' lives, on their own community patterns, and are gradually spreading the idea to other communities both in this country and abroad.

"THE FELLOWSHIP OF THE CONCERNED"
OF SOUTH CAROLINA
THE SUPREME COURT DECISION - BUILDING COMMUNITY UNDERSTANDING
Columbia, S C.

"THE FELLOWSHIP OF THE CONCERNED" - Whenever there is a crisis in the affairs of the South, the church women come together to face the issues and work out a program of action. They have become "The Fellowship of the Concerned," concerned about conditions in the South. Eight times they met to face current issues: Cause and Cure of War Conference; The Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching (under the direction of Mrs. Jessie Daniel Ames); the following Workshops in different years: Demobilization; Rural Health; Civil Rights; Injustice in the Courts (and it was here the name "The Fellowship of the Concerned" was adopted); in 1953 - the pending Supreme Court decision on school integration; and in 1955, The Supreme Court Decision - Building Community Understanding.

A WORKSHOP

A Work Shop -
is a place of saw and plane and saw dust and shavings on the floor, -
the leavings from rough things made smooth;
of square and rule,
with which things not true to line are tested
and made straight;
and a workman in overalls, not afraid to soil his hands
As he bends to his task to perfect something beautiful - and useful out of that which may have been raw
and rough and plain...
But all done in the service of humanity.

In this spirit, we may have our workshop.
It means hard work, not afraid to handle sordid things,
to probe deep with chisel and auger to uncover conditions,
to make rough places be saw dust and shavings;
to use the square and rule to straighten conditions,
that we may make something beautiful out of that which has been sordid and unlovely ---
But all done in the service of humanity.
---- Dorothy Tilly

GLEANINGS FROM THE WORKSHOP OF "THE FELLOWSHIP OF THE CONCERNED"
SOUTH CAROLINA CHURCH WOMEN
CHURCH OF GOOD SHEPHERD, COLUMBIA, S.C.

Let Us Think of Greatness

In this time of need we should consider greatness; the greatness of those heroes of the Faith: Abraham, Moses, Gideon, Barak, Samson, Jephthah, David, Samuel, and the prophets. The greatness, most of all, of Peter and of Jesus. Consider the greatness of Jesus after the resurrection: that he returned to the very men who had forsaken and even denied him, and said to them, in effect, "Now, let's get on with the work." There's that after-breakfast conversation with Peter, introduced and continued by Jesus with the question, "Simon, son of John, do you love me?" For a breathless moment, Peter hung suspended over the abyss. His whole heart told him he loved Jesus, and yet if he had said he did, might not Jesus cut him with the second question, "Then why did you deny me?" And what should he say to that? But then the innate greatness of Peter rose to the surface, and surrendering himself nobly to the divine nobility he saw before him, he replied, quite simply, "Yes, Lord, you know that I love you." Thus far greatness had been matched with greatness but Jesus was not yet done. Three times he asked Peter the same question, recalling terribly to Peter's mind his three-fold denial of his Lord. Yet even on the third question Peter did not hesitate; perhaps he insisted a little upon his stand. "Lord, you know everything; you know that I love you." "Well," said Jesus, "Let's get on with the work."

Let us consider also the greatness of the task we face, for therein lies the secret of success. Men rise to great occasions; necessity is the mother of greatness. If we are trivial, it is because we see the world with trivial eyes. Let us see it greatly, and great resources will be revealed to us. Consider the two disciples on that sabbath walk to Emmaus. Saddened by the recent death of Jesus, and the destruction of all their hopes, they were talking together of the events which had transpired, when a stranger joined them and entered the conversation. They did not recognize him as he talked, though he answered for them the questions nearest their hearts, but when they broke bread together — when they acted together — they knew who he was. Robert Bridges says of this episode:

> Christ yet walketh the earth,
> And talketh still as with those two disciples once
> on the road to Emmaus
> Where they walk and are sad...

Jesus himself said that "where two or three are gathered together in my name there am I in the midst to bless them." And what is his name? He told us: Love. Where two or three are gathered in love, in the compassionate love which he himself revealed, there he is and there will his blessing rest.

We too have gathered today, saddened by the evil of the world. With those two disciples we walk the lonely road to Emmaus. Christ walks with us as he walked with them, though our eyes, like theirs, see but poorly. He is waiting for us to recognize him; to know that, despite the cross and the evil of the world, he lives, to be the constant companion of all who love. We are now approaching Easter. He will rise again, we say. But where? In your heart and in mine, nowhere else. He is waiting for his resurrection even more longingly than we. Let us go back to the words of Bridges:

> Christ yet walketh the earth,
> And talketh still as with those two disciples once
> on the road to Emmaus
> Where they walk and are sad;
> Whose vision of him then was his victory over death...

He is walking with us now, bearing with him the resources of the universe. There is no question that God is here, in the common compassion which has brought us together. May our eyes be opened to realize that he is our companion, and that since he is with us, the world is as nothing against us.

The Supreme Court Decision
"The disease which affects us is intolerance"
(See address attached)

Discussion led by Mrs. E.U. Robinson

Question: Now that the "disease" has been diagnosed, what treatment is suggested?

Mrs. Joseph Bonetti, representing Father Maurice V. Shean of Rock Hill, S.C. (upon request), gave story of formation of Council on Human Relations.

"Recognition has been made by the town council of Rock Hill. We now have a Negro who is a member of the recreation committee. A survey or poll on the subject of segregation and integration of schools was mailed to 500 citizens of Rock Hill, which included professional men and women as well as lay people. Out of this number, 400 replies were received. Out of this response, the majority of people believed that they should comply with the Supreme Court's decision. However, the time was not right to take a definite stand. School teachers came out for it, and said it was the thing to do. Professional men and medical doctors did not go along with it. Lay people who worked in mills said they did not accept it. (Believed feared reprisals). Thinking people said that is what we ought to do and we may as well go on and do it. Father Shean said he would like to see the United Church Women petition the Governor of the State to form a bi-racial council of women to study this problem. One member has already presented this idea to a legislator who said it was a very good idea and consideration is being given to other organizations such as the Chamber of Commerce to petition the Governor to set up this commission."

Question: What reasons did the doctors give?

Answer: They did not think it was timely and doubted it would be accepted.

Question: Are mills unionized?

Answer: Yes. However, even if the national organization has taken a stand, the locals are against it.

Mrs. Rebecca Reid: I recommend the book, Two Men and a Bargain, by Lillian Smith.

Question (to Mrs. Bonetti): Please give plans for starting a discussion group or Council on Human Relations.

Mrs. Bonetti: Have materials and helps available. Two or three persons may get together over coffee and talk about problems confronting a nation and state as a whole until brought down to the town level. They may decide to invite a larger group to meet with representatives of the town, Negroes and whites together, to talk about things and finally get approval and recognition of the town council so that it would have prestige. The mayor was then asked to come and talk with the others. Typed an outline of the aims and ideals and how we could get together and settle this or that question in our own community living. After recognition by the town council for the value, 21 members are now appointed by town council to compose this group of representative citizens.

Question: Has a survey been made by the school board?

Mr. Dabbs: No.

Suggestion was then made that such a survey be made of schools within an area: transportation needs, teachers' loads, etc.

Mrs. Robert K. Gordon, Dillon, South Carolina, read from the workbook, God vs Segregation, written by a Negro woman from New Orleans, Louisiana, Mrs. William Collins, by permission reprinted.

REPORT OF BUZZ SESSION

What Can You Do?

Mrs. Robinson presiding
2:00 P.M.

Question: What is the church's responsibility and place?

Answer: Individual members can strengthen the hand of the preacher.

Question: How can we channel what we have here today to local communities?

Answer: Through personal friends. Get them to meet with others, Negro and white people, who would be interested and who would discuss our points of agreement and division with view to understanding one another better and problems that exist between our races. Confidence established (rapport) necessary. Prove a willingness to listen.

Mrs. Kennedy (Bennettsville): How can you make a personal contact first and move into smaller discussion groups later?

Mrs. Abel: Cooperative studies will do it. Methodist contact recommended, in my own community.

Mrs. Robinson suggested it being a minority group, they are in a position that makes them apologetic and maybe they could set up conversation groups within their own race.

Mrs. Kennedy, Secretary of Christian Social Relations, stated she had had no cooperation with whites coming together with them even to talk, and asked if they had a meeting, would anyone there come and be in attendance. There were many people who raised their hands in agreement, that they would come to a meeting with her or elsewhere when needed. It was suggested that everyone had received a great deal from the meeting; however, if they got nothing more from the meeting than an answer to this question, it could be considered a success and unless specifics were dealt with, they may not have come at all.

Mrs. W. E. Solomon: How aggressive as Christian workers should we be in this question?

Mr. J. M. Dabbs: Is segregation connected with spiritual disorder? The Negro has tried peace. What do we get by peace? Just the same as war?

Dr. J. A. Bacoats, President of Benedict College, Columbia, South Carolina: This group has gone on record as supporting the Supreme Court's decision and that it was moral and right and something that was going to happen inevitably and as sisters and brothers we should get together and work it out. On a local level there are those who are members that are absolutely quiet and silent and many local leaders may take the position that this is not Christian. This is political. Some seem to feel that religion has no social and local responsibility relative to social and moral affairs. How aggressive should we as Christians be? You can not divorce it altogether from areas of tensions and areas of human relations. If we are going to live together in peace and harmony up yonder beyond the veil of tears, we have to have some preliminary experience of living so on earth even in Columbia and South Carolina. There is only one minister I feel I could discuss this with. Our religion is more evangelistic - saving souls. It doesn't have too much to do with human relations here. Attitudes have much to do with aggressiveness. Sometimes when we see actions, our reactions to their action are about as bad as their action in the first place. We will have to disprove some of the things that have been said about us. You have to have information at your fingertips. Express self will. Avoid anger and violence. If you are right, you don't need to be angry and if you are not, you can't afford to be.

Mrs. Robinson called attention to the book, Race Relations Law Reporter, February, 1956, first issue, Vanderbilt Law School, Nashville, Tennessee, $2.00.

Mrs. Tilly: I get such a thrill out of our meeting together in times of tension, to relieve tensions among people. It is a challenging time to live. Living creatively on the edge of tomorrow as being enacted out. Thrilled at it, and catch the spirit of a time like this! Innerself important - condition self by daily readings, radio, talking, notes, listening, strong thinking, correct interpretation of the Bible, seek God's will.

Mrs. Tilly told of being invited by Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, to Daytona Beach, Florida, to a meeting of "Top Women of America" - that is, national presidents of women's organizations of the nation, for the purpose, as Mrs. Bethune put it, "that there might be found words with wings that would unite the women of our country in building understanding and peace in our land and in the world." In telling the story of her life to us, Mrs. Bethune said no matter what happened to her through the years, her prayer had been "Let me love, to keep me from hating." Soon she ordered her steps as she walked life's way to the words, "Let me love. Let me love." "Now I do not have to pray those words anymore. As I walk now, my steps are to the song, 'Thank you, God. Thank you, God." We who listened knew we had found the words that could unite our efforts and bring peace... "Let me love. Let me love." In this spirit we can go home and bring peace and understanding to our troubled communities.

Mr. J. M. Dabbs told a story of his elderly uncle, who, even at an old age, wished to see the progress twenty-five years hence; as times became more challenging, fifty years hence; and with greater advancement one hundred and then five hundred years hence. Then the thought occurred to him -- he might not live that long! "Well, I would just like to live to see the whole thing wound up," said Mr. Dabbs, speaking for himself and for all those present.

The Fellowship of the Concerned

CHURCH WOMEN OF SOUTH CAROLINA
Columbia, S. C.
March 6, 1956
Marion A. Wright

Who among us ten years ago would have believed that in South Carolina in the years 1955 and 1956--

A professor of education at the University of South Carolina would have been fired because he made a temperate criticism of a governor's speech and publicly expressed an honest opinion on educational policy?

A teacher at ~~Dillon~~ Mullins would have been fired because he asked a Sunday school class if they felt that throwing eggs at a Negro girl was Christian conduct?

A Baptist minister at Batesburg would have been fired because he voted his conscientious beliefs on a matter of church policy?

Hundreds of Negroes would have been thrown out of work, had their credit cut off and become displaced persons, threatened and put in mortal terror, because they exercised the American right of petition?

Would you have believed it? Would anyone living under the American flag have believed it?

Yet those things happened, happened before my eyes and yours, happened before the shocked and unbelieving eyes of the nation and all mankind. They happened in a state that calls itself-proudly-democratic and Christian.

As appalling as are the events themselves, they are mere symptoms of a disease which afflicts us, a distemper that devours.

The disease is intolerance. I do not at the moment mean intolerance of people. I mean something far worse--intolerance of ideas, of opinion. I say it is far worse because ideas and opinions are more important than the individuals who entertain them. The individual perishes but ideas are the life blood of society, the thing which gives society vitality and causes it to evolve imperceptibly but surely into adaptations better suited to human needs. In that sense ideas are immortal.

How did we get this way?

I am not historian enough or philosopher enough to give any authoritative answer to that question. I suspect that, if we sought original cause, we would be back in the 16th and 17th centuries (if no farther) and at the side of men with ropes who ranged Africa in search of human prey, in the steaming holds of vessels which brought captives to the young nation, and on thousands of tidewater plantations where the beautiful and the base in our society had their common roots in the soil of slavery. The problem of how the two races shall get along with each other was not of Negro creation.

If you ask the question "How did we get this way, how did we get to the point that terror is being used to prevent men from expressing their honest beliefs?"--if you ask it, you will be told by many in high places that it is because of something that occured on May 17, 1954--that one decision by one court brought us to this pass. It is a very slick and glib answer and suits the purposes of those who give it. But it is far, far from the truth.

We will be told that because a scapegoat is a psychological necessity for those having guilty consciences. It is very convenient to have nine men sitting there in Washington to whom we may point and say "These are the villains. But for them all would be quiet below the Potomac." You see, if we say that often enough and loudly enough we accomplish certain pleasant results.

First of all, we will convince ourselves that we had nothing to do with creating the illegal, immoral and unconstitutional conditions the court had to correct.

We may hope to divert the attention of others away from ourselves, the really guilty, and to the men who have exposed our guilt. No one hollers "Stop, thief!" more loudly than the fleeing pickpocket.

And we may conceal our mental bankruptcy in dealing with integration after the decision by continuing to whine that the decision was wrong. The poorest player is the one who cusses the umpire.

Those who now assail the decision of May 17, 1954, claim to have been shocked and amazed by the court's action, as though there had been nothing in judicial history to forecast the result. If their surprise is genuine, they had been blind to the signs and trends of the times. For to all reasonable men, lawyers and laymen alike, the handwriting had long been on the wall. Their blindness was the blindness of those who will not see.

Take the very case of Plessy vs Ferguson, on which they rely and of which we hear so much. That case was decided in 1896. It was not remotely concerned with schools; it was concerned with transportation by train. What it held-all that it held-was that a passenger on an interstate train could not complain of separate accommodations so long as the accommodations were equal. There was a moving dissenting opinion by Justice Harlan in which he strongly contended that separateness because of race was, in itself, a badge of inequality, a needless humiliation of a passenger, and in violation of the constitutional prohibition against state action discriminating against a citizen because of his race. There was the warning finger, lifted in 1896.

The dissent was significant, not merely because it spoke for enlightened public opinion throughout the country, but because able dissents have a way of becoming ultimately the views of later courts. If I had the time, I think I might cite a hundred cases from the Supreme Court records in which the minority view has later become the majority view. In at least a dozen cases the great dissenter, Justice Holmes, had the deep satisfaction of seeing his conclusions in dissent later be adopted by his brethren. Truth has a way of triumphing-ultimately-over error.

So, the warning finger. In 1896, mind you.

Now, for the handwriting on the wall.

The state of Missouri sought to discharge its duty to Negro graduate students by setting up scholarship funds under which such students might be educated in other states. A Negro student sought admission to the State University. He was refused upon the ground that education fully comparable was provided by scholarships to institutions located elsewhere. The court struck down the contention, holding that the state could not thus discriminate between white and Negro students. The spokesman for the court was that conspicuous New Deal subversive, Charles Evans Hughes. The word "MENE" appears on the wall. Earl Warren was an inconspicuous citizen at the time.

In an Oklahoma case, a Negro student named McLaurin had legally won admission to the University, but had separate class room, library and cafeteria accommodations. He again went into court to have these restrictions removed. In ordering them removed the court said:

> "These restrictions were obviously imposed in order to comply, as nearly as could be, with the statutory requirements of Oklahoma. But they signify that the State, in administering the facilities it affords for professional and graduate study, sets McLaurin apart from the other students. The result is that Appellant is handicapped in his pursuit of effective graduate instruction. Such restrictions impair and inhibit his ability to study, to engage in discussions and exchange views with other students and, in general, to learn his profession.
> "Our society grows increasingly complex, and our need for trained leaders increases correspondingly. Appellant's case represents, perhaps, the epitome of that need, for he is attempting to obtain an advanced degree in education, to become, by definition, a leader and trainer of others. Those who will come under his guidance and influence must be directly affected by the education he receives. Their own education and development will necessarily suffer to the extent that his training is unequal to that of his classmates. State-imposed restrictions which produce such inequalities cannot be sustained."

"MENE, MENE" appears on the wall.

In the Sweatt case from Texas, it was clearly recognized that a law school for Negro students had been established and that the Texas courts had found that the privileges, advantages and opportunities offered were substantially equivalent to those offered to white students at the University of Texas. Apparently, the Negro school was adequately housed, staffed and offered full and complete legal education, but the Supreme Court clearly recognized that education does not alone consist of fine buildings, class room furniture and appliances but that included in education must be all the intangibles that come into play in preparing one for meeting life. As was so well said by the Court:

....."Few students and no one who has practiced law would choose to study in an academic vacuum, removed from the interplay of ideas and the exchange of views with which the law is concerned."

That decision was the final TEKEL, UPHARSIN. And who do you think wrote it? That Yankee outsider meddling in our affairs, Justice Fred Vinson from Kentucky. Where was Earl Warren at the time? Why, he was the efficient Republican Governor of California.

So, what happened on May 17, 1954, was not a bolt from the blue. Already segregation had been outlawed in graduate schools, colleges and universities, in inter-state travel, in housing, in real estate covenants, in labor employment and in other fields. The decisions had been written by judges of all shades of political belief. The one thing that they had in common was a conviction that no man should be forced to endure legally inflicted penalties because of the color of his skin.

The politician who professes shock and surprise at the May 17 decision merely admits his inability to read the obvious signs of the times. He thereby writes himself down as a very poor guide for the present or the future.

I think we should keep that fact firmly in mind as we examine some of the schemes they now seek to have us adopt.

First of all, they propose to lease or convey all public school property to individuals or corporations who would conduct private schools. Many hundreds of millions of dollars representing the taxes of South Carolinians would be involved. The opportunity for graft would be limitless. Teachers would be arbitrarily deprived of tenure and left to seek employment from these private schools or elsewhere. To make the stratagem work, the state would have to abolish all supervision of such schools and teachers and completely eliminate all standards and qualifications. There would be not the slightest guarantee of the character or quality of education provided by such schools. I think it entirely safe to say that the diplomas of none of them would be recognized by institutions of higher education anywhere in the land.

Then there is discussion of payment by the state to the parents or guardians of children of amounts to cover tuition in these unsupervised private schools. The state could not compulsorily require attendance of pupils and there would be not the slightest guarantee that the state would receive any kind of value for its tuition money. And the state could not operate buses to convey these children to their schools. We would be back to horse and buggy days with a vengeance.

But South Carolina's peculiar contribution to the art of statecraft lies in ~~dreaming up~~ proposing a triple school system, one for whites, one for Negroes, and one for children of both races. Now, I think if there is anything upon which we may all agree, it is that the dual system has been far more expensive than an integrated system would be and it has presented great difficulties in administration. The triple school system would be one-third worse. We must bear in mind that all three schools would have to be literally equal in all facilities and instruction, even though one of the schools might be attended by no more than a dozen pupils. Surely, irresponsibility in government must have reached a new low in the triple school suggestion.

Yes, there are enormous difficulties and unrelieved evils in every suggestion which has been made for evasion of the law of the land, if these devices could conceivably be legal. Are they, in fact, legal? It is to the great credit of the University of South Carolina that its law journal in the Fall, 1954, issue printed a scholarly article by Professor Francis B. Nicholson in which all of these schemes were dissected and found to be unconstitutional. The same conclusions have been reached by the Dean of the Law School of George Washington University and a Professor of law at the University of North Carolina. Bear in mind that these articles were not by "outsiders meddling in southern affairs" but were by southerners subjecting the institutions of the South to dispassionate analysis. Their conclusion is that, however sophisticated the scheme may be, the court will reach its decision by considering the motives behind it and the objectives it is designed to attain.

South Carolinians, of all people, should beware of the facile promises so glibly made by our politicians. We are the burnt children who should dread the fire. Just a little excursion into legal history, if you please.

The 14th Amendment to the Constitution forbids a state from abridging any of the rights of its citizens because of their race or color. The state of Texas had on its books certain statutes which authorized political parties to prescribe rules to determine who might vote in their primaries. Pursuant to such authority, the Democratic party set up rules excluding Negroes from membership in the party. The United States Supreme Court promptly held such action unconstitutional.

The governor of South Carolina then convened a special session of the legislature to repeal all statutes of this state relating to primary elections. Without them, the Democratic par ty, it was argued, would be to no extent a creature, agent, or instrumentality of the state, but on the contrary, would be a mere private club, like the Elks or D.A.R., completely free to prescribe qualifications of its members. That bright bubble lasted just long enough for a case to reach the courts. The light of truth pierced this hastily created smoke screen of legal fiction. Under protection of law Negroes voted in Democratic primaries.

Doesn't the parallel strike this unsophisticated group full in the face? Now, certain of our politicians are saying: "We will repeal all laws relating to public education. We will convey or lease our school property to private citizens. They will run private schools. They will determine who shall be enrolled." If you will merely substitute "school" for "Democratic party," you have the identical legislative procedure formerly and ignobly and ingloriously employed.

Any high school student would be able to tell our legislators that a private school will last no longer than the party lasted as a private club.

So, in any discussion which you may have with friends or groups of people, you have the assurance that the schemes would be costly and destructive if they were legal but that, according to the best legal opinion obtainable, the court will strike them all down. But vastly more important than such considerations, is the naked fact that the schemes are tainted with fraud. It is a serious thing when responsible public officials urge their state to embark upon immoral policy. Let us never forget the moral issue involved.

But let us get back to the question of how we got this way, sick with a mortal sickness. The patient is the state. Let us examine together the chart of this patient.

We must go back a little bit before May 17, 1954. We must go to the city of Charleston. A federal judge--Waring by name--not from California, not from the malicious and ruthless North, as our politicians would describe it, but a native South Carolinian, struck down the sham andfraudulent primary law, as we have seen. He thereby struck a blow for the rights of the common man, that is, a blow for you and for me.

It matters nothing to his blind critics that his decision was unanimously upheld by the Supreme Court. He was subjected to abuse unparalleled in the judicial history of this state. There was an early symptom of our disease. The symptom was wrapped up in the point of view that, if you can't win by fair means, resort to foul; if truth is against you, try slander.

Then came May 17, 1954, with a decision which surprised no one with an I.Q. above that of a seventh grader. The first reaction was from the higher levels of our political life. There was wider sowing and deeper plowing of the seeds of suspicion of our courts. New Dealers the Supreme Court members were called, as though both parties had not for years advocated full rights for all our people. Recklessly men in high places began to call members of the court radicals bent upon destroying the South. The verbal assaults upon Judge Waring now were transferred to new objects of wrath. The fever was spreading.

It spread not only in the objects at which the assaults were directed. It spread in the level of those who succumbed to the fever. Lesser men, inspired by official example, began to feel that they must act, imitatively, like puppets. They began to form their little councils. High principles they professed. None of this KuKlux stuff.

They would use persuasion and reason upon the misguided Negroes. After all, were they not the best friend a Negro ever had?

That phase of the disease was of short duration. The next, inevitable step was quickly taken. Reason and persuasion were not enough. Some people are a little stubborn in insisting upon their rights, you know. The fever rose a little higher on the chart. Boycott, repression, intimidation, these were the next symptoms. Even now they are daily exhibited. All originally directed at Negroes.

But, beyond the comprehension of members of these councils, certain able white persons did not succumb to this mass lunacy. They had views and principles of their own. They stated them, publicly, boldly, as they would have been stated by Thomas Jefferson, Woodrow Wilson, Franklin Roosevelt. So the distemper moves into its present phase. Such renegade white persons, placing humanity above race, must suffer penalties. They must be punished for their honesty, their Christianity. So, a brave professor at the University, a teacher at ~~Dillon~~ Mullins, a preacher at Batesburg, an editor at Florence--and a host of others--feel the blows inflicted by brutish hands.

The course of the disease is indicated not merely by this chronicle of events. It is indicated also by words which have crept into our speech. Since May 17, 1954, for the first time in our lives we have heard "evasion" and "circumvention" of a court's decree publicly ~~and~~ advocated by responsible officials. Those are not the terms with which to describe honorable conduct. But they imply, at least, lip service to the decree while actually failing to comply.

But that was not enough. Some of them now advocate what they call "interposition", a polite term for violation of law on the grand scale. That from men sworn to uphold the law!

Where does all of this lead? Whither do we tend?

Boycott, intimidation, repression--those are not the end of the trail. They are sign posts on the path to brutal violence and murder. A governor who advocates "interposition" is also, by that act, an advocate of cross-burning, egg-throwing, bombing--though he may lack the intelligence to perceive it, The "respectable" Citizen's Council, in advocating economic boycott of Negroes, is blood brother to the Klan. Emmet Till was done to death in Mississippi by men who took their cue from governors and senators.

Let us keep certain points clearly in mind.

When I seek to evade a law which I do not like, I weaken the strength of all other laws which I do like. What dragon's teeth are sowed by men who advocate evasion of law!

Depriving a color minority of its rights under law will be the first step toward depriving other minorities of their rights under law, such as Catholics, Jews, labor unions and any other group which does not have its hands on the power of government.

If public officials today may wink at a denial of my rights, tomorrow they may wink at a denial of yours. Winking may become a habit, you know.

The rights and liberties of none of us are safe under a government which deprives any one of us of his rights and liberties. The bell tolls for us, too.

Let me lay a question upon our consciences. I should like to see it lie there and writhe and burn and gnaw until an answer is forthcoming. What is the duty of a Christian church or a Christian association in these times?

If there is anything of reality in what I have said, we in South Carlina live in a time of moral crisis. Cunning men with perverted minds seek to fasten an immoral regime upon us. They presume to act as our spokesman, our agents. Shall Christianity stand idly by, dumb, mute, while this infamy is being perpetrated?

(omit)

The glorious chapters in the church's history were not those in which it remained quiescent in the presence of vice, perhaps even carried the torch for libertine monarchs, gave ecclesiastical backing to corrupt governments.

The chapters which stir us and lift us up were those in which gaunt, shaggy, consumed and fervent men confronted the evil host about them and risked the rack, the stake and the cross to denounce corruption. John Huss, Martin Luther, Bruno--theirs was the breed.

Not again in our generation will Christians have so rich and rare an opportunity to exert whatever moral authority and power they possess. Crises winnow wheat and chaff. If the churches and associations such as this now act--exhibit in their own membership the actual brotherhood of all mankind, assume the leadership of all forces of enlightenment, move to the attack upon the powers which seek to throttle our spiritual growth--they will perform in the noble tradition of the faith and prove their right to wear the name of Christian.

"THE FELLOWSHIP OF THE CONCERNED"

THE SUPREME COURT DECISION - BUILDING COMMUNITY UNDERSTANDING

"THE FELLOWSHIP OF THE CONCERNED" - Whenever there is a crisis in the affairs of the South, the church women have come together to face the issues and work out a program of action. They have become "The Fellowship of the Concerned," concerned about conditions in the South. Eight different times they met to face current issues, as follows: Cause and Cure of War Conference; The Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching, under the direction of Mrs. Jessie Daniel Ames; the following Workshops in different years: Demobilization; Rural Health; Civil Rights; Injustice in the Courts (and it was here the name "The Fellowship of the Concerned" was adopted); in 1953 - the pending Supreme Court decision on school integration, and in 1955, the concern was the part church women must play in building community understanding.

A WORKSHOP

A Work Shop -
is a place of saw and plane
and saw dust and shavings on the floor, -
the leavings from rough things made smooth;
of square and rule,
with which things not true to line are tested
and made straight;
and a workman in overalls, not afraid to soil his hands
As he bends to his task to perfect something beautiful - and useful out of that which may have been raw
and rough and plain..
But all done in the service of humanity.

In this spirit, we may have our workshop.
It means hard work, not afraid to handle sordid things,
to probe deep with chisel and auger to uncover conditions,
to make rough places be saw dust and shavings;
to use the square and rule to straighten conditions,
that we may make something beautiful out of that which has been sordid and unlovely ---
But all done in the service of humanity.

Subject - Breaking Down Barriers

Chairmen - Mrs. Earl Andrews
Mrs. R. T. Adair

Scribe - Mrs. Robert Hughes

Welcome and opening remarks - Mrs. Earl Andrews

The topic for the day was announced as being "Breaking Down Barriers," and a barrier was defined: "Any line or boundary, natural or artificial, which serves to separate or limit."

Worship - The Rev. Robert Graetz, Pastor, Trinity Lutheran Church

Scripture read from the second chapter of Ephesians (RSV) shows that we are not the only ones concerned about barriers. So was St. Paul.

There are, have been, and always will be barriers. There are economic barriers, barriers of language, and barriers of professions or occupations. In Paul's time, the barrier of which he wrote was that between Jew and Gentile, that "dividing wall of hostility."

Our concern is in what we are going to do with barriers of our day, and the answer lies in the things that Christ has done.

1. Christ has created one new man. The sacrifice on the cross brought peace. We need peace in Montgomery, and Christ is the only one who can bring real peace.

2. We have access in one spirit to the Father. Christ spanned the barrier between sinners and their Creator, so that we all approach one Father in the same spirit.

3. We are all fellow-citizens with the saints. We are to be built by Christ into a Holy Temple, and he will use all of us in the building of that structure.

There are barriers always, but through Jesus Christ we can make these barriers meaningless to us.

Prayer --

Introduction of Mrs. M. E. Tilly -- The Chairman introduced Mrs. M. E. Tilly from Atlanta, a very special guest. Mrs. Tilly is a former jurisdictional officer in the W.S.C.S. of the Methodist Church, served on the President's Committee on Civil Rights, and is in charge of work with women in the Southern Regional Council.

Showing of Film -- "The Toymaker."

Mr. Ray Swords of the Montgomery County Mental Health Society showed the movie, "The Toymaker." It portrayed two hand puppets who, thinking they were different because one had red spots on his head and the other had red stripes, fussed and fought themselves into a frenzy. Then they discovered that the same toymaker made and loved them both and that they hurt themselves when they hurt each other. Then peace prevailed.

Barriers from the adult angle -- Rev. R. D. Crockett, Alabama State Teachers College.

In making suggestions for removing barriers, Dr. Crockett stated that most barriers are built on differences. People who think they are similar tend to draw together and to draw away from those whom they think to be different. These are positive suggestions, to be used by a person or a group, to deal with differences:

1. Get as many unbiased facts as possible about the person or group. When each gets the facts, we find that all have some things in common. and it is with these similarities that we must begin.

2. By an act of imagination, place yourself in the other person's stead.

3. Develop the attitude of tolerance toward differences. We will never get rid of differences, for there will always be those cultural, physical, language barriers. Our founding fathers faced with the problem of religious differences arrived at the principle of freedom of religion. The differences are not destroyed but there is unity in the freedom. People are not so different that they cannot cooperate.

Wherever we live there are levels of community thought and action. Christianity calls on us to identify ourselves with the highest level. We are all identified with groups, "we" and "they," and we think that when the group is threatened, the individual is threatened. Where there is a choice to be made, the Christian must choose the better, the higher. The Christian has a call to serve all, to work with all, to love all.

Loving all sometimes creates problems. How can we love our enemies? Love does not mean a "pleasant feeling" for someone; it means respect for human personality. If we are Christian we have to love in that sense of respect, whether the person is WCC, NAACP, or any other. We all have the same history and the same culture. We must love even if we can't like.

Most of us imagine a lot of things that will never happen. We naturally associate with those with whom we agree, and even when laws are changed there will still be differences. We would not want uniformity.

We can work together, share experiences, put ourselves in others' places, appreciate each other. We can be American and Christian. The love of God comes first.

Barriers from the Adult Angle -- Rev. J. R. Boggs, Pastor, Our Holy Redeemer Lutheran Church.

Rev. Boggs began by quoting two passages of scripture, "Love thy neighbor as thyself," and "So faith, hope, and love abide, these three; but the greatest of these is love."

Love is the direct opposite of prejudice. Prejudice is the chief barrier among adults; it keeps people from accepting others. What does prejudice mean? What are its dangers? What are its cures?

Prejudice is emotional bias. There are some personal prejudices that are personal and harmless, such as prejudices toward certain foods or toward clothing, but bias against people of different colors is grave.

Laura Hobson's young son defined prejudice as "thinking someone is a stinker before I know anything about him."

Where do prejudices come from?

1. Experience in life - ideas based on our contacts.

2. News, TV, radio, jokes - stereotypes and preconceived ideas.

We are members of some minority - religious, linguistic, cultural - yet minorities and majorities use others as scapegoats for much of their responsibility. Christians were blamed for burning Nero's Rome; Jews were blamed for the Bubonic plague in Europe.

In the 18th Century an English pamphlet was circulated against a small group of French Hugenots living there. They were called dirty, irresponsible, and blamed for all the ills of the country. One hundred years later the pamphlets were reprinted and distributed with the word "Jew" substituted for French Hugenots Today there are some who are willing to stoop to reprinting the same pamphlet with the word "Negro" there.

Prejudice thrives when morality is disregarded. When restraints imposed by Christianity are gone, "dog eat dog" becomes the controlling principle. We are a generation taught formal religion, but we have overlooked deeper meanings. We have come to care more about the way the church looks than the gospel of Jesus Christ, and the Church stands to be indicted on this point.

Since prejudice blinds and creates disunity, what is the cure? The cure is not in faith alone nor in eliminating poor economic conditions. We must love each other as brothers and sisters in Christ. As Christian people we must take the forefront, not waving banners, but acting as leavening.

Group discussion --

From the floor -- Appreciation was expressed for the concept of love given by Dr. Crockett.

From the floor -- How can we extend our feelings of "we?"

Dr. Crockett: In rearing a child, the mother and father help him to extend his appreciation for others. Contact with members of other groups also helps. All of us can broaden our "we" group, not to the point of becoming one group, but with the idea of "Brothers, go ahead and live."

Dr. Boggs: Just such experiences as these go a long way toward breaking barriers. It is good for Christians to come together.

Dr. Crockett: There are barriers of titles. Many people will call a Negro "Reverend," "Doctor," "Professor," or anything except the simple title of "Mr." On the other hand, many Negroes are sensitive o the pronunication of "Negro." We can say Nero and hero, but why does it seem o difficult for us to say Negro.

From the floor — We all tend to generalize and to magnify little things, so we need to be very wise in choosing who from other groups will speak to our groups. Impressions are formed on little things.

From the floor — In reference to the sensitivity to the pronunication of "Negro," the most liberal student on the University of Alabama campus and the only one who spoke in terms of admitting Miss Lucy to classes immediately consistently said "Nigger." That was the word used by his culture and the word he had been taught. Would we discount his usefulness for the way he pronounces one word?

Mrs. Andrews: We here in Montgomery know how to pronounce Negro, for our Negroes are our heroes.

Mrs. Tilly: During a recent meeting of the Georgia legislature, I was leading a group of women in the study of Dr. Laubach's book, Prayer, The Greatest Force in the World. When we came to the chapter on praying for leaders and officials, they wondered how they could pray for our leaders who were sitting in the legislature passing acts to destroy basic freedoms and to defy the Supreme Court decision. But they prayed first for God's love to flow through them and then found it possible to pray for our leaders.

Mrs. Tilly also spoke in tribute of the bus protest, calling it a "great historical drama" and commending the spirit of it.

Mrs. Andrews: There is a city ordinance against unsegregated meetings, but it does not apply to churches.

From the floor — It seems particularly fitting that women should come together to discuss problems. Women are a minority group too, and through the ages have received the blame for many of the ills of the world. It is good to come together for constructive purposes.

Rev. Boggs: We must pray for people so that they will begin to think internationally. All of this affects other sections of the world. Are we actually Christian America? Two days after the boycott began, it was headlined in Pravda. It is not just a local thing! White people are thinking so narrowly as if the boundaries are just in the State when actually it is a uch larger thing. The ministers of this city need your prayers. Many of us are facing situations of difficulty in leading our people.

Mrs. Andrews: A friend in Germany wrote to ask that I write and explain the things that are happening here in Alabama. How could they be explained? I haven't answered the letter yet.

From the floor — It would have been possible for Methodist women in Alabama to have had a one-day workshop on World Understanding with Indian, Japanese, and American leaders. But since an interracial meeting could not be agreed on, it was decided not to have the workshop. We must pray for people, for God can change them.

From the floor — It has been reported that 60% of the white people have stopped riding buses too. Things may be better than we think.

From the floor — In a city where integration has taken place in the schools, a little white boy and a little Negro boy were inseparable friends. When the mother of the white child questioned him about the color of his Negro friend, he said to her, "I don't know what color Tommy is, Mom, but tomorrow I'll look and see." If we can get young people freed of prejudice, we will have progress, rapid progress.

From the floor — In our situation I am reminded of Roosevelt's famous statement about fear, "We have nothing to fear but fear itself." We must stop being afraid of each other and begin helping each other.

From the floor — In Pittsburgh a woman helped to build understanding by hanging in classrooms pictures of Negroes who had helped our country.

Mrs. Andrews: Attention should be given to some current publications: "What the Negro Wants," by Harry V. Richardson in New South, January 1956; an article by the Rev. Thomas Thrasher in the current issue of the Reporter; and an article by William Faulkner in the current issue of Life.

Introduction of afternoon panel speakers - Mrs. Adair

Breaking Down Barriers in Adolescents -

Mrs. William I. Reeves - Tuskegee, Alabama, wife of a Presbyterian minister and worker with young people.

Miss Mary Lee - Montgomery, Alabama, worker with young people at Church of the Ascension.

Breaking Down Barriers in Children -

Mrs. James E. Capell - Montgomery, Alabama, founder of "Dear Neighbor" clubs, nurse, mother of three children.

Miss Myrtle Williamson - Tuscaloosa, Alabama, Professor of Bible, Stillman Institute.

Breaking Down Barriers In Adolescents

Miss Lee: A questionnaire containing such questions as, "What do you think is the cause of racial barriers?", "Do you discuss current racial tensions with friends?", "What are some solutions of racial problems?", "Does the Church have any part to play?" was presented to adolescents in a Sunday School class, to those in a white neighborhood, and to a group of Negro young people. Answers, of course, were varied, but they revealed that youngsters of both races are thinking and talking about racial problems and that many of them are looking to the Church for solutions to these difficulties. There is a great need in the adolescent for a scientific attitude. They want information, the truth, and it is highly important that during this time of searching and insecurity they be equipped at every opportunity for the discovery of truth.

Mrs. Reeves: A questionnaire submitted to white adolescents in Tuskegee yielded only one reply, but it was obviously a carefully prepared one. It contained three questions and these are partial answers:

1. List some racial barriers - prejudice, ignorance, lack of Christian love.

2. What are sources of racial barriers? Taught by parents, learned everyday through associations and experiences, some know and don't want to learn, we Christians have failed some place.

3. What are your suggestions for overcoming barriers?

   a. Search soul and mind and find out why one feels the way he does.
   b. Read Bible and pray that God will give us guidance.
   c. Those who find truth should tell others.
   d. Approach those who would teach prejudiced ideas with Christian teaching about the problem.
   e. The Christian approach.

How are we going to come to grips with these young people? How are we going to help them? These books provide some of the answers:

Breaking Down Barriers in Children

Mrs. Capell: Scientific studies by psychologists enlighten us about prejudice in the small child. Parents of both races can lessen prejudice in their children by praying, studying, providing a loving and understanding home, and providing wholesome recreation.

Mrs. Williams: Barriers are learned, so children "catch" them from their parents and other older people. If we believe in love, if we believe in one family in Jesus Christ, we must do something about barriers. What can we say to mothers and fathers? We must help our children to see people. We must never be any more aware of the color of a person's skin than we are of the color of his eyes or dress. No mother would dare poison her child, yet some of the attitudes our mothers are teaching their children are deadly. Little children know no barriers; they "catch" our attitudes. Therefore, they can "catch" the spirit of love from us if we will allow them.

From the floor -- Is there some way in which this group could become a permanent organization?

From the floor -- There is need for such an interfaith, interracial group.

Mrs. Andrews: It seems preferable that we have no formal organization.

From the floor -- Perhaps organization is not what we need, but could we have enough machinery to guarantee another meeting?

From the floor -- The loosest organization is the best, for sometimes formal organization strangles a group.

Mrs. Andrews: And an organization must be "for" or "against."

From the floor -- There is need for some group to whom a person can go when difficulties arise, for in Tuscaloosa the officers of the - - - - have been called upon constantly.

From the floor -- Perhaps what we need is a convener, someone to call the group together.

Mrs. Andrews: Person from each place to accept responsibility as "convener" -

Birmingham - Mrs. Tatum
Tuskegee - Tuscaloosa -
Montgomery - Mrs. Andrews, Mrs. Adair

Mrs. Andrews: The time has come now to go home, think through, and decide on next steps.

Introduction of guests by Mrs. Andrews: Mrs. Graetz, Rev, Glenn Smiley of FOR, Rev. Robert Hughes of the Alabama Council on Human Relations.

Benediction: Rev. Hughes

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR RESOLUTION
FROM CONFERENCE OF THE FELLOWSHIP OF THE CONCERNED CLARK COLLEGE
ATLANTA, GEORGIA
OCTOBER 16-17, 1958

I. We recommend that the Southern Regional Council take steps toward initiating a "Save Our Schools Campaign."

The first step would be to call a conference of the Southern business, educational, civic, professional and religious leaders, of both races, to form a permanent "Save Our Schools" organization.

This group should assume the responsibility to set up local counterparts.

We further recommend that in such a campaign the organization use all forms of mass media such as TV, Radio, Newspapers, Bill Boards, etc.

II. We recommend that the Director of the Fellowship of the Concerned be instructed with the help of such a committee as she desires to appoint, to send from this conference a letter to the President of the United States. In this letter we would wish to express:

a.) Our moral conviction of the injustice of segregation and the justice of integration;

b.) Our urgent desires that the president should use his great influence in a national effort to "Save Our Schools." To this end we would request that he call immediately a National Conference of concerned citizens to work together on the implementation of the Supreme Court Decisions on Public Schools. We would recommend that the concerned citizens include southern business educational, civic, professional and religious leaders of both races, especially those who are assuming the responsibility for local leadership toward positive action to prevent further incitements to violence.

c.) We further recommend that we as individuals get as many others as possible to follow this up with personal letters to the President of the United States on this subject.

III. That each of us take responsibility for mobilizing individuals and groups with whom she is in contact to insure adequate representation of concerned citizens in all the preparatory groups for the 1960 White House Conference on Children and Youth. That in this effort we use the following methods:

1. Write Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. for Booklet on 1960 White House Conference. Booklet is free.
2. Get local representation on city and state committees.

Reports of Discussion Groups

Mrs. Margaret Bender, Leader

In the first discussion group the following list of subjects were considered:

1. Where do we go from here on the school situation?

    a. Type of activity we are engaging in communities where there are suits.

    b. Newspapers - editorially and news - what can we do to make a better climate.

    c. What is going to happen to the economically under-privileged child where schools are closed?

        1. What about these teachers?

        2. What about bombing and violence? What can we do?

2. What can be done about our politicians?

3. How does one go about organizing voices of good will to break the silence?

4. What about voting and registration?

5. What can we do about the feeling of our young people on race relations?

The answers to these questions seemed to be that most of all we must not be afraid to state our moral convictions to others. Only by a campaign of speaking one to another can we create a better climate. There was a feeling that each of us had a responsibility to try through the proper channels to influence our newspapers editors to be strong in their convictions and to back the fight for moral right regardless of popularity. It was the consensus of opinion that families can play the largest part for good in creating good climate by starting at home to educate their children in right thinking and to help them be unafraid in their dealings with colored children of their own age and their own background.

As far as voting and registration is concerned there is a movement in all Voters groups to try to bring enough effort from these groups to see to it that the registration laws allow the colored to vote.

A colored participant stated that she felt that many of us as Christians were silent and peace loving and we must speak out because those who do not love peace are being so loud about what they have to say.

The second discussion group was led by Miss Dorothy Height. The discussion was based on the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and our responsibility on its Tenth Anniversary. Resource material: Community Activities Kit.

1. Our eyes must necessarily be on the world.

2. We need to understand and face fear and be lifted by sense of common problems.

3. We need to meet our common responsibility.

4. We need a good example audit.

5. We need tools for involving others.

6. The forces of good will need to be related to positive good specific issues.

When people live in freedom, they will not vote themselves into a war--except in self-defense or to defend principles which they consider essential to the survival of their free society. And if all peoples lived in freedom they would not need to fight in self-defense, for there would be no aggressive wars. The United Nations proclaims this new connection between peace and freedom.

All this brings the matter of peace and freedom back to each of us. Peace comes from freedom. Freedom spreads if it works. It works if you do your part.

Whenever you practice person-to-person democracy, when you strive to understand people of other religions, races and nationalities, when you fight intolerance, when you stand for equality before the law, when you speak up for freedom whenever it is threatened, you are making an important individual contribution to peace. You are setting an example that is seen a round the world.

Thus the lessons we learn about living together and harmonizing our differences--in our families, our schools, our communities, and our nation--are the same lessons that will help us live with other nations in a world where there is peace based on justice and human freedom.

Reports Made at The Fellowship of The Concerned
October 16-17, 1958

Two groups of parents, The Charlottesville Education Foundation and Parents Committee for Emergency Schooling were organized to care for the students while waiting some decision from the courts after the Negro pupils applied.

Twelve were named to be admitted, two in the High School and ten at Venable elementary. The governor declared these schools closed.

The elementary teachers had signed up with one or the other of these groups to work in private homes temporarily.

The School Board asked the high school teachers to keep their contracts and they would be paid. These teachers in turn, as a unit, asked the two groups to merge or unite, furnish buildings, and they would care for the teaching.

This was all arranged on a temporary basis as the governor had promised to reopen the schools in some way.

We are now waiting the outcome of the tests of the various emergency laws passed by the legislature.

Mrs. H. H. Walker
Charlottesville, Virginia

My report to The Fellowship of the Concerned in Atlanta in October: The school situation in Virginia at this time is not good. Six Junior and Senior High Schools in Norfolk have been closed by the Commonwealth and 10,000 children are scattered here and there. A few are in tutoring groups, some are in neighboring cities and communities, many have been sent "home to Grandma" to go to school, some have gone to Business College, trade schools, to work, while some have decided to get married and give up school.

Teachers are sitting home, tutoring, visiting in other cities, etc., while drawing their salaries and waiting around to hear the results announced. Those that live out of town are afraid to go home and expect to be called to meetings for instructions so they are living in a very "unsettled state" at the present time.

All of this came about after the opening date of school had been three times postponed. Then when the show-down finally had to be faced the School Board decided to go ahead with their plan called "the Pupil Placement" plan where the qualified Negro students were to enter the schools where they had been assigned. There were 17 such children who had been given very rigid scholastic tests, had been graded on moral and social standing and found to be beyond question "eligible to enter white schools." These six schools to which the 17 had been assigned were closed by order of Goveernr J. Lindsay Almond. Even the facilities, books, and equipment cannot be used.

Parents, teachers, and some interested persons have formed a group called The Norfolk Committee for Public Schools and have been working tirelessly getting signatures to a petition to the Governor to open the schools. This committee hopes to have 5000 names to take to the Governor on next Friday and hope for results. (6000 names were secured) Then the Mothers have organized and planned for a Mother's Rally which was held Monday night. They had over 1000 present where they presented the petitions and plans to call on the Governor. I have talked with a member of the committee who reported a very successful rally. The Norfolk press did not give very good coverage to the Rally. But in the past they have given especially good coverage to and all plans that were directed toward opening public schools. It was reported to be felt that in this instance pressure by a political group had been brought to withhold news of the efforts of the Mothers.

Small tutoring groups have hindered the desire on the part of some to work for opening of schools. Since the children involved in the groups are being cared for those parents are not concerned for others, and demonstrate a complacent attitude. It has been announced that after this one term or semester that no tutoring groups will be allowed, or that public school teachers will be restrained from assisting in this tutoring.

Mrs. Katherine M. Ennis
Norfolk, Virginia
As reported October 17, 1958

. . . . . .

I urge you to use Little Rock as the "horrible example" of what could happen to any community. In Little Rock the four public high schools are closed by proclamation of the Governor; the private school plan for using former public school buildings and faculty was ruled out by the court; teachers in the public high schools report daily to empty classrooms with no knowledge of what will come next; five of the six-member school board broughtup the superintendent's contract and resigned; school children are scattered over the entire United States; three so-called private schools are operating in make-shift quarters; a few children are taking correspondence courses in homes and churches; many children are receiving no instruction; a suit has been filed to stop payment on the bought-up contract of the school superintendent; a Congressman of 16 years standing was recently defeated by a write-in candidate simply because he believed in moderation and had made efforts at mediation in the Little Rock school crisis; a Women's Committee was formed in mid-September in an effort to preserve the public schools and has now grown from the original 60 members to over 800; the city faces an election on December 6 to choose a school board from a slate of 14, three women and 11 men. The Little Rock school crisis "boils and bubbles onward."

Mrs. Velma Powell
Little Rock, Arkansas

My purpose is to tell you how the youth feel toward racial differences.

1. Last week for the purpose of promoting United Givers Fund we had a film-strip showing a Negro family receiving aid, and a mental patient. At each of these there was a loud cry of laughter. However, after the assembly, many of the students condemned the laughter of a few and were very embarrassed and ashamed of the outbreak.

2. Before World Communion Sunday, we briefly discussed communion in my English class. The teacher turned to a Jewish girl and said cuttingly, "You do not have communion in your church, do you?" Both the student and the class were embarrassed and hurt at the teacher's statement.

3. At a recent M Y F Program on immigration, most believed it was necessary to limit immigrants but not to eliminate them. One boy, who was quite prejudiced against Italians because of an article featuring an unreliable crime report blurted: "I had rather go to school with some "niggers" than with Italians."

Here you see that there are some prejudiced and some open-minded youth. You have suggested at this meeting "that we start with the youth or that we start with the adults." A youth cannot defy his parents' orders or wishes without the risk of punishment or at least displeasure: for example having certain privileges denied him. If you work solely on adults, you give the younger generation more time to grow in the attitudes they possess, but the youth for the most part cannot defy their parents. Thus the attack must be aimed at both the youth and their parents.

THE GOD OF JUSTICE, TRUTH, AND LOVE

Reverend Caxton Doggett

Our aim during this half-hour is to perform an act of worship rather than listen to an address. The Object of our worship is the infinite God. But the nature of God is too vast to be in its entirety the focus of our narrow, limited minds. What we can do is to meditate on several attributes of God which inspire people who are dedicated to the achievement of improved human relations. And we can pray, in silence, each in his own way, even though our group includes Protestants, Catholics, and Jews.

The God of Justice

We worship the God of justice. These words of the prophet Amos will help to direct our thoughts. "Thus says the Lord, the God of hosts, the Lord... 'Let justice roll down like waters, and righteousness like an everflowing stream." Try to visualize this spectacular picture of justice thundering down from above like Niagara Falls and flowing across the land with the majesty and power of the Mississippi River.

If we are devoted to God we are devoted to justice. This devotion to justice means at the very least that we pay attention to injustice, that we develop a capacity to feel indignation at the sight of injustice, to feel a deep personal dissatisfaction over the mistreatment of human beings, and to be willing to make a protest, to cry out, to call attention to the victims of wrongdoing.

In central Florida a few years ago a colored man named David McKendrick Reese was arrested and charged with murder. The jury acquitted him. Then public officials just forgot about him. They kept him in jail nineteen months without charging him with any crime. It was the sort of thing that could only happen to an ignorant, underprivileged man. Yet when the facts came out there was no widespread wave of indignation such as there would have been if the man had been a white man from a prominent family.

In Alabama, Jimmy Wilson was condemned to death for the theft of $1.95. The Christian Science Monitor called it "an echo from the Middle Ages." Indignation saved Jimmy Wilson. All over the world people expressed outrage, especially the colored people of Africa and Asia. The governor finally commuted the sentence to life imprisonment, but many of us would feel better about it if more of the indignation had come from our Southern states.

Indignation is not a comfortable emotion but it is a Christlike emotion. It doesn't make us sleep soundly and feel that "God's in his heaven, all's right with the world," but it does make us act as people ought to act who worship a God of justice. Martin Luther King writes in his great book, "Stride Toward Freedom" that on the eve of the Montgomery bus boycott, "Something began to say to me, 'He who accepts evil without protesting against it is really cooperating with it." That, it seems to me, is what it means to worship the God of justice.

Let us now bow our heads in silent prayer that God will inflame us with a passion for justice and a heartfelt indignation at the sight of the mistreatment of human beings. Let us pray.

(Period of silent prayer)

O God, make justice roll down over our society like a mighty waterfall. Help each of us to translate our devotion to Thee into human attitudes and civil laws which bring justice to the weak, the ignorant, and the poor. Amen.

The God of Truth

We worship the God of truth. The author of Psalm 51 sang: "Behold, thou desirest truth in the inward being." Jesus said to Pilate, "For this I was born, and for this I have come into the world, to bear witness to the truth."

To worship the God of truth is to be devoted to truth, to have a passion for truth, to stand in reverence and humility before facts even though they may contradict cherished opinions.

Prejudice is the greatest enemy of truth because it is an emotional attitude which flourishes in detachment from the facts. Thus it has come about that in the current school crisis, truth has been one of the first and greatest casualties.

Recently I was invited to lead a discussion group of young adults in a state conference of my church, The Methodist Church. The group was made up of young married people, from all over Florida, including a number who had been brought up and had gone to school in northern states.

Quickly the group moved into a discussion of school integration and inevitably a segregationist voice was raised to make the so-called ultimate argument. He was opposed to integration because it would bring about large scale intermarriage.

I decided to forget the books and pamphlets I had before me on the table and try to get at such facts as could be established within the personal experience of the group. I asked how many members of the group had gone to integrated schools. Four or five hands went up. Then I asked these how many interracial marriages had occurred among their schoolmates. The answer was "None." Next I asked how many interracial marriages they had even heard about in the communities in which these schools were located. Again their answer was "None." So the fact we faced was that those in our group who had gone to integrated schools had no personal knowledge of a single interracial marriage. The further fact we faced was that our red hot segregationist wasn't the least bit impressed with this fact. He had made up his mind, he was filled with a great fear, and facts had nothing to do with it!

The 1954 Supreme Court decision has been bitterly denounced because, according to its critics, it was based on sociology and psychology. But truth is "a many splendoured thing." There is mathematical truth and biological truth and astronomical truth and psychological truth and sociological truth and it is all God's truth.

The Supreme Court acted upon a truth of psychology, accepted all over the world as a fact by the authorities in that field of knowledge, the fact, namely, that segregation, with the sanction of law, instills a feeling of inferiority which retards the growth and education of a child, so that no matter how fine the school building, education is inferior if it is segregated. This fact has been denounced and rejected but it has not been disproved.

To worship the God of truth involves a willingness, yes an eagerness, to get at the truth of a matter. "Behold, Thou desirest truth in the inward being...You shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." Let us bow in silent prayer before the God of truth,

(A Period of Silent Prayer)

O God, great source of all truth about man and the world in which he lives, give us wisdom to recognize thy truth and the will and courage to live by it. Make us humble before any truth which challenges the falsehood within us. Amen.

The God of Love

We worship the God of love. "God is love, and he who abides in love abides in God, and God abides in him." (I John 4:16). John said that. He also said: "We know that we have passed out of death into life, because we love the brethren." (I John 3:14). "You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your strength and with all your mind." (Luke 10:27). Jesus said that.

And now I want to read a beautifully written commentary on such passages of Scripture. I have in mind a portion of a chapter entitled "Central Fire" from the new book, "Southern Heritage" by James McBride Dabbs, president of the Southern Regional Council. (One of the by-products of the struggle over segregation is the appearance of a new type of Southern literature, a literature depicting not the mouldy, decaying South of William Faulkner or the lewd and illiterate South of Erskine Caldwell, but a new South of splendid promise, fresh vitality, and strong leaders. When has the South produced finer books than "Southern Heritage" and "Stride Toward Freedom"?)

We come at last to the central fire burning at the heart of the South, which, fanned into a blaze by the winds of our time, will do more than anything else to destroy segregation. This is the Christian spirit of love.

To this point we had to come. If, as John said and Jesus showed and we believe, God is love, love is both the beginning and the end of our endeavors, the source and the goal of our thinking...

It is the spirit that struggles to express itself in the lives of those who call themselves Christians. It is the flame they cherish and sometimes by God's grace see burst into a blaze. We ask, then, are segregation and racial discrimination fuel for this flame, good works done in the world which encourage and kindle the doubting heart? Or are these actions cold water quenching the inner fire? Whatever justification we may find for them, is it possible to justify them on the altar of this human-divine love, which burns, however flickeringly, within the heart? Are they such first fruits as can be offered to God?

...I think we must answer no. Still, however, some of us may doubt. We see that most of the reasons offered for segregation are, upon careful examination, flimsy; we see that the dangers against which it is supposed to protect us are for the most part unreal; we see that some of our attitudes in the matter are simply habits, and others a cloak for selfishness, and still others the result of the confusion of life, which is sacred, with segregation, which is only one of its perishing forms; we see, finally, that these old habits stand in the way of certain positive forces within us struggling for expression, chief among them the spirit of love which Jesus expressed and commanded--and yet--and yet--we are afraid it can't be done. We think it ought to be; we really don't want to defend it ourselves; but we're afraid it can't be--at least not now.

Perhaps this vague fear exists in the minds of many Christians. If so, we should name it for what it is. For its proper name may shock us into a deeper awareness of ourselves, and in the fantastic world we have created in the South, that would be all to the good.

It is lack of faith. Faithlessness. No more and no less. If we had more faith in God, we should have less fear. If we were filled with faith, we should have none...

As we believe in love--which is to say, as we have love--we do not have fear. As we are afraid, then, we lack love, and lack faith in a God of love. Our fearfulness is the mark of our faithlessness, and simply means that the essential fire of Christianity burns but flickeringly upon the altar of our hearts.

How may that flame be steadied? By placing it alongside the original, the brightest of all its expressions, the life of Jesus. Contemplating that shining example, we shall find his spirit growing within us and the fears that now cling to our hearts like miasma along Southern ditches in summer dispersing before the beams of the rising sun.

--"Southern Heritage," Chapter XVII

There is one aspect of love that I want to underscore in closing. That is love as sympathy and understanding. Perfect understanding between human beings is impossible, but a working understanding, sufficient to make daily association bearable and even pleasant, is possible, though difficult.

I am a minister. Let me draw an illustration from my profession. Look at the vast difference between the working conditions of the white minister and the Negro minister in the South. The Negro minister who champions the cause of integration does so with solid support from his congregation and from community leaders outside his church. His stand on this question draws him into even more intimate fellowship with the men and women with whom he works daily. In fact, he may even become a hero in the eyes of his people. The Negro minister has therefore with good reason been called "the freest man in the South."

The white minister, on the other hand, is shackled and bound. He may go before his congregation with the same message yet with exactly the opposite result. The majority of his congregation will turn against him.

Some of the men and women with whom he must work closely will now regard him with suspicion and hostility. He no longer enjoys their confidence and the fellowship circle is broken.

I am not defending the excessive caution and timidity of white ministers. I am saying that the Negro minister has in his personal experience nothing to compare with the experience of the southern white minister who tries to persuade his congregation that integration of schools is right. So it comes about that many Negro ministers feel their white brothers are cowardly and indifferent, while white ministers in their frustration conclude that their Negro brothers are unfair and unreasonable.

One is reminded of these line by Elizabeth Burrowes:

Between us silence stretches far,
My brother, oh my brother.
How can we hail a distant star
Who cannot speak to each other?

I remember some lines from a Broadway musical I saw several years ago. It was "Lost in the Stars," Maxwell Anderson's musical version of Alan Paton's beautiful but tragic story of South Africa, "Cry the Beloved Country." Stephen Kumalo says to his wife: "Ther's a great gulf between people, Grace, between husband and wife, between parents and child, between neighbor and neighbor. Even when you live in the same house it's deep and wide, except for the love between us. But when there is love, then distance doesn't matter at all--distance or silence or years." Then Stephen sings a hauntingly beautiful song to his wife. The song is called, "Thousands of Miles."

"How many miles
To the heart of a child?
Thousands of miles, thousands of miles.
When he lay on your breast
He looked up and smiled
Across tens of thousands,
Thousands of miles.

Each lives alone
In a world of dark,
Crossing the skies
In a lonely arc,
Save when love leaps out like a leaping spark
Over thousands, thousands of miles."

Today we can paraphrase this song:

How many miles between white and black?
Thousands of miles, thousands of miles.
Each lives alone
In a world of dark,
Crossing the skies in a lonely arc,
Save when love leaps out like a leaping spark,
Ocer Thousands and thousands of miles.

To worship the God of love is to take into one's soul agape, the divine love, the spark that leaps across thousands and thousands of miles that separate brother from brother. Let us ask God to give us more of that love.

(A Period of Silent Prayer)

O God, we confess that we have not loved thee with All our heart and soul and mind and strength. We have not loved our neighbor as ourselves. Have mercy upon us and forgive us and fill us with good will to overcome the bitterness in the South today. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

FEARFULNESS IS FAITHLESSNESS

James McBride Dabbs
President, Southern Regional Council

You remember how, back in 1940, after months of quiet, the Germans launched westward across Europe. I learned something then. For the moment I was frightened as I thought of the possibilities. Then I said to myself: you call yourself a Christian. This is the time to prove whether you believe what you say. Does God rule in the affairs of men or doesn't He? As a Christian you say He does. If He does, what is there to be afraid of? Whatever happens, what is there to be afraid of? All things will still work together for good to those who love Him.

Strange to say, I didn't worry any more. I had shamed myself into faith. I had reminded myself of what I said I believed, and had asked myself if I was sincere; and I had found peace--as Melville once put it--deep down and far inland there, beneath the tornadoed Atlantics of our being.

Today, in the midst of our painful struggle in the South, we need to ask ourselves the same questions. For the basic fear we have to face is fear itself, in ourselves and in others. It curls through our hearts, like miasma along Southern ditches in summer; it steals across our inner landscape until the bright sun of God's love is darkened. How often have you heard good people say, how often have you yourselves felt: I know it should be done; I know our treatment of the Negro is unjust and we should correct it; I would like to do it--but I'm afraid it can't be done--not right now! Is that any way for a Christian to talk? Doesn't it show a lack of Christian faith? After all, is it we who are going to correct this evil? If we really think that, we ought to be fearful; indeed, we ought to despair. What did Jesus say? Fear not; follow me. Take one step with me today. The future is in my Father's hands; even I don't know it.

The simple question we ought to ask ourselves is this: Do we believe these words of Jesus or not? Do we have faith in God or do we not?

Our presence here indicates that we do. But, as is always the case, we continually need to recall our faith, to remind ourselves of what we live by. Especially is this true in our world, where the rush of events half deafens us; most especially is it true in the South, where some men claim they live by segregation--our way of life, they call it--when, really it is poison they die by!

So, we need to recall our faith. We are the Fellowship of the Concerned. May I suggest what I think our ideal is? May I describe this group as I see it? We are those who care without care. We care without being careful. We care without being full of care.

To walk between care and worry is to walk, I think, that narrow path that leads to salvation. Narrow? It's like a razor's edge, and I dare say no one holds it steadily for long. Hence, the significance of the prayer: "Lord, I believe; held Thou mine unbelief." Even in the moment of affirming our faith in God we falter. Either we do not care enough; or we care too much, we are burdened with care. Either we are indifferent, selfish, unconcerned with the needs of others; or we are over-concerned, anxious, and care-worn.

How is it possible to be concerned without care? without worry? without anxiety? We have come to Atlanta because of our concern. Because of our concern, we have attached ourselves to this group. Together with this group, we have attached ourselves to the cause of justice in the South, especially interracial justice; the needs of children and youth; the hopes of parents. But now that we have attached ourselves to these ends, how can we still remain so detached that we aren't troubled by the delay, the obstructions, the disagreements, the antagonisms we have to face? How can we pour our hearts into an effort, and yet remain calm and unworried about it?

The Biblical answer, of course, is very simple. Cast your cares upon God. For He careth for you. But there's the rub. Too often, we aren't sure He does. We just lack faith.

It was partly to reassure yourselves that you organized this fellowship. You haven't come here as a number of separate concerned women; you have come, and you are meeting, as the Fellowship of the Concerned; you will return to your homes as the Fellowship of the Concerned. This fellowship is the main source of your faith. To be more exact, I should say that you organized this fellowship because of earlier fellowships you had known: in the family, among friends, in the church. For, as St. John truly says, we cannot have faith in, we cannot love God, unless we love our neighbors. It's the love of God we seek: the human-divine fellowship. "Thou hast made us for Thyself, and our hearts are restless until they rest in Thee." But we find this fellowship first on earth and among our fellows.

If such a group as this exists for the deepening of our faith in God, if this fellowship is the earthly sign and symbol of the human-divine fellowship we seek, then in this fellowship we find love and faith, and upon this fellowship we cast much of our care. It is because of this fellowship that we can care without being full of care, that we can be concerned without being anxious. I said we walk a narrow road in the world being between, being indifferent and being worried. If we had to walk it alone, we could never walk it. But we are not alone. Always there are the others, sometimes gathered together like this in happy converse, sometimes separated by the miles but present in spirit, holding our hand, walking with us the narrow road, between indifference on the one side and anxiety on the other, concerned but free from care.

I have a friend--she is also a Friend with a capital letter--a Quaker--who seems to me over-concerned. She is so keenly aware of the woes of life that she is oppressed and saddened by them. I cannot think this is best. It's true, compassion is necessary for healing. The woes of life will not yield to those who have not felt them. But in addition to compassion, there should be confidence, happiness, even joy. The New Testament is a book of joy. I sometimes wonder about the picture we have of Jesus as a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. Doubtless at one level he was. But he was also a good companion, a friendly man, a warm-hearted friend.

The thought of Jesus reminds me that our fellowship also stretches backward through time. It is rooted in the Judaeo-Christian tradition, to which all of us belong; it is also rooted here in the South, where we learned that tradition. We Southerners are apt to forget this, especially in trying times like the present. We live in a region noted for its conservatism, where people don't emphasize ideals. Indeed, I had an uncle whom I once overheard remark to an aunt: "Ideals are a sin, Alice. We should love God." He was a Christian gentleman and I was an idealistic youngster, and I was shocked. I had been attending Y.M.C.A. conferences at Blue Ridge, North Carolina, and had participated in vesper services on the slope below Robert E. Lee Hall. Seated on the grass there, I had seen the sundown fade over the Great Craggies, and had beheld my ideals outlined against that luminous sky. And here was a man whom I loved and respected saying "ideals are a sin."

I think I know now what he meant. He was a true Southern conservative, who loved his land and his neighbors and life in all its actual complexity, the good interwoven with the evil, and he was suspicious of people who got notions in their heads, and idiosyncracies; who took the bit in their teeth, and ran away after this or that or the other, calling it God. Yet he had ideals; a conscience and a code; and he would never have thought of betraying them. They were ideals, however, deeply rooted in the life around him.

Well, so were the ideals I had at Blue Ridge. I've had no occasion to deny them, though I shall admit I find them more difficult of attainment than I thought then. But even then the scene that expressed them for me was symbolically true. For I saw them, as I said, at twilight, resting upon the mountains and rising against the sky, The Psalmist said, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills whence cometh my help." I beleived then, as I believe even more deeply now, that the Lord who made heaven and earth will also help me. The force that upholds the hills upholds me too, me with my dreams and hopes for a better world.

Where did they come from, these dreams and hopes? Where did our ideals for a better South come from? Whence our ideal of justice? From the South, as we came from the South. Body and Soul, we came from the South. When we speak, we are the South speaking. Our dreams are Southern dreams. If you say, No, these are Christian ideals we stand for, that is true, but they are Christian ideals that the South transmitted to us and colored in the transmission.

We should be ashamed to remain silent while people say that segregation is a dream of the South, our way of life. It is, in fact, a towering nightmare, a way of death. Whatever truth it may have had--and all customs have some truth, or they couldn't become customs--whatever truth it may have had is fast seeping away, and it becomes more and more a sham, a falsehood, in the world we live in. Of course, it's a tradition--though a rather young one. Hot biscuits and fried chicken are traditions. Now, that's what I hold to. But, to be serious, so is our desire to be agreeable a Southern tradition; and our sense of justice. Every society has many traditions; some helpful, some indifferent, some harmful. In what does our freedom consist but in choosing from the many traditions, the many ways of acting that have come down to us those that seem to us most vital and compelling? You may follow the tradition of hot biscuits complacently--if you disregard the bathroom scales. You may support and exemplify the increasingly negative and evil tradition of segregation. OR--you may do what we're trying to do here: lay your hand upon the great heart of the South, feel it throbbing still, and receive from it the life that will carry you forward in confidence and strength.

I'm calling your attention to the fact that the Fellowship of the Concerned exists not only in the present, as represented by this group here today, but existed in the past, and here in the South. If we feel lonely, it's because we don't know the tradition we belong to, don't feel our ideals deeply rooted in the South. Where else could they be rooted? Roots, even of ideals, must penetrate earth and wrap themselves around things. If you were brought up in this land and among these people, it is in this land and among these people that your ideals are rooted.

And here, my friends, is where we of the South have an untold advantage over the idealists of other parts of the nation. Our past has been manifold and varied;filled with the sharpest contrasts; the gayest comedy, the deepest tragedy; splendid success and utter failure. We have the advantages the Prodical Son had over the Elder Brother. I'm not praising sin; I'm merely recognizing the uses of adversity. We had the fleshpots of Egypt in '61 and were eating with the swine in '65. This great fall is a source of regional wealth we haven't yet tapped. I don't mean wealth for fiction and poetry. We have tapped that pretty well. I mean wealth of character, of experience.

We shall not, then, like some liberals, run in wide circles and bay the moon. It may be a little difficult for us to say exactly what we're striving for. But our ideals, though vague, are deep and enduring. The fellowship we feel today is rooted in the past. Consider several of these ideals.

In the first place, as Southerners we desire to be agreeable, we want to get along with people. We approach people--almost anybody--with the feeling that we'll find them friendly if we stop to talk. We expect them to meet us halfway, and usually we aren't disappointed. A significant thing happened in Little Rock last fall. Disturbed by the condition at Central High School, the churches of the city held a day of public prayer. By and large this is what they prayed: "Lord, we've had bad manners; we've been disagreeable to one another; we're ashamed. Forgive us and make us agreeable again."

What were we told, over and over as children, when we had done some unmannerly thing? "Ain't you 'shamed!"

I don't say that this Southern ideal of agreeableness will make the world over, or even the South. It certainly won't do it tomorrow. Also, if that's the only ideal we have, we haven't much to tell the world, or even ourselves. But we are certainly opposed to disagreeableness.

The problem is this: How to be the friendly person Jesus apparently was, and yet speak the sharp words and do the clear deeds he did.

If we go back to Little Rock, we can pick up the second Southern ideal, honored, it is true, somewhat more in the breach than in the observance: the ideal of justice. This belongs clearly to the Judaeo-Christian tradition. It is significant that Little Rock--again speaking generally--neither begged forgiveness for past injustice nor pled for future justice. Apparently it didn't think of it. How, then, can I maintain that our ideal of justice is rooted in the South?

I shall suggest that, though deeply rooted here, it has never flowered here, but that the climate today is rapidly changing and that soon it may. It is we who will help bring it to bloom. I speak then to the roots of justice in our hearts in the belief that this is the season for cultivating them.

As I suggested, the South is considerably like the Prodical Son. One reason that young man was saved was that he chose such an outrageous way of going to the devil. The Elder Brother really went just as far from home. Indeed, he went farther: you remember he was still absent, he just wasn't there when the younger brother returned. But he never knew that he was absent, that he'd ever left home at all. You see, he was a successful beef farmer, a member of Rotary, and probably an elder in the First Presbyterian Church. But he wasn't, to his own heart's knowledge, his father's son. His younger brother, however, observing at close range the snouts of the swine, recalled by contrast his Father's face and his own true inheritance: he came to himself and headed home.

The South, like the Prodical Son, chose to get rich quick by the outrageous method of frankly owning and exploiting Negroes, first under slavery, later, less successfully but still directly, under segregation. Because the method was so outrageous, the South generally speaking hasn't since the Revolution been assured of the basic justice of its social order; indeed, it has had the rankling sense that this order was based upon injustice: and this sense has deepened with the growth of the humanitarian and democratic spirit in the Western World. Though continuing to act unjustly, the South has always been troubled by the fact; indeed, it has tried to quiet its troubled heart by the agreeableness we spoke of just now.

There are many admissions in the history of the South of this continuing injustice. I shall quote only a few sentences from our own Southern historian, Bell Irvin Wiley, of Emory University. Mr. Wiley is speaking of slavery, but the same general comments can be made about segregation; in a sense, segregation is an even less moral and responsible system than slavery was. Says Mr. Wiley: "It is a well-known fact that slavery was widely regarded as an evil among Southerners of the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries.... In November, 1861, Mary Boykin Chesnut, at the conclusion of a long apology that plainly revealed a troubled conscience, wrote in her diary: "We are human beings of the nineteenth century, and slavery has to go of course...I hate slavery... When the tide of war turned against the South the guilt complex became more oppressive and some devoted Southerners who were honest with themselves confessed the conviction that God was punishing the South for its sin of slavery." Similar remarks have been made about segregation. A conservative business man said to me a half-dozen years ago: "Of course, we're unjust to the Negroes; but what else can we do?"

So by plain injustice, the root of justice has always been kept alive in the Southern heart. But what reason is there to believe that now the spring is coming and the root will put forth leaves and flowers?

The reason is that there are powerful, growing forces within and without the South demanding justice. Justice is a two-way street; men come and go upon it; there is give and take. We do justice both because the love within us desires it and because forces outside us demand it. Today, the Negroes themselves demand it; and they have increasing economic and political power to back up their demands. The colored world, composed of more than fifteen hundred million people, demands it; and as citizens of the United States, desiring survival, we are not deaf to those demands. Therefore, when our deep heart urges us to move forward toward interracial justice, it is the buried heart of the South that urges us; it is also the wide world that urges us, the demands of colored people everywhere, the plea of our country for survival amid the bitter winds of today. In brief, God is working, both within us and beyond us, to bring justice to the Negroes of the South.

There is at least one other ideal we have that is deeply rooted in the South. This is our interest in people, our feeling that life is personal, our desire to establish personal relationships. This is also the basic Christian ideal; and this is one of the main things the South has been driving at, though very poorly and in a sadly limited way. The matter is too complex to be discussed here; I can do little more than mention it. It is commonly admitted that the South has always been a highly personal society; even our institutions are personalized; even there we tend to deal with one another as men, not as bureaucrats or "organization men." Many of these relationships are highly arbitrary; many of them highly unsatisfactory. But they tend to be personal. The one great exception is the white-and-Negro relationship; and even this is by no means a complete exception. Between the races we whites have drawn the curtain of segregation--we might call it the Cotton Curtain, since it came mainly from cotton. By interposing this curtain, we have tried to make the Negro impersonal--not a man just a Negro. By God's grace, we haven't entirely succeeded in this evil, this selfish attempt. Some personal relationships still manage to be maintained through the curtain, and in spite of it. But the main point is this: the curtain separates us not only from the Negro, but also from our own deepest nature: it goes against our grain. Deep down, whites and Negroes want to treat one another as they treat the members of their own race--like people. Therefore, when expressing your Christian ideal of the value of the person, you draw aside the clinging curtain of segregation, you are also expressing a basic Southern ideal.

I may have wandered widely in the last half-hour, but I hope I haven't been baying at the moon. What I have said is really very simple. If we will examine our hearts, especially as we know ourselves in this Fellowship of the Concerned, we shall find the faith to forget our cares and overcome our fears. For we shall find that no one of us is alone, that we are all rooted in this fellowship, in the rich and human history of the South, and, finally, in God, in whom we say we trust. If we don't trust Him, we might as well go home. If we do, we can leave the care to Him, and run with joy the race that is set before us.

Mrs. John S. Correll

Rabbi Rothschild appeared on the afternoon of Thursday, October 16th. These are his words. The results of the bombing turned out to be:

1. The bomb released inhibitions of people of Atlanta and the South. The newspapers in Atlanta have been given a new freedom of speech.

2. The magnificent response from the entire community has been overwhelming. The spontaneous welling up of feeling in the community against this violence is proof to him of the acceptance of all religion in our community, and that most people are decent.

3. He had been asked if his outspoken attitude on community problems could have any connection with the bombing and he said no, this did not have a connection.

4. He felt the bombing had no connection with integration. It is and seems to be a result of "A band of bigots whose direction is Anti-Semitic. He said he had received a letter in which he was accused of: "being worse than the Negro." He felt this is an outcome of a group who advocate violence and he stated that we must do something about this act because "if you counsel violence you no longer can control its direction." Nashville and Atlanta have been the only two cities where violence has been committed that there has been such a terrific indignation expressed when the violence was against a Jewish temple.

Note: January 6, 1959 - We have just called Rabbi Rothschild's secretary:

Question: Has there been sustained interest in the city in the bombing of the Temple?

Yes, it has never lagged. The interest was especially sustained around Christmas time. It is amazing how many letters were received around Christmas. The bombing drew the city closer together. I was greatly amazed by the interest of the whole community and whole country.

Seekers of the Way
Mrs. Lois Reeves

1. Temper my Spirit O Lord

2. O the Triumph Song --

   Decision for Christ
   I cannot sing it long enough
   I cannot sing it loud enough
   Yes I must share it with the throngs --

3. Where Cross the Crowded Way of Life
   Where sounds the cry of race and clan
   Above the noise of selfish strife
   We hear thy voice O Son of Man.

4. Now I see the crowded way--
   Haunts and huts
   Dives and Shanties
   Mansions and Missions
   Estates of Plenty-Hovels of poverty
   "There's where His feet rest among the poorest, the lowliest and the lost.
   Pride could never approach to where He walketh
   In the clothes of the humble My heart will ever seek the way
   To where He keepeth company, With the companionless among the poorest
   The lowliest and the lost.

5. WHAT SHALL I DO WITH MY LIFE?

6. Once to every man and Nation comes the moment to decide!
   In the strife with truth and falsehood!
   For the good or evil side!
   Some great cause God's New Messiah!
   Offering each the bloom or blight!
   And the choice goes by forever!
   'Twixt that darness and that light.

7. I shall take my soul and stand by Him -
   And walk and talk forever with My Lord -
   For as long as there is one imprisoned body, one imprisoned mind, one imprisoned spirit, one black woman on her knees -
   Hands and heart upreaching or one white woman secretly at prayer -
   Tucked in her closet pleading for the cause of Christ and His love for all mankind or one black baby standing in ignorance and Poverty in some be-blighted cotton fields still slaving for a crumb or crust of bread, or one white child in gulped in much and plenty
   But so denied the right to learn the truth or one big blustering demogogue hurling fear into the hearts and minds of hollow men, Throwing bombs on Synogogues and churches; and on who next? My God
   We do not know but this one thing I know I cannot be free! --
   Only as I walk and work with Thee my Lord among the poorest The Lowliest and the lost
   Who ever they are or where ever they may be.

8. Join in the Triumph Song and Let the Master hear your voice reply --

9. Where cross the crowded way of Life where sounds the cry of race and clan Above the noise of selfish strife - we hear thy voice O Son of Man.

10. Yours may be a feeble voice, and yours a strong, and yours a determined one,
And yours a searching one and yours a doubtful one, and yours just loud Enough to wing the breeze, But this one thing I bid you do --
Let the Master know - I hear your voice O Son of Man.
And others who hear you will answer by and by.

11. And a way and a highway shall be there
And nothing unclean shall pass over it.

12. To every man there openeth - a way - ways and The Way -
The high souls choose the High Way
The low souls choose the low
And inbetween on the misty flat - The rest drift two and fro
But to every man there openeth
A high way and a low
And each Man must decide upon
Which way his soul shall go.

13. I am the way the truth and the life and no Man cometh unto His Father but by me.

14. We are the Women of the Way and may we come together with divine affection and appreciation for the Women of the early Church and The women of the past two centuries for it is upon the foundation of their love and faith in Christ Jesus that we continue the building of the Kingdom of God and for this purpose we have come together today in one accord seeking the will of God for our lives
"for such a time as this."

We hold dearly our hopes for the future and our unconquerable faith in God and our children for we are inescapably bound to what ever the future holds for them.

15. Who will seek and find Him and follow Him because of My love and My life for Him?

16. O God may it be Thy Holy Will that we remain in the Prophetic Procession of the Seekers of the way and may the Concern of this fellowship
And the abiding love of Christ Jesus link us tightly to the women of the past, the women of this day and the women of tomorrow who know the peace and joy of His love, seek to share it with all mankind.

17. Come quickly Lord, send Thy holy spirit and bless us forever.

18. For we are the seekers of the way And may our hearts reach out for yours each day
For we are now the keepers of the flame and if the darkness comes we too shall be to blame.
O Heavenly Father -- Let us never, no never forget -- We are the Seekers of the Way. -- Amen

'What Will It Profit Us...?'
by
Ralph McGill
The Atlanta Constitution, February 24, 1959

"If each of us can be helped by science to live a hundred years,
What will it profit us if our hates and fears,
Our loneliness and our remorse
Will not permit us to enjoy them.
What use is an extra year or two
To the man who 'kills' what time he has?"
--David Neiswanger, president
The Menninger Foundation.

Last year, while medical science was announcing progress in the fields of medical and scientific research which will extend the life span, some 16,000 persons destroyed their lives. More than a million others moved into the chronic stupor of alcoholic or drug addiction. They thereby learned, however, that their frustrations were not "drowned" but could swim in sherry, beer or booze.

The writer of the nation's largest syndicated advice column, noted for the sincerity of her efforts to advise, said in a recent conversation that one of every six alcoholics is a woman and most of them are solitary home drinkers. "They seem to think," she said, "that if the drink doesn't come out of a shot glass it isn't really drinking."

One would not expect to encounter the psychological effect of legends and traditions in such drinking. But most of the feminine, solitary sherry drinkers come from the South. Psychologists think probably it is because one of the old plantation traditions was that of the decanter of sherry.

Whatever the reason, many of the feminine alcoholics are sherry drinkers. They belt away as much as a fifth or a quart a day, retiring to their bedroom with a "sick headache" or a "gall bladder attack" in the late afternoon before the children come home. Save that they are protected and not likely to be arrested, they are close kin to the "wino" bum who drinks his in an alley and is picked up for being drunk on the street.

These mentally sick women rarely turn to Alcoholics Anonymous because they live with the fantasy that they really don't drink. They drift on to disgrace themselves and bring sorrow to all about them.

At least 10 million Americans are in some degree incapacitated by some kind of emotional disorder.

Juvenile delinquency, which is itself a mental disturbance reflecting some aspect of home life, including often that of the drunken father or mother, was up 17 per cent.

Science is making life longer. It can make life better. The sick and suffering mind can be cured.

It first must be understood that mental illness is a greater destroyer than any one of the great killer and crippling ailments such as cancer, polio and heart trouble.

Mental health associations in the various states must have the understanding help of the citizens who first must understand that the "warehouses" filled with mentally sick should be replaced by multiple hospitals served by adequate staffs of trained psychiatrists.

As it is important to detect cancer in its early stages, so it is with mental illness.

It is a revealing commentary on our time and the state of the nation's mental health that literally millions of disturbed persons have no place to turn for advice save to writers of newspaper columns on that subject.

A Phi Beta Kappa key cannot unlock the answer to many problems any more than an inarticulate person who cannot frame the words to ask.

There is much evidence of a vast immaturity in our national life. We have perhaps taken too many images from the movie screens and the picture tube of what some call the idiot box.

But whatever the explanation, this problem of mental health is the greatest one before us.

"DRIVER HAD BEEN DRINKING"
These four words account for more of our tragic automobile accidents than all other causes combined

Condensed from Traffic Safety Paul W. Kearney

Reader's Digest-October 1959

Last November a Detroit driver wiped out seven lives. Befuddled by liquor, he was driving the wrong way on a four-lane divided superhighway in Ohio when he plowed head-on at high speed into another car.

This killing was not unusual. Though the public is unaware of it, the "had-been-drinking" driver is involved in more than half of all our traffic deaths today!

Such statistics do not make a personal impact on most of us because we think they involve "drunken drivers"--and "we don't get drunk." But studies show that the greatest highway menace is not the reeling, babbling drunk, as most of us believe, but the typical social drinker of acceptable status who rarely, if ever, gets crocked. His name is legion and for this reason the police symbol HBD--Had Been Drinking--has a deadly pertinence.

"It can be stated unequivocally that alcohol is the single largest factor in our motorcar-accident situation," Dr. Horace E. Campbell, chairman of the Colorado State Medical Society's automotive-safety committee, told the conference of the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators last year. "It is equal to all other causes conbined."

Grim confirmation comes from autopsies promptly performed on drivers killed in accidents. In Montana, 55 percent had sufficient alcohol in their blood to impair the driving of the average individual; in Nassau County, N. Y., 50 percent; in Grand Rapids, Mich., 60 percent; in Baltimore, 52 percent.

Of 69 drivers who were killed in New York City in 1957, medical analysis showed that 38 had been drinking.

One of the most convincing studies was made in Westchester County, N. Y. Doctors autopsied 83 victims of single-vehicle accidents--those involving neither other vehicles nor pedestrians. They reported to the American Medical Association that 58 had been drinking enough to impair their abilities. A similar test by the Delaware state police showed that 80 percent had been drinking.

The use of chemical tests of the breath or body fluids in diagnosing inebriation is now accepted by the American Medical Association, the American Bar Association, the National Safety Council, and the supreme courts in 41 states. Legally, any driver with .15 percent or more alcohol in his blood is considered intoxicated. Any driver with .05 to .15 percent is not considered intoxicated unless there is corroborating evidence.

When the American Medical Association endorsed these standards in 1944, it observed that "these limits are purposely made liberal so that no injustice will be done to the person with unusual tolerance." A mounting volume of research and experience proves that the limits are much too liberal, that driving skill begins to deteriorate measurably after more than one drink, or at about one fifth of the blood alcohol level our courts consider intoxicating. Said seven world medical authorities on the subject at the Symposium on Alcohol and Road Traffic at the University of Indiana in 1958: "It is the opinion of this committee that a blood alcohol concentration of .05 percent will definitely impair the driving ability of some individuals. . .and at a concentration of .10 percent all individuals are definitely impaired."

Not only do individuals differ in tolerance to liquor; the same person varies form time to time. But generally Mr. A can handle more than Mr. B because his system oxidizes (burns up) the alcohol faster; hence he can drink more with less effect on his brain. The 150-pound adult can oxidize about two-thirds of an ounce of whiskey per hour. Thus one ounce of whiskey (or one bottle of beer) per hour is considered safe drinking for most people who are going to drive home later. Such an intake would hardly register in a chemical test an hour after the drink.

The typical drinker will approach a blood alcohol level of .05 percent on two ounces of whiskey or two bottles of beer, retaining this concentration for at least an hour. (Some experts insist that this is a definite zone of impairment.) If he takes a minimum of four more ounces of whiskey or bottles of beer over the duration of the usual social gathering of two or three hours, he will probably reach the .15 percent level of legal intoxication. Even if he now stops drinking, his driving may be impaired for another six to ten hours, because the average adult's blood alcohol level decreases by only .015 percent per hour after the final drink.

Widespread tests show what happens to drivers at even the low blood alcohol level of .05 percent. They have difficulty in deciding what to do in emergencies requiring judgment. Though their manual reaction time may be fairly good, they take much too long to decide what to do. And they show a "so what" attitude.

Most of this has been known in scientific and law-enforcement circles for a long time. But trying to do something about it has been about the most frustrating and discouraging of all police work. Convicting even the obviously intoxicated is a long and difficult process. Since a conviction is serious, and since the bulk of the offenders are socially acceptable, they spend heavily to get out of the jam. Tolerant juries are disposed to "give the guy a break" unless he is pretty unsavory. They are all too willing to believe the defense testimony that the suspicious odor of alcohol was only a medication applied by a dentist; that the accused was staggering because he had bumped his head in the collision; or that he was a diabetic who had taken too much insulin.

Early this year the son of a famous man was charged with drunken driving after police found him slumped on the wheel of his car beside the road. A chemical test showed a blood alcohol content of over .20 percent. But the defendant said a business associate had driven his car there and left him; being very tired, he had moved over into the driver's seat and fallen asleep. The jury acquitted him.

The police long ago quit banging their heads against a stone wall and began booking all but the obvious drunks on such charges as "reckless driving," "excessive speed," "driving on the wrong side of the road," or some other relatively palatable offense. In the words of the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies, "public apathy and the frequent lack of support from courts tempt traffic police to make arrests only when a conviction is assured. In many sections of the country this assurance does not exist."

What can be done? The advent of chemical testing brought the first encouragement: the city of Detroit more than doubled its convictions the first year. In some cities, such as Milwaukee, Wis., Fresno, Calif., and Tucson, Ariz., authorities have fortified chemical tests with color movies which show the appearance and behavior of the accused at the time of his arrest. Tucson obtained 36 convictions in its first two months with this method, without a single not-guilty plea. After the defendant and his attorney see the film, they don't care to have it shown in court.

New York State enacted an "implied consent" law in 1953. This automatically revokes the license of any motorist who refuses to submit to a chemical test when arrested on a drunken-driving charge. As a direct result, New York City's HBD arrests skyrocketed from an average of 200 a year to about 2,000, while state police arrests on this charge more than doubled. Eight other states have adopted similar laws.

The problem is tricky, but some countries have faced it forthrightly. Canada defines the offense as "driving while impaired" as well as while "intoxicated"; in Norway the law flatly states that it is illegal to drive with a blood alcohol level above .05 percent--one third of our legal limit for intoxication. The law is made to stick by periodic spot checks around the larger cities, in which every driver is stopped and tested. Police may also test drivers who have visited cafés or social gatherings where it is likely that liquor has been consumed. Even if there has been no accident, any driver found with a blood alcohol level of .05 percent or more may be sentenced to a minimum of 27 days in jail.

After 20 years' rigid enforcement of such laws, no one feels apologetic about saying, "No, thanks, I'm driving." Making such sensible control fashionable here would save many lives. It offers far greater hope than intensified enforcement, or severe punishment after the tragedy.

In Finland, authorities crack down hard on drunken drivers. Conviction almost always brings a term in prison or a labor camp--40 to 90 days for the first offense if no one is injured, up to three or four years in more serious cases, or even eight years if the driver seriously injured or killed someone. Drunken drivers serving out their sentences of hard labor helped build the beautiful airport at Helsinki.

One simple key to accident prevention for the social drinker is the one-ounce-per-hour formula. (It goes without saying that any motorist should be a teetotaler while on the road; and the toll turnpikes deserve credit for having banned the sale of beer and liquor in their restaurants.)

Dr. Horace E. Campbell, previously quoted in this article, has made an important and constructive suggestion: "The liquor industry itself can do more to foster and develop civilized drinking in this country than any other institution--more than churches, schools and the National Safety Council. The industry is one of the largest and richest. It devotes sizable sums to suggest the prestige and glamour of drinking its products. Let it lay the facts of alcohol and motorcar operation directly on the line, in full-page ads and on the billboards of the country. Noblesse oblige."

But, most of all, the solution lies with the individual--the decent, respectable individual who means no harm to anyone when he starts home after a few friendly drinks. Let him remember the architect who was on his way home one night from a cocktail party. Up ahead in the road was a group of 20 high-school kids having fun on a hay ride. He smashed blindly into the rear of the hay wagon, scattering youngsters all over the road. Eleven were seriously injured. One girl lost a leg. The architect did what he could. He paid $50,000 in cash into a trust fund for the injured youngsters. He deeded over his farm. (He also went to jail for six months.) It was a high price to pay for a few social drinks. But none of it wiped out the pain of those 11 kids, or restored that pretty young leg.

Reports of Workshop Groups

Mrs. Clifford Bender, Leader

"The Church in the School Crisis" - The Clergy, The Laymen

Group One - Mr. Arthur Levin, Discussion Leader
Miss Azie Taylor, Reporter

Individual and Group Responsibility

1) As individuals, we have the responsibility for the action of organizations to which we belong.
2) As individuals and as organized groups, we should make known our feelings concerning keeping the schools open. We should back our ministers and other persons who speak out on this issue and create a favorable climate for such persons to speak out.
3) We must join with other groups who are like minded beyond the church both as individuals and as a group.
4) We should help to condition ourselves and others to desegregate the schools through education and understanding.

Suggested Courses of Action

1) We should get the information and the facts and distribute them to as many people as we can possibly reach. We should call upon and utilize all of the sources at our disposal.
2) We should make known to our representatives our feelings with regard to the school problem.
3) We should work to educate any church group with the goal in mind that they will issue a statement opposing the use of church facilities for the use of private schools.

Group Two - Mrs. Mable C. Morley, Discussion Leader
Mrs. Eleanor Martin, Reporter

Individual and Group Responsibility

1) We must carry out responsibility of respecting human dignity as individuals. Souls have been acknowledged as created in the image of God.
2) Religious groups should speak up. However, the question arises how can religious groups advise in the public school situation when they themselves are not integrated?
3) Ministers as representatives of God should present a definite stand. The responsibility of recognizing human rights and guaranteeing those rights is the joint responsibility of both minister and parishioners. We must remember that economic security is not the only criterion for silence on the issue.
4) We should live to carry out the precepts of God, not merely talk about them.

Suggested Courses of Action

1) We should select small groups and orientate them to the problem through study. Much patience has to be used. We should work in this respect with groups and clubs of young people and women. We need continually to impress the need for recognition and concern of human dignity and respect.
2) We should make our opinions known to our legislators.

Comments about Status of Integration or Lack of Same in Public Schools

Madison, Kentucky, has integrated some of its schools without incident and in Paducah and Louisville, Kentucky, some schools have been integrated using as a basis, academic achievement and where the children live.

In Mecklinburg County, the schools are still segregated as geography has determined that the majority of white children are in one area and the majority of Negro children in the other.

In Johanna, South Carolina, integration is not a problem as there isn't any. People who belong to the NAACP lose their teaching positions. Outsiders test the Negro children and they are disqualified.

In Mississippi, the Negro schools run during July and August and the children are taken out for harvesting during September, October and November.

It is felt that the integration picture in Alabama is an extremely gloomy one.

In Nashville, Tennessee, they are integrating a grade each year. This year it has been the third grade.

Group Three - Mrs. L. L. Jackson, Discussion Leader
Mrs. Mercedes G. Davis, Reporter

Individual and Group Responsibility

1) The problem of keeping the schools open - of integration is one for all of us and not any particular section or segment and we must pray for the strength to accept our responsibility.
2) We must be aware that the Little Rock situation can happen anywhere and be prepared in our thinking for a positive approach.
3) We must realize that change is gradual and think about what we can do to bring it about peacefully. It is a step by step process and we must be understanding about the impatience of the Negroes.
4) We must attempt to cope with the struggle for power and with greed and the lack of ability to act on Christian beliefs.

Suggested Courses of Action

1) We must reduce prejudice in the home beginning with the children and must work also with the older members of the family.
2) We must work to restore the lines of communication between the races and get to know each other and work together as we do in other group situations.
3) We should work with small groups of parents and teachers to break down barriers of communication and to develop concern for the rights and dignities of all groups.

Comments about Status of Integration or Lack of Same in the Public Schools

In Nashville, Tennessee, integration has been accomplished in grades 1-3, and has worked well with some few incidents.

Kentucky has some measure of integration in Louisville, Madison and Paducah, and seems to be moving ahead.

Group Four - Miss Eleanor French, Discussion Leader
Mrs. C. O. Williams, Reporter

Individual and Group Responsibility

1) That we do need the love of God in our hearts to solve our problems

Courses of Action

1) We are agreed there is no easy solution and that there must be a tremendous increase in opportunity for communication.
2) The politicians are listening so we should try to be heard whenever possible. We need competent women in politics.

Group Five - The Reverend David Allen, Discussion Leader
Mrs. Lillian Levin, Reporter

Individual and Group Responsibility

1) We believe it is morally wrong for the church to relieve the public of its responsibility for education. Churches should work for re-opening the schools if they close.

Courses of Action

1) People of good will should take a public stand and support existing organizations working for public education and fight apathy. We should try to organize through personal influence. We should try to stress practical goals such as economics and education but not abandon final goal of brotherhood.
2) We must educate both adults and children so as to smoothe the path of integration.
3) We must use petitions. It has been found that qualified voter's name appearing on same have more influence.

Group Six - Mr. J. M. Dabbs, Discussion Leader
Mrs. J. C. Harris, Reporter

Individual and Group Responsibility

1) We believe that it is the moral obligation of the church, its ministers and its members to take a public stand for public education, using a members manifesto in addition to the ministers manifesto.

Courses of Action

1) We must circulate petitions to keep the schools open signed by members of voting age.

"The Church's Place in the School Crisis"
Dr. R. L. Hunt, Executive Director
Department of Religion and Public Education, National Council of Churches

I like to talk about two questions that I have very much on my mind. How should the public schools deal with religion? What is the responsibility of the Christian towards the public schools?

The Bible was written and the Constitution framed before the problems of our day came into being so we must look for our answers elsewhere, perhaps in the hearts of men.

The public schools in the South have developed since the Civil War and the high schools since the turn of the century. The educational system must be preserved at all costs.

The churchman has a great responsibility for the public schools and he has a responsibility for children other than his own. You are a part time citizen if you vote only. You are called on for more. It is the will of God that you give more than you receive and be a complete citizen. This law must be upheld both nationally and internationally. Jesus said, "I am come that you may live abundantly." Will the church follow or lead the community. In this crisis in the public schools, we must lead. We have been endowed by the Lord with a job to do.

"A Realistic Look at Our Public School Program"
Dr. Lynette Saine
Coordinator of the Reading Center, Atlanta University

> In approaching this problem we cannot turn back the clock to 1868 or 1896. We must consider public education in the light of its full development and its present place in American life throughout the nation. Only then can it be determined if segregation in public schools deprives these plaintiffs of equal protection of the laws.
> . . . (it) is the principle instrument for awakening the child to cultural values in preparing him for later professional training.
> . . . Does segregation of the child in public schools solely on the basis of race even though the physical facilities and other tangible factors may be equal, deprive children of a minority group of equal educational opportunities? We believe that it does. To separate them from others solely on the basis of race generates a feeling of inferiority as to their status in the community.

These are words from the last edition of the Atlanta Journal, May 17, 1954. On that day of the Supreme Court decision in 1954, I read every paper to see just how various editions interpreted it. Previously, I had studied in an integrated institution and had enjoyed the satisfaction of full citizenship. I knew, therefore, just what such a decision could mean in the lives of those who had known years of deprivations. Indeed, I felt real joy in these possibilities.

I realized, also that this decision took courage on the part of the Justices of the Supreme Court, men from all sections of our country, with varying backgrounds and traditions. After long hours and weeks of deliberation they had come to an honest decision about a problem which threatens our democracy.

Soon I noted, however, that as a result of the decisions, the bars of discrimination became stronger rather than weaker. I found that my friends of the white race now had other engagements when previously we had done a great many things together. This, needless to say, surprised and saddened me. I resolved to take a realistic look at the school situation in the South, and in Georgia, particularly.

This kind of approach was possible because as a teacher here at Atlanta University I am invited into numerous inservice meetings, to address commencement exercises and to participate in school evaluations under the sponsorship of the Georgia Committee of the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges. Through these various channels I have visited at least fifty Negro schools in Georgia, one in South Carolina and several in Florida and North Carolina.

I have found, first of all, that the Negro constituents want the best possible educational opportunities and wish to remain in the South to receive them. In inservice meetings teachers express this desire in sessions devoted to professional upgrading or general school routine. As I have addressed graduating classes of from 16 to 66, I have thought of our inservice reviews of Dr. Conant's recent report on high schools in this country. Among the many things that he said was that it is virtually impossible for a child to receive a comprehensive education where the senior class has less than one hundred students. I have wondered how much these classes could have received with limited staff, equipment and resources. I have talked with these students and have found that they are not bitter about democracy but extol its possibilities in classrooms and on platforms.

In the second place, there is no doubt in my mind that it is impossible for Negro children to enjoy full opportunities in segregated schools. I have seen, for example, that in smaller towns the central school administration has built extremely handsome schools for both whites and Negroes, but the Negro ones are monuments to the ills and poverty of the South. They are generally erected in a depressed area of town with little or no paving and landscaping. The libraries and laboratories are limited in facilities and materials, and yet, the States of the South spend twice as much of their total income for education as do many of the more educationally-advanced systems in the northern and western sections of our country. In this school situation it is not wholly a matter of the Negro question, but of an entire region that needs to come into its own.

Finally, I believe that as long as segregation exists there will be a lack of self-respect toward those who experience this unfavorable position. In my own personal experiences I have enjoyed fine relations with clerks and other workers only to have them marred by improper use of a first name when the only appropriate reference would be "Miss" or "Mrs." Then comes the question, "Shall I destroy the fine relationship or request the level of respect which this person wishes for himself or herself?"

In my effort to take a realistic look at our public school program I have attempted to make these three points:

1. The Negro wants the best and wishes to remain in the South to receive it.

2. Under a segregated school system it is impossible to give equal rights to each race.

3. As long as segregation exists there will be a lack of self-respect and motivation which make for true citizenship in any group.

We must all work for equity with understanding so that we shall not let democracy down.

"A Salute to the Fellowship of the Concerned, a World Fellowship"

Miss Eleanor French, Director
Christian Social Relations, United Church Women

I was introduced to the "Fellowship of the Concerned" while in Canada with the YWCA. I have been out of the country for more than a decade and am just now in the first few weeks of a new job and getting reacquainted with the country. Mrs. Tilly had asked me to tie in the racial relations program here with the world picture.

Of course, we all realize the racial problem here is not a regional one but an American one. While abroad, I tried to answer honestly the many questions asked me. I am sure many groups here are working in this field but one does not hear of them very often. I am sure all of us are discouraged at times about the immensity that confront us. But we must realize that this is the concern not only of Southern women but of peoples throughout the world.

Let us speak from my experience in the World YWCA with whom I worked for about twenty years and we will go behind the headlines in South Africa where there are groups of the concerned working quietly and steadily for the same goals as we.

The YWCA in South Africa was first started in 1886 but the movement there has suffered because of a split in thinking. Distressed at the situation there, a staff worker was sent to try to improve matters. As a result of her work and that of other dedicated people, there are now 60 associations there. A National Council of South African YWCA's has been founded. This group at their meetings are fed and housed interracially, a great step forward.

Another illustration of the world wide nature of the "Fellowship of the Concerned" I might take from the World Council of Churches in its recent and continuing "Study of the Common Christian Responsibility Towards Areas of Rapid Change." At the Evanston Assembly, there had been considerable concern regarding the responsibility of the churches towards Asia, Africa and Latin America where extraordinary developments are taking place and the implications in this for the West. In view of this, the aforementioned study was undertaken. The questions asked were four in number.

1. Impact of the West on Asia, Africa and Latin America.

2. The problems of village and rural life where the old patterns have been destroyed.

3. The problems of urbanization and industrialization which arise as countries seek rapid economic development.

4. The need for Christians to understand their responsibility to the building of new political orders conductive to human welfare and freedom.

They have conducted major studies in twelve countries and smaller studies in several other countries. The findings are correlated at the general meetings and action is implemented.

There is a dimension of depth as well as universality in the work of the "Fellowship of the Concerned," people everywhere who are working for justice and equality. Discouragement is there, yes, and isolation when communication breaks down. Sometimes it seems no doors will open but think of the blessing when the barriers are pushed aside and justice rolls down like water. When after soul searching, we choose to be involved in controversial issues, knowing God is in the midst of the struggle.

"Full Partners for Peace"

Miss Eleanor French, Director
Christian Social Relations, United Church Women

Because an appreciable number of the Fellowship would be observing World Community Day today if they were at home, it was thought by those who planned our sessions appropriate to include this on our agenda. I propose that we examine briefly the meaning of this year's theme for World Community Day, "Full Partners for Peace." As you know it is sponsored by the United Church Women.

We in this country are much inclined to have numerous days or weeks set aside for the observance of one particular thing, such as Pencil Week, Apple Week or back to our subject, World Community Day. The latter paints a larger picture, really a world canvas. It is observed all over the world. Despite what a man from Mars or the other side of the moon would say there is an advantage in setting one day aside for a specific concern.

Now let us examine the theme. "Full Partners for Peace." Full may be redundant but it is necessary. I feel the legal definition of partners to be very pertinent here "One or two or more associates as joint principles in carrying on any business with a view to joint profit." The last word is peace. We all know that peace is not the absence of war and will continue to work to remove social obstacles to peace.

I might use the World YWCA as an example of growth towards full partnership. In the beginning the traditional relationship between the newly established "Y" associations and the country where they were established was that of patron to those served. This worked poorly and eventually the idea of mutual service came into being. The World YWCA served as a sounding board for all the needs and gifts, large and small, of the associations. Every branch has an equal access to its resources. One must bear in mind that there are both poor and prosperous associations. All realize, however, that they have something to offer as well as the fact they, themselves, have definite needs. The Jamaica "Y", small and more limited financially can help the "Y" in Canada and so it goes. All those groups feel equal and this situation has evolved over the years.

We may have our doubts about Secretary Day or Pickle Week but we are grateful for the challenge of World Community Day and may it bring us nearer that reality.

"Waiting on the Lord"

Dr. Lewis Deer, Director
Social Education and Intercultural Relations
Disciples of Christ
Indianapolis, Indiana

I feel very strongly that the whole church should be involved that a limited group should not do all the work in the field of race relations. However, we are here because of our faith and belief. We see this challenge as part of God's work.

I would like to read the 40th chapter of Isaiah which deals with the incomparable majesty of God and the never failing strength He imparts to those who seek Him. In a world so fast, social upheaval, rapid motion and mechanical instruments, it is impertinent to talk about waiting.

Henry Leiper wrote in "Social Action," March, 1959, the following:

> "If the present population of the world could be represented by a thousand persons living in a single town, 60 persons would represent the population of the United States and 940 would represent the people of all the other nations. The 60 Americans would have half the income of the entire town; The 940 persons would share the other half. Three hundred and three persons would be white; 697 would be non-white. The 60 Americans would have as average life expectancy of 70 years; that of the 940 would be under 40 years. The average American family, Christian, would be spending $850.00 a year for military defense and less than $3.50 a year to share with other residents the knowledge of why they are Christian."

This is the kind of world we live in. Isaiah compares the idol to God and at every point brings in the challenge. He declares that the majesty of God cannot be compared to things or nature or the activities of men in history. He is far greater than these. He says that they who wait on the Lord are renewed and invigorated for the task ahead. For those who "wait upon the Lord" the picture of Him is not of a God who is just around the corner nor does He picture Himself as being ahead of the Lord. The Hebrew for "wait upon" means "entwine around." Those who are entwined around the Lord are prepared to say they are parasites, dependent for every moment upon Him, the faithful, everlasting Lord.

The Lord says in a political crisis "Go forward." Could you see Jesus hesitating as He faced toward Jerusalem? Withdrawal from activities will not bring change. You are involved and God is too. As you seek to serve Him, the strength and courage will come to do as He requires. They who wait upon the Lord, rest upon Him as a ship upon the sea, a plane upon the air and a swimmer upon the water. You are engaged in reducing racial hostility and will work until there is dignity and opportunity for all. It is the task that God demands and is His will.

As we work and find ourselves at the bottom of the pit, remember that God brings life out of death and we will bring about an integrated community and world which is what He desires.

NOT FOR PUBLICATION

"Kind Hearts and Gentle People"

The Most Reverend Bishop Francis E. Hyland

Many years ago during the aftermath of World War I, a national fund raising drive for some worthy cause adopted the slogan: SUPPOSE NO ONE CARED. These four bold and effective words stared out at the nation from billboards, newspapers and magazines. SUPPOSE NO ONE CARED.

It is encouraging to know that there are some who care, or to use the proper expression of this occasion, who are concerned about the serious problems which confront us in the Southland. It is a distinct pleasure to be with you and to address the Fellowship of the Concerned. May I say that women are usually on the side of the Angels and judging from what I know about your esteemed Mrs. Tilly, I am certain she must be ranked among the Archangels.

In speaking on the subject of race relations, I always feel that I have two strikes against me. Of course, I suppose the ladies know that three strikes are out. As the Catholic Bishop of the Diocese of Atlanta, I represent a very small minority of the total population. In the 71 counties of North Georgia which comprise the Diocese of Atlanta our Catholic people are scarcely 2% of the population. Among our 28,000 Catholic people, only about 1,500 of them are members of the Negro race. The second strike - and in the view of some Southern people a most inglorious one - is that I am a Northerner by birth and rearing. But I am approaching my 10th anniversary in Georgia, and if it is true, as it was when I went to school, that the material elements which compose the human body change completely every seven years, then I must be considered. I used to say to my good mother - she died only three years ago - that if I ever travelled to Philadelphia and found snow there, I would remain at the railroad station or airport and avail myself of the first possible means of getting back to Georgia. But it is not only the atmospheric climate of Georgia that I like. I have become genuinely fond of our Georgia people, not only my own Catholic people, but all the people of Georgia. Among my friends in the North, Georgia has no more stalwart defender than the Catholic Bishop of Atlanta; not indeed that everything in Georgia can or should be defended, but one does not like to hear outsiders criticize his own State.

As a Catholic and as a Bishop of the Church I am wholeheartedly in sympathy with the Negro people in their just aspirations to acquire all the recognition and all the rights to which they have every claim not only in charity, but in justice as children of God, as members of the one human family and as American citizens. On the other hand I realize to some extent the problems which confront the white people of the South the unfortunate and unhappy pattern of segregation has prevailed here for about a century.

Our Negro people are to be congratulated and indeed admired for the tremendous patience which they have manifested during all the decades. Their leaders are to be commended for approaching the solution of the problems of their people through the orderly process of law; admittedly it is a slow process, but it is a sure process which will ultimately result in victory. It is often said that morality cannot be legislated into people. This is a cliche which we have come to accept without analyzing it. Certainly human law does not possess the inherent quality of changing the mind and hearts of people - something which is most desirable particularly in the field of race relations. But human law can and usually does give the right direction to things and the sanctions of human law can and do see to it that the right direction is maintained.

The pendulum is definitely swinging in the direction of the just aspirations of the Negro people, and there is nothing that can stop it: its movement may be slowed up or be retarded temporarily by die-hards, but it cannot be effectively stopped. Although, in the opinion of many, race relations have deteriorated by reason of the specific school issue and I fear this may be true, I venture to say that the overall atmosphere is more favorable now than it once was. In 1954, shortly after the Supreme Court declared segregation unconstitutional, I was requested by the Associated Press to answer a series of questions on the Catholic Church and race relations. I was happy to have this opportunity to give expression to the teachings of the Church and my own convictions. When my reply was published in the secular press, I received a number of letters of denunciation. Several suggested - to use a mild term - that I ought to get back to the North. Last November, the Catholic Bishops of the United States issued a statement on the subject of race relations entitled: DISCRIMINATION AND THE CHRISTIAN CONSCIENCE. This statement of the American Catholic Bishops was carried partially in practically all secular papers. It was published in full in our own Catholic bi-weekly which reaches every Catholic home in Georgia. Copies of the statement were made available to our people in all our churches. There was not a single letter of protest. On the contrary we received many requests for additional copies of the statement and some went out of their way to express gratitude for making the statement available to them. I do not mean to imply that too many hearts and minds have been changed - let us hope this is the case - but certainly people of intelligence can see the handwriting on the wall.

I think the majority of the American people can be depended upon to respect the law of the land. Perhaps they see a parallel in the just aspirations of the Negro people and in the struggle of the laboring man for the just recognition which is his due. Thirty or forty years ago, the laboring man in our country was an economic slave. Neither capitalist nor politician gave them a second thought. For all practical purposes worthy people were without rights and without power. Today, on the contrary, labor exercises tremendous influence in the councils of our country. I dare say that no one can be elected to national public office, and in many areas to state public office, who does not have what is called a good labor record. I think it was the struggle of the laboring man for his just due which was the main cause in bringing about a change in the philosophy of law in our country. At one time the courts of the land were primarily engaged in the defense of property rights. Today the principal concern of the courts of our land is the defence of human and personal rights. Hence, the Supreme Court, which once upheld separate but equal facilities, is gradually but effectively removing from the statute books of the country every law which constitutes a violation of human or personal rights. The Negro in his just aspirations has fortunately fallen heir to this change in the philosophy of law in our American courts.

Your Fellowship of the Concerned is by its very nature small in numbers in comparison with the total population. But I am certain there must be any number of people in our Southland who are genuinely concerned not about any specific issues in the field of race relations, but about the underlying cause which gives rise to these specific issues - the unjust discrimination practised against the Negro people. I would find it diffucult to believe that there are not a goodly number of people in the Southland who would be happy to have the race problem solved peacefully, equitably and effectively tomorrow, if this were possible. But the people of good will in the South have been without effective leadership. In this time of crisis many of the political leaders of the South have failed the people; indeed they have grossly misled them. I single out political leaders because these men have the eyes and ears of the people, as no one else has. Their every statement is published in the newspapers, broadcast over the radio and reported on television. These men could easily have given the correct turn to events in the South; instead they have led the people to believe that they can effectively oppose the supreme law of the country; they have created fears which would have little or no basis in reality, and they have passed laws and made resolutions which serve only to stifle people of good will and intentions. But these latter are nothing but temporary expedients, delaying and irritating actions which cannot and will not stand up under the scrutiny of the law.

In addition to the laws and the courts, there are hopeful signs in other areas. The public golf courses of our city have been integrated. Public transportation has been integrated. Both these phases of integration have been accomplished without incident, or certainly, thanks be to God, without serious incident. I think hope is to be found also in the younger generation. Several years ago - I think it was before the Supreme Court decision of 1954 - one of the students' publications at the University of Georgia advocated the admission of qualified Negroes to the University. Nothing ever came of it, but it did serve, did it not, to show that the hearts of some of our young people are in the right place. Prejudice is not innate in anyone. It has to be acquired or instilled. Granted that some measure of prejudice has been both acquired by and instilled into our younger generation, we must remember that during the past decade or so the question of race relations has been brought out into the open; it is now freely discussed; countless articles are written on the subject. All this means that young people have a much better opportunity than their parents had to form their own minds on this issue. Because of its impact on the young generation it is not at all unimportant to mention the tremendous achievements of the Negroes in the field of athletics. Today our young people speak about Hank Aaron and Ernie Banks - to mention only two of the great Negro professional athletes - just as we of the older generation used to speak about Babe Ruth. Today among our younger people there is a more liberal point of view and I use the word liberal in its very sense. I do not know what you think about the younger generation, but I would be inclined to believe that in the areas of freedom, rights and human relations, they are very likely to be found, like you good ladies, on the side of the angels.

For the remainder of what I would like to say this morning, I must beg your indulgence if I become somewhat personal. The larger and more important external issues of the field of race relations can be left safely in the hands of the courts. The internal change in minds and hearts can I think be committed with confidence to the field of religion. During my ten years in Georgia, I have come to understand that something can be accomplished in better race relations if one goes about it quietly and without fanfare. I am rather proud of the measure of integration which has been achieved in the Catholic Diocese of Atlanta. Some may think it is not worth mentioning, although I seriously doubt if any other religious group can match it; it is far from what is actually and ardently desirable, but at the same time it represents a tremendous improvement over the past. I shall not go back any further than my own installation as Bishop of the then newly erected Diocese of Atlanta on Nobember 8, 1956. There came to Atlanta to officiate at my installation the Apostolic Delegate to the United States, the personal representative in our country of the Holy Father. In the past, on such important occasions, it had been the custom to hold a public reception in one of the better hotels. Of course, this automatically ruled out Negro Catholic people. On the occasion of my installation, we decided to have the reception in one of our parish halls and to invite all our Catholic people. Many photographs were taken on that occasion. I am particularly proud of one of those photographs which shows our Catholic people, both whites and Negroes, standing side by side in line waiting to greet the Apostolic Delegate and myself. One of the presentations that evening was made by a Negro boy of the parochial school of Our Lady of Lourdes.

Many of our Catholic societies and organizations are formed on a parish basis, but many of them have a diocesan-wide organization calling for monthly, quarterly or semi-annual meetings as the case may be. Some of these societies, in addition to these meetings, sponsor at times some diocesan or city wide observances. For example, next Sunday the Holy Name Union will sponsor a rally at the church of St. Thomas More in Decatur. Sunday a week ago, our Catholic Youth Organization sponsored a Holy Hour in our Cathedral Church. This same group sponsors a Vocation Day each spring. Our Diocesan Council of Catholic Women holds an annual convention. At these diocesan meetings as well as to all these sponsored events, all our Catholic people, both white and Negro, or their representatives are invited to participate and they usually do. I might add that on a number of occasions we have broken bread together. Yesterday our diocese was privileged to be visited by His Eminence Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York. All our Catholic people were invited to attend the Mass of the Cardinal in our Cathedral Church.

During the past three years we have held a special Confirmation ceremony for adults in our Cathedral Church. On all three occasions a large percentage of the people in our Cathedral Church were Negro people. At the first such ceremony the pastor of one of our parishes in Georgia brought four of his people to the Cathedral to be confirmed. The pastor wondered how his Georgia cracker people had reacted to the interracial ceremony, something that was entirely new to them. On the way home the pastor asked what people had thought of the ceremony. The answer came with sudden and unexpected finality. "Father," one of the men said, "Wasn't it nice to see so many Negro people being confirmed in the Catholic faith?" My housekeeper is a fine, devout Negro Catholic woman. Several months ago when I was absent from the city, my secretary had to go to the Cathedral to offer one of the daily Masses. He took our housekeeper with him. On the way home, the priest asked, "Rachel, what did you think of the Cathedral?" She replied, "Father I think the Cathedral people are real nice. Some places you go people stare at you. But to those people this morning I was just another Catholic at Mass."

These measures of integration have been achieved quietly, without fanfare, without publicity and without any previous announcement. We just decided to do these things and we did them and it is truly remarkable and at the same time consoling how successful these ventures have been. I think therefore I can assure the good ladies of the Fellowship of the Concerned that there are many who share your concern and who earnestly look forward with you to happier days for all the people of the South.

WHEN NEGROES CAME TO OUR CHURCH

by E. JERRY WALKER

It was the hardest assignment I ever faced.

I had been at Chicago's St. James Methodist church for little more than two months when Silas Brown applied for membership. Of course, churches are always eager to receive new members. But Silas was a Negro.

Already a prominent member's wife had given me "the word" on church policy. It was really quite simple. If the minister insisted on any foolishness, such as "mixing the races" in church, so many pledges would be canceled so fast the the program, and probably the church itseld, would die on the spot! The handwriting, it seemed, was on the wall.

I soon discovered there were two sides to the wall, and the picture was no better outside than in. As far up as school children could reach, the sides of the handsome Gothic building were scribbed with chalk and crayon. Tin cans, paper, broken bottles lay in heaps where they had been flung against the building.

The church custodian was resigned. "Our neighbors don't seem to like us very well," he drawled. "I don't know why."

During the next several weeks I turned up some interesting answers to his observation. Its present building erected in 1925, St. James is Methodism's largest and finest church plant in Chicago. There is a parish house with 75 rooms. The sanctuary will seat 1,000 worshipers. There are two pipe organs, a full-sized gym, two sets of outdoor chimes and most everything else that could be desired in the way of up-to-date equipment.

In the heart of the once-elite, south shore district, the rolls of St. James church contain names like Gustavus Swift, founder of Swift and Company. In the late twenties St. James became known as the "cathedral church" of Methodism in Chicago.

With the expanded war economy of the forties, tens of thousands of Negroes moved to Chicago. In a period of little more than 10 years our predominantly white neighborhood became 85 per cent colored, and the Negro population of Chicago passed the 500,000 mark.

Public schools, in particular, felt the pressure. Large additions were constructed, other buildings purchased. More than 5,000 pupils were enrolled in three public grade schools within a mile of St. James church.

Our Sunday school, meanwhile, had dropped to an average attendance of 25 youngsters, or one for every three rooms in the parish house.

Bishop Charles W. Brashares of the Chicago Area had warned that this would be a tough assignment when he appointed me in July, 1953. "Whatever happens," he said, "even if the church closes its doors in six months' time, we'll stand behind you." I was wishing he was standing in front of me the day I had to face Silas Brown.

Mr. Brown lived in our neighborhood, but his letter was in a Negro Methodist church several miles away. I could think of nothing to do but be honest with him. feet were hardly on the ground, I explained. Would he wait just a little longer and be patient with me?

Next Sunday I looked anxiously over the scattered congregation in our large auditorium. Would Silas Brown be there? Or, offended at this racial bigotry, would he have disappeared for good?

Silas Brown was a big man. He was in his accustomed pew. Like most people, Mr. Brown was responsive to sincerity. Because he believed in my purposes, he was willing to be patient.

One of those purposes was to minister to the people who lived in the shadow of the church, rather than exclusively serving a constituency which had largely moved away. On most weekdays, as children streamed noisily by on their way to and from school, my secretary, the custodian and I were the only persons inside our buildings. It was obvious that we were accepting no responsibility for our neighborhood.

"I think," I told 84-year-old banker Albert W. Harris, "we should begin to bring the children into our building."

Bearded Mr. Harris, whose eyesight is nearly gone and who listens through a hearing aid, pounded his fist on his desk. "You are right!" he said. "Start with the children!"

But where does one find leadership? We had the buildings, but we had difficulty staffing a Sunday school for 25 children. Although our books showed 1,463 members, we knew this figure contained nearly 1,000 people we never would hear from again, except to transfer their names to other churches.

We began to inquire for leadership at the Chicago Boys' clubs, the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Junior Achievement and the YMCA. We offered to make a deal--put up our facilities if they would provide program. The "Y" was immediately interested. A part-time director, Ross Young, was assigned to the church from the Hyde Park YMCA, largest "Y" in Chicago.

Our gym was scrubbed, its floors refinished and relined, and soon the building was a bustle of activity after school and on Saturdays.

I was relieved when church members took obvious pride in this service to our own community. But when an interracial Sunday school was proposed, several pledges were canceled and a few memberships transferred elsewhere. "He's giving our church to the colored," one lady protested. Shortly afterward, a fine damask tablecloth and several other items disappeared from the church parlors, evidently so they would not fall into "undeserving hands."

One particularly vocal club woman protested to my district superintendent, "You have betrayed us! We asked you to send us someone to bring us comfort, and instead you sent him!"

"Have patience, Jerry," my bishop counseled. "It is a difficult situation. But it is good to know there is no question but what you are on the right side."

Church officials saw it that way, too. By an overwhelming majority, an interracial church school was approved. Now all I had to do was organize it.

Strangely, this was not so difficult as it might seem. Following the plan used to put our gym and recreation rooms to work, I looked for leadership on the outside.

Since most Sunday-school teachers already are busy Sunday mornings, we opened our church school in the afternoon. Searching for a director of religious education, I turned to the Chicago Church federation. At the top of their list was Mrs. Virginia Smallman. She was thrilled with the idea.

Soon she had recruited a staff of 37 people--more than the entire attendance in the morning children's division. Six theological students drove down from Garrett Biblical institute in Evanston. Others came from the University of Chicago. Several were teachers in other parishes, including three Negro churches.

Mothers in the community became interested, and under the leadership of Mrs. Sylvesta Bramlette, a former PTA president, a group was formed to make door-to-door calls inviting children to our "Sunday Afternoon Club." It is interesting to me that nearly all this calling committee took Mrs. Smallman's teacher-training course and are now active in the church-school program.

We set a goal of 150 students for that first eight-week trial period in May and June of 1954. By the second Sunday we had passed our goal. One Friday night, TV Cowboy Bob Atcher drew 357 people into our recreation hall. It was the largest crowd from the community ever to come into the church.

All that seems a long time ago. The experimenting is over now. We are beginning to run at full speed. At a community night a month ago, a puppet show brought 1,246 children and parents into the church. The YMCA now has one full-time and four part-time directors assigned to its extensive program in the church.

Silas Brown is a member, along with a growing list of other fine Negro folk who are taking their places in church activities, choir and official board. Several new organizations have been formed, including a junior choir with 127 children enrolled, and a young adult breakfast club which has in it many university and college students. Our church school has been moved to the traditional morning hours now that we have trained an adequate interracial staff of our own people.

And the handwriting on the wall has nearly disappeared. Our new custodian says there isn't a fourth the rubble along the sidewalks he encountered during his first month with us. Even Halloween left no scars from chalk, crayon or soap. And we haven't had a broken window in over 10 months!

The handwriting on the inside? Well--we've had a rebirth, a Christian experience. And interestingly enough, our growing congregation today includes more white people than there were in the whole congregation a year ago.

To me the most gratifying part of it all is the attitude of these white members. At a board meeting last October, I pulled a list of 10 Negro names from my pocket and asked what I should do with it. That was when a most remarkable thing happened. I guess you would call it a sort of testimonial meeting.

Here was a man who, three months before, had said, "If any Negroes sit in my pew, I'm leaving for good!" Now he stood up to say, "I'm going to do my part to see this through."

A woman planning to leave the community said, "But now I don't see how I can. I must stay and help."

A trustee who, six weeks before, had suggested we follow the precedent of nearly all churches who find themselves in our plight and sell out to a Negro congregation, now rose to say, "I want to be the first to welcome our new members. It's the only Christian thing to do!"

A retired executive of the Pullman company confessed, "Five years ago I refused to shake hands with a Negro on one of our trains. I'm ashamed of it. Let's do what is right and do it now!"

The president of a nearby college, who is one of our trustees, said after the meeting, "It's amazing how people have changed these past few months." Then he smiled as he added, "I guess I've changed too."

Our Methodist founder, John Wesley, believed in the personal experience of conversion. When Negroes came to our church, our congregation had a spiritual conversion. As one of our octogenarians recently commented after looking over the best congregation we had had since Easter, "Nothing is going to stop us now!"

I think he is right.

Dear Secretary of Christian Social Relations:

I am sure you know the School of Missions of the Central Jurisdiction will be held here at Clark College the week of June 12.

I am to teach the course on alcohol--and in order to keep the course from being too general and to bring it closer, at least to the state scene, I am asking for your cooperation.

Please secure from your State Commissioner of Revenue a copy of your state laws on the sale and manufacture of alcoholic beverages. You may be able to get it by writing to him or you may have to get it directly from him.

If, for any reason, you will not be able to be at the School of Missions, send it to me or give it to someone who will attend the school.

Thanks in advance.

Sincerely,

Mrs. M. E. Tilly
Director of Women's Work

P.S. To secretaries whose conference crosses the state line, please see that we have a copy from each of the states.

To the Presidents and Chairmen of Christian Social Relations of the 12 Southern States

Dear Friends:

The annual Workshop of The Fellowship of the Concerned will be held at Clark College, Atlanta, November 15 and 16.

In other years, the state Chairmen of Christian Social Relations of United Church Women have been invited, but we are more than delighted this year to include the state presidents.

We are thrilled also to tell you that your National President, Mrs. William Sale Terrell; your General Director, Mrs. W. Murdoch MacLeod; and Miss Eleanor French, Chairman of Christian Social Relations; will be with us. Isn't this wonderful? There will be other leaders also.

Please mark these dates on your calendar and make plans to be with us. The Fellowship of the Concerned is both interfaith and interracial. Thus you will be a part of over a hundred women who will come together to face the mighty challenges of these stirring times, to probe deep into the problems that confront us, to seek to find what God is saying to us is His will and His way, to find our place in His plans.

Clark College is one of the very fine Methodist Colleges for Negroes. Its Kresge Hall is ideal for a Workshop as you know if you have attended one of our Workshops.

We have funds for your entertainment and your travel by bus, plane or train--the easiest for you.

You have the choice of staying at the Piedmont Hotel or in the College dormitory at night. Your three national officers and other leaders and I also will stay in the dormitory, as well as a large per cent of those who attend.

We are hoping you will be with us. We need you.

Sincerely yours,

Mrs. M. E. Tilly

Letter mailed to YWCA list

You probably know something of the Fellowship of the Concerned of the Southern Regional Council and its Workshop each year for leaders in the field of Social Action. The Workshop for 1960 will be held at Clark College, Atlanta, on November 15-16.

Miss Florence Harris, who is one of our advisors on the Workshop has given me your name as a leader of the Y.W.C.A. in your city, and we are delighted to extend this invitation to you to be a participant in this 1960 Workshop. We are enclosing a sheet that will give you some idea of the work of the Fellowship of the Concerned.

The Workshop is interracial and interfaith. The various denominal heads furnish us each year with a list of the people to be invited. If you can be with us you will be a part of over a hundred women who will come together to face the mighty challenges of these stirring times, to probe deep into the problems that confront us, to seek to find what God is saying to us is His will and His way, to find our place in His plans.

We have funds for your travel and entertainment and sincerely hope you will find it altogether convenient to be with us. You have the choice of staying at the Piedmont Hotel or in the College dormitory at night.

Sincerely,

Mrs. M. E. Tilly

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

ATLANTA, GEORGIA

I pondered a long time to find a title for this workshop and finally found the answer in a street scene in my home city.

It was the day the Negro college students had announced that they would march to the Capitol and hold a prayer service. They had talked to the Chief of Police and he had promised them protection.

Two thousand more or less of them began their long march to the Capitol but as they neared it they were diverted by Chief Jenkins because of the danger they would face.

He had seen an angry mulling crowd about the Capitol and the 98 State patrolmen stationed there at 6:00 a.m., and armed with clubs, and ordered by the governor to use them, if necessary to keep the students off the grounds. The Chief, true to his promise, was protecting Atlanta college students from the State police - and angry people.

I stood at a window on the 4th floor of Wesley Memorial building and saw them going down Auburn Avenue. Denied the right to pray on the Capitol steps, they were going to a church to pray. They were marching two by two and obeying every traffic light. The distance had been long and concrete streets are not easy on feet. Here and there were girls with pencil-like heels on their shoes, but never faltering, although I knew they were suffering.

I felt hot tears on my arms, my tears I did not know were falling. I knew they were not marching to gain something just for themselves alone, but for me and all others, that our country might be what it started out to be - a land of equal rights for all people.

I knew then, the title of the Workshop had to be JUSTICE WEIGHED IN THE BALANCE.

BASIC BELIEFS AND SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY

By Thelma Stevens - Executive Secretary
The Department of Christian Social Relations - Woman's Division
The Methodist Church

It seems very presumptious for me to try to bring a message on this subject to a group as experienced and dedicated as you. Your courage under the tensions of these times should call all of us to new commitments and action as we seek understanding of the meaning of our basic religious faith for our social responsibility in today's world.

I cannot think of a better way to begin my message than by relating to you briefly a story about Mrs. Tilly - and Mr. Tilly! I should like to pay tribute to their greatness in these times with one little story. Even many years ago they would go for drives in the early mornings always with Mr. Tilly saying as they looked at the needs and suffering of people - "Dorothy, if I make you see this suffering and these needs often enough you will have to do something about them" And through the years they have translated their basic Christian beliefs into their social responsibility!

Let me call your attention to the world we live in today. A world where the revolution of expectation has become the revolution of demand. In a thirty year period, many things have happened in our world. . .Three great power blocks have arisen, the West, the East and the great unknown quantity of the newly awakening nations of Africa and Asia. The old colonialism is dead and a new colonialism is riding abroad. We may become a part of this new colonialism if we don't take care.

One hundred years is too long to leave the abcess of segregation on our land but "The end of the play is known" as Ralph McGill has said! John F. Kennedy has said "We must prove to a watching world we are the wave of the future." What kind of a wave that will be is up to us. Let us ask ourselves these searching questions. Are we losing the world by default? Are we speaking softly and carrying a feather? This does not apply to the women here! Are we obsessed by the traditions of the past? Have we let the climate of conformity dull our consciences and stop our action? People are so immersed in fear of this kind. The silence of the voices of moral and religious groups across the country has caused young people to question the church itself. This is true among Protestant youth. They wonder when the church of Jesus Christ will loose itself from the shackles of tradition and conformity and step into the world of today.

Micah, the Prophet, has said "What does God require of you but to do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with your God." Isaiah said "You shall be called Oaks of Righteousness." Paul wrote his young friend Timothy saying "God did not give us a spirit of timidity - but a spirit of power and love and self control."

We are called today as of old with "A Holy Calling" that lies at the very heart of our Judeo - Christian tradition.

God did not create us for a life of self-satisfaction and greed, but to a life of commitment to the fulfillment of His purpose for His world - to seek justice, righteousness, mercy, reconciliation, humility and yes - suffering. In our southland we have let the greedy power made politicians use bigotry and prejudice as their platforms.

God has called us with A Holy Calling to be His witness in our home town, our nation and to the whole world.

This individual witness and the prophetic witness of our churches and synagogues can become a great world shaking mountain of power with its source rooted and grounded in our religious faith, which means in brief: The person in God's image - one Father of us all - Justice and love - The coming of God's Kingdom of Righteousness. Its goal is the Redemption of the community life of which we are a part. This community life has no boundaries of geography. In this new age there is "no near, no far."

Even neighborhoods have no real boundaries - only the artificial barriers made up of man's prejudices and fears and lack of understanding.

One of the committees of The World Council of Churches in a report in 1959 made the following profound statement:

"This is what we understand to be the prophetic function of the church. . .to be the watchman, discerning where God is and where the enemy is; warning men of danger. But the task of the watchman is performed not only in speech but by the character and power of his life and the suffering he may have to endure."

In the context of such a witness we are called to do many things. I shall summarize some of these that seem most urgent to me under three interwoven responsibilities:

1 - Information - As responsible leaders whatever our religious rootage may be we must know the facts about our community and our world. We cannot evaluate needs, understand propaganda, or determine priorities for our own task without information. Ours is a complex world with no simple answers - but the very heart of our Judeo - Christian directive is the worth of the person as a child of God.

2 - Indentification - When I was a child I was always hearing the word "Vicarious." It was a strange word to me then - and even now it becomes too much for my comprehension. As I have studied the great prophets of old and Jesus Himself - they "lived" the sorrows and needs and even the sins of the people! The call to repentance by the prophets of old was God's call to His people. But in a world like this we must identify ourselves with the suffering and injustices of people wherever that suffering and injustice exists. We need to understand the fears that make us sin against God's law; understanding brings the healing of reconciliation. We must also understand by this same identification the aspirations and cries of the human heart for freedom and dignity - the chance to be a person! For this there is no retreat! Even the day of the "revolution of expectation" has become the day of "the revolution of demand." Identification may mean suffering and sacrifice to do God's will.

3 - Involvement - To know the facts and vicariously suffer with the peoples of the world is not enough. We must involve ourselves in the redemptive process as God's channels to bring His Kingdom a little nearer. This may call for some very simple task on our part or for great leadership. It may call for a new voice and a new courage within us - eg. (1) It may mean trying to understand the meaning of the "student Sit-in Movement" as a symbol of God's spirit of reconciliation for His world in Mississippi or Virginia or North Carolina or Oklahoma! It may mean a simple word of concern and support to the students involved. It may mean working to coordinate the forces of goodwill in a community to change the patterns of tradition and practice in relation to segregation. It may mean enlisting responsible citizens to make sure that law enforcement powers act with the highest form of integrity. It may mean going to the minister, priest or rabbi and the official governing group of your local congregation and talking together about the responsibility of your church or synagogue in facing these issues. For some groups the Kneel-In-Movement has called us to new repentance. (2) It may mean sitting in a court room to make sure all the citizens receive a fair trial. (3) It may mean going with some citizens in your community to the registration center or the voting precinct to make sure there is no hitch in utilizing the rights guaranteed under the Constitution. (4) It may mean placing a sign on your front lawn when new neighbors of another race or minority group move in - a sign that says "This House is not for Sale - I like my neighbors." (5) It may mean some economic pressure to assure equality of opportunity in jobs. I can buy my dresses from a saleswoman of a different color from my own and enjoy the process just as much. (6) If enough citizens of all faiths who believe in justice and human dignity made their voices heard and involved themselves in the process of achieving freedom and justice, laws to change patterns would not be needed. Unfortunately this is not the case! Therefore one of the most urgent tasks before us is to work for Federal and State laws that protect the freedoms of all our citizens.

God has called us all with "A Holy Calling" - "The frozen misery of Centuries" is breaking all over the world. The hot bricks in a four mule wagon on a cold January day in - - - - - -County, Mississippi have been replaced with the modern Ford or Chevrolet and a sprinkling of Cadillacs with the comfort and luxury of built in heaters. The four lane highways have replaced the red clay slippery roads - -

But the voices of the White Citizens' Councils in Mississippi or Alabama, Louisiana, or Texas (men and women!) have reached their neighbors on the Rejang River in Sarawak (Borneo) or the far flung communist camps of West China or on the borders of Burma. We are living in a changing world! The shots we fire that destroy human freedom and dignity are heard around the world. Somehow we ourselves and the people we symbolize in our local churches and synagogues have not always let our neighbors know that we are called of God to be His witness. We are called with "A Holy Calling."

"CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE"

by

Marion A. Wright

Linville Falls, North Carolina

Presented at the Annual Meeting of

NOVEMBER 15, 1960

Atlanta, Georgia

Emerson wrote: "Your manners are always under examination and by committees little suspected.... but are awarding or denying you very high prizes when you least think of it."

Our manners, then, are always on display. We are forever being judged by them. How do we pass the manners test?

Since February 1, 1960 -- of course long before, for that matter -- the manners of Southern whites have been an object of world interest. On that date a few Negro college boys entered a lunch room in Greensboro, North Carolina and ordered a cup of coffee.

Good manners, on which we pride ourselves, should have prompted us to say, "sit down, draw up a chair, have a cup of coffee" -- things we have been taught to say since childhood. But we didn't speak those warm and simple phrases. Because of our failure, we have undergone some months of turmoil and unrest. We have produced a sense of shock throughout the world.

There began on a regional scale a campaign of civil disobedience. The idea was not new of course. The principle of non-violent resistance to tyranny was old when the pyramids were raised.

Nebuchadnezzar made his great image of gold and set it up on the plains of Babylon. He issued his decree, directing that "at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, dulcimer and all kinds of music, ye fall down and worship the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king hath set up."

But Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego to his face told Nebuchadnezzar "Be it known unto thee, O King, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image thou hast set up."

And so they walked unscratched through the fiery furnace.

So on the plains of Babylon there was born an idea. Some centuries later, in the city of Jerusalem, it was expressed: "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's. And so, by way of Walden Pond in the words of Thoreau, by way of India in the salt marches of Gandhi, by way of Montgomery, Alabama, in the person and example of Martin Luther King, the idea on February 1, 1960, entered a lunch counter in Greensboro, North Carolina.

The doctrine of non-violent civil disobedience is an honored one in this country. It, of course, does not mean that a man has a right to disobey any law he doesn't like. But he has the right peaceably to protest against laws which offend his religion or conscience, or which place upon him burdens from which his fellow citizens are exempt.

The consciences of Quakers do not permit them to engage in war. They are, therefore, excused from military service. Consciences of Jehovah's Witnesses do not permit them to salute the flag -- which they liken to a graven image. Non-violently, they refused to do so and their action was upheld by the courts. The right of Quakers to refuse to take oaths in court, or elsewhere, is respected. School children of certain faiths are not required to attend religious chapel services. And so on.

These activities conflict with conscience. The proper way to raise the legal issue is to refuse non-violently to conform.

In the same way one raises the legal issue when he is denied rights and privileges enjoyed by others. To refuse to submit is the direct and practical means of testing the law or custom by which one is penalized. So long as he submits there can be no test.

I think it is evident to all students of constitutional law that, once the legal issue is squarely presented, the right of Negro persons to eat at public eating places will be upheld.

The Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution prohibits any state action discriminating against a person on account of race. When a state issues a charter, or a city a license, to engage in the restaurant business, there is state action which makes the operation legal and permissible. If the operation is featured by racial discrimination, there is conflict with the Constitution.

Under modern conditions, public eating places are an essential feature of normal living. To deprive a person of a right to eat is to subject him to unnecessary inconvenience and hardship. A place of business, operating under state sanction, is forbidden by the Constitution from racial imposition of such inconvenience and hardship.

With every privilege there is a corresponding duty. When one secures the privilege of operating a public necessity, he accepts the privilege with express or implied limitations. Among these is the qualification that the business shall not be so operated as to needlessly inflict damage upon members of the public. To discriminate racially against possible customers is to inflict upon them the physical hardship and the mental anguish inseparable from denial of service.

A business avails itself of facilities and instrumentalities provided by the public. It could not exist without them. The road, the sidewalk, in front of his store, are provided by public funds. His police and fire protection and, water and electricity, are publicly supplied. There is inspection of sanitation, of premises, and health of personnel. Taxes pay for all of these services. A part of the Negro's tax dollar is included. Is it constitutional for the Negro to be required to pay for services in aid of a business serving only white people?

It was against injustices such as these that the sit-ins were directed. They are in the best tradition of this country from the Boston Tea Party to the Greensboro Coffee Party -- from Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego to Martin Luther King.

Thomas Jefferson announced the principle that there are certain rights with which everyone is born. Since they were not conferred by government, government is powerless to take them away. Among them is the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. No federal government, no state or city government, and no business authorized by anyone of them, may place road blocks in the way of such pursuit.

The sit-in movement is a test of the validity of that principle. It is based upon Jefferson's maxim.

We are concerned with the national image. That image acquired new luster from the conduct of college boys and girls, of both races, calm, poised and resolute, who demonstrated that moral power alone, schooled, channeled and disciplined, is the inevitable and ultimate victor over oppression.

The initial reaction to demand for lunch counter service was to close the counters. Mark the same reaction in other fields. Close the golf courses. Close the swimming pools. Close the parks. Close the libraries. Close the schools.

Now, if civilization does not inhere in such public instrumentalities, they are at least its expressions. Snip them off one by one, and, one step at a time, you withdraw from civilization. Finally, at the end of this somber process, you have attained complete savagery. Never before in human history have men openly advocated an inversion of the evolutionary process.

That is, not for human beings. I understand that a few scientists are cross breeding horses in an effort to reproduce the dwarfed and stunted Eohippus, primal ancestor of the breed of present day horses. The bunglers who propose to close schools and libraries would make cave men of us all.

Few among us go that far. But those who seek to preserve segregation retard, if they do not reverse, the normal evolution of society into finer forms.

Men grow by experience, by contact, by absorption. Segregation limits the area of contact, the range of experience. Shut out from the lives of white and Negro alike has been the rich and rewarding experience of acquaintance with those who would bring to association and friendship a wealth of new background and social potential. Whites should realize that they too, are victims of the order they have created.

Occasionally one reads of a demented parent who has for years kept his child secluded in some attic or basement, shut off from contact or association with other humans. The police find the child, undernourished, stunted, filled with fantasies and delusions, ridden with misconceptions and fears. Such life becomes when the world is shut out.

Southerners of both races, without awareness of it, have undergone an isolation differing only in degree from that of the unfortunate child. We, too, have lived without the main stream of life. The circle of those whom we might have known, who might have enlarged the range of our sympathies and understanding, who might have enriched our lives by imparting into them a new breadth and depth, -- that circle has been racially constricted. We, too, have lived in a world of myth and fantasy and fear. We devise our own delusions of grandeur and of inferiority.

We begin now to tug at the bonds. We seek escape and exit into a brighter world. When, happily, full release has been achieved, we will laugh at the fears which so long possessed us and begin, at last, to devote our lives to noble purposes and happy ends.

WORKSHOP PANEL "The Unfinished Revolution" - Miss Eleanor French, Moderator (Panel to form a backdrop for workshop discussion groups)

"A Southern Point of View"
Mrs. Eliza Paschall

Having spoken for groups such as the League of Women Voters and others for years, recently, at last, I have been able to speak for myself. Finding myself in disagreement with the constantly expressed and traditional "Southern Point of View," I decided I would express my own southern point of view. I should say at this point, that I was born and bred in the South. I married a Southerner. Both my grandfathers fought in the Civil War for the Confederacy, so I am as southern a product as can be found.

I sat down at my typewriter and I did express my southern point of view. It was only a very few pages. I mailed them off to the Atlantic Monthly. A note came back from Mr. Weeks, editor, saying he had been very impressed with the sincerity of my article and that he would work it into one of the forthcoming issues.

I graduated from Agnes Scott here in Atlanta and since the article has been printed, I have received many letters from Scott alumnae saying how relieved they were that I had spoken out. It was a great help to have this support as there have deen derogatory outcries as well.

In writing the article I feel I have been true to myself in declaring my feelings on integration and reiterating my belief in justice for all peoples. I know that this will come to pass in the years ahead.

"The March on the Capitol-Montgomery"
Bernard Lee

When we planned the Montgomery march on the capitol, we realized that the local authorities would be extremely hostile. Montgomery is in the heart of Dixie and is the cradle of the Confederacy. So following the Ghandian philosophy, we informed them of our intentions. The sheriff told us we would be turned back by state troopers. We continued our planning, nonetheless. It was planned for the demonstration to be on a holiday and 700 students assembled to march. We had expected the police but we had not expected a crowd of 5000 white people. We saw that some of them were armed with guns, knives and bayonets. We proceeded with the march and were turned back. This march showed the great courage and purpose of the students.

"The March on the Atlanta Capitol and the Atlanta Kneel-ins"
Lonnie King

In Atlanta, as Montgomery, we students had a march on the Capitol on May 17, 1960. We announced the plan concerning the march at a state NAACP meeting in order to enlist further support. A reporter was seen heading for the door and the next day the Constitution carried an item on page two that Negro students were planning turbulence at the State Capitol in connection with the Supreme Court Decision of 1954. Governor Vandiver issued a statement that the Georgia Militia would form a cordon at the Capitol.

No one knew if the march would come off or not but the paper had let some 4000 students know when and where the march would take place. On the day of the march, the students assembled. We felt we had to go on or the entire Negro community would suffer a moral defeat. So two by two we started down Chestnut Street through the Negro section of town with a police escort.

Chief Jenkins told us we were to turn back when we reached the downtown area but if we did that and stayed within city jurisdiction, everything would be all right. When we arrived downtown, he gave a direct order that we were to turn back and not go on to the Capitol. As we have a police of non-violence and since going on would have meant pushing through police lines, we turned and marched to the Wheat Street Church where we had a tremendous rally.

We proved that the Atlanta people were not fooled by the noise of officials. We showed we were not afraid of sticks and stones and we proved a great deal to our own people.

As to the kneel-ins, we all of us, were sincere in going to the churches. It is awfully hard to turn people out of church.

My group went to Druid Hills to church and were offered a basement room which we refused. We tried to register and they tried to prevent that. We feel that Church, the House of God, is the last place on earth where discrimination should exist. Segregation is wrong in all forms and discrimination is wrong in most all forms. The kneel-ins are being accepted more now and probably as time goes on will be even more so.

"The Sit-ins - Greensboro"
Miss Mary Ellen Bender

The sit-ins and kneel-ins began in Greensboro, N. C. It started when three freshmen from Agricultural and Technical College of North Carolina and Bennett College sat-in at a Woolworth lunch counter. This had happened before but this time it caught on. There was very little violence there because of the support of the college leaders, the mayor and the community leaders. After a few initial sit-ins, a six-week cooling off period was called. After that was over, the sit-ins became a very organized effort with the more steady, reliable students participating.

The Greensboro movement was very long. It was about six months before the lunch counters were integrated and in the meantime some of the students had been arrested.

Surely what the students did there in assuming this position and seeing it through means that they are neither a lost or shiftless generation.

"The Sit-ins - Atlanta
Miss Lana Taylor

Student leaders in Atlanta decided something had to be done about the lunchroom situation. Atlanta is often called "the Athens of the South" and the cause had not been far advanced here.

The movement was very well organized right from the start by forming a Committee. Said Committee prepared "An Appeal for Human Rights" which was one complete page in the Atlanta newspapers. They wanted the public to know why the sit-ins were being planned.

The Committee planned the first sit-in for March 15, 1960. It was to occur at the cafeterias of tax supported places. The students were selected very carefully to be sure the non-violence aspect would be preserved. There were to be nine simultaneous sit-ins, the city hall, the Capitol, and the purpose of them was to get a test case to test the Georgia law in this matter. The students were arrested and then released. It is doubtful that their trials will ever come to court.

Again this summer, another sit-in was organized. The Action Committee made the plan and the Research Committee looked into the lunch counters to be utilized. It was planned for October, 1960, in the downtown, Broad Street area. This time the idea was "Jail instead of Bail" so a test case could be procured. In times like these it is the moral law of the universe versus man-made law and we must abide by the universal law when conflict arises.

REPORT OF WORKSHOP GROUPS

I. "The Church and Human Relations"

A. Mrs. I. Wilen, Chairman
B. Mrs. Alfred Lexow, Chairman

1. Since the Church is the House of our Lord, and we are members of His Household - we, the individual members of the Church decided we needed a greater total commitment of our membership if we are to improve human relations. As individuals in our Church, we have a responsibility for individual human relations and as a Church we have a responsibility for human relationships in the community and as a group.

2. It was the consensus that to just invite anyone into our Church membership was not enough. We all agreed that the invitation must be genuine, sincere and warm. In order to do this we must understand each other.

3. Our minister is more apt to take a stand if he knows his congregation is loyal, standing behind him. It helps him to know his higher eschelons agree with him also.

4. Church women should start youth and adult interfaith and interracial groups. In many communities the people have not taken any positive steps to stop anti-Semitic hate-mongers. Fear exists among the Jewish people in the South. Our witness is blurred by what we have not done. Jewish women are involving themselves so that there will be greater understanding. They know ministers cannot stand alone.

5. Churches should hold study groups in the church and in the communities on such subjects as Foreign Policy and on problems in their cities. They might use the "Great Decisions" course.

6. Churches should encourage their members to look after foreign students.

7. We must be motivated by what we believe - the greatest thing we have to fear is fear.

8. The effect of the strife in the South has had a far reaching effect on our nation, on the extension of God's Kingdom and World Peace. We are ashamed that some Christians are such poor followers of Jesus and are not practicing what they preach. The Beatitudes mean so little to us.

II. "The Unfinished Revolution"

A. Mrs. David Cathcart, Chairman
B. Mrs. Earl Andrews, Chairman

1. Support the students and interpret the motives and purposes of the sit-ins and kneel-ins. Make an effort to support or initiate bi-racial groups to seek the just solution.

2. Set up an interracial committee of citizens to interpret the student movements, serving as a liason group.

3. Churches should invite the Negro students to their youth functions. Other ethnic groups should be secured to help with the demonstrations.

4. Surveys could be conducted to ascertain reactions to the demonstrations.

5. Church women should attend the hearings and talk with the students showing their concern and expressing their interest. Help both morally and financially the students who might be expelled from school.

6. A study should be made where economic boycotts have been successful.

7. Dedicated women should send in their charge cards. Others could write the stores that they are willing to accept desegregation.

8. The Southern Regional Council has material to be given business men and merchants showing that little or no loss of business has been incurred when eating facilities have been desegregated. We should support the merchants who are willing to establish services without discrimination. Letters of appreciation should be sent them and whenever possible a word of approval in a personal way.

9. These are not just student concerns and problems, but ours too. The change is inevitable. The handwriting is on the wall. We must translate the Lord's words into deeds and actions.

III. "Basic Human Rights"

A. Mrs. Philip Hammer, Chairman
B. Miss Thelma Stevens, Chairman

1. Believing that integration is right, we would move towards the goal peacefully in this transition period. We must have understanding, not only of our past so we know what our prejudices are, but we must get our convictions across to the community as individuals and as groups. The Negro should understand psychological aspect of integration on a white person and the whites must see the Negro as a person of dignity, deserving the rights of citizenry.

2. Our children must be made aware of others point of view. Early impressions at home are very important. They must be made cognizant of the fact that one does not have superior feelings towards any group and all races deserve justice and equality. The parents could be provided with a training session program to equip them for questions at home. Also the churches and synagogues could provide normal situations where the children of both races could be together and take it for granted.

3. In discussing the problems of Negro registering, it was agreed that the procedures used by different registrars varied widely. The questionnaires are difficult to answer and the answers themselves were considered by the registrars and it was left to their consideration whether the applicant passed or not.

4. Some cities have Voting Clinics and coaching classes for the questionnaires. Negroes actually work in the polls in some locales.

5. White voters should not take the Negroes to regiater but encourage them as much as possible.

6. Groups such as the League of Women Voters, the PTA's and the United Church Women should bring out the facts about the discriminations in registering and let people know the changes to be made.

7. To help the school situation where governors and legislators are attempting to block the Supreme Court decision: personal letters should be written to the legislators urging them to accept the inevitable and keep our schools open; personal interviews with the governor and legislators by individuals and groups are suggested. They need to know just how their constituents stand.

8. Church groups could do much to provide pleasant experiences for the white and Negro youth to develop a friendly fellowship and understanding.

9. There is great need for aiding the foreign students in this country to feel accepted by entertaining them in our homes, and to prevent them from shunning the Negro for fear of losing their own status with the whites. The church could provide opportunities for the foreign student to enjoy social life together.

10. It was agreed that Housing was a major problem. Some suggested solutions are (a) it was agreed that the majority of the citizens of a town do not know what exists in the slum areas, (b) women should be encouraged to serve readily on survey or on investigating teams to see what substandard housing exists in their communities, (c) as church women we could take pictures (movies) or snapshots or slides of the slum conditions to be shown to church groups and civic groups, and (d) church groups and civic groups should seek the cooperation of their newspapers and radio-television stations in arousing public sentiment for community improvement.

11. One of the problems inherent in the solution of the housing problem is that good housing is dependent upon a living wage. Negro housing can improve only at the rate of work and pay of the Negro.

12. In general it was considered that better relations could be developed between the races by study or discussion groups to build friendships and to reach better understanding of the other's problems. We should let our ministers know that we will back them in preaching the whole gospel, for we regret that some ministers have been forced to resign because of their convictions and actions. We urge the Councils of United Church Women to sponsor integrated meetings not only for themselves, but for the public.

IV. "Law and Order"

A. Mrs. Thomas Green, Chairman
B. Mrs. Harry Strauss, Chairman

1. The Civil Rights Commission is a fact-finding body which recommends action to Congress. In order to present information to it, the persons affected file an affidavit. If sufficient affidavits are filed, the Commission will investigate the situation.

2. The Church because of the very nature of its being and its active participation in our times per se is strongly involved. We recognize the fact that training in Christian social ethics is needed. The Church could sponsor an exchange of choirs, pastors and literature. An interracial prayer group could be formed. Picnics and camp-outs could be done over race lines. Study series using "Christ, the Church and Race" and "In Every Place a Voice" could be planned.

As Abraham Lincoln said "To sin by silence when man should speak out, makes cowards of men."

PANEL "Citizens Free and Responsible" - Miss Eleanor French, Moderator

"How We Talk Together"
Mrs. J. B. Pendergrast

Our problem here in Georgia of the closing of the public schools had to be dealt with. We knew they must be preserved. HOPE or Help Our Public Education was started with seventeen people in someone's living room. A course of action had to be decided upon. It was felt that the group should remain lily-white in order to have more influence with our legislators. This was not a matter of principle but of expediency. It is now thirty thousand strong and statewide in scope. It is composed of all degrees of feeling concerning integration and segregation among the members. BUT we have worked together and talked together.

The schools are still open although not integrated yet. We have been aided greatly by Ralph McGill and by the educators. We have longed to speak when we have had to be silent. We have had to overcome fear of all kind. I am not sure at this time how effective we have been. Only the future can tell that. But people of like-minded purpose, no matter how varied their personal feelings may be, have banded together and talked and worked and shall continue to do so.

"We Talked Together"
Mrs. John Patton

United Church Women took a long stride in the field of Leadership Education by working with the League of Women Voters, Active Voters, and HOPE, Inc. on Georgia's imperative problem - Open Schools. It was our privilege to have Mr. Jim Peters, State Board of Education President, to be with us in two Workshops. This would have been impossible several years ago but Mr. Peters now has taken a stand for open schools.

Four Workshop on Open Schools were held in strategic spots in Georgia. It is as Church women stand for the imperative of Christian freedom that they will grow in stature and savor with God and man.

"On The Southern Regional Council"
Mr. Leslie Dunbar

All of us at the Southern Regional Council are glad to help Mrs. Tilly with this fine meeting. All of you are taking a role and a part in these changing times in the South.

The Southern Regional Council was established in 1944. It grew out of the old Commission on Racial Cooperation which was started in 1919. Much of the strength of the present Council is due to the fact that it inherited so much goodwill and so many fine members from the old Commission. A group of Negroes during the second World War met in Durham, N. C., and expressed a desire for improvement in the treatment of Negroes in the South. A group of whites met in Atlanta reciprocally and then the two groups fused.

The Council has been very fortunate in its leadership. Dr. Howard Odum of the University of North Carolina was the first president. Mr. Paul Williams, a businessman and Catholic layman from Richmond was the second president. The third president was Mr. Marion Wright, a lawyer from North Carolina Mr. James McBride Dabbs, a farmer and writer from South Carolina is the fourth and present president.

The Council with the aid of a sizeable grant in 1954, established Councils on Human Relations in all southern states; they continue everywhere except in Texas, Mississippi and Louisiana. The Southern Regional Council works very closely with them but they have their own independent Boards and are autonomous organizations.

The Southern Regional Council publishes special reports, pamphlets and a monthly magazine, NEW SOUTH.

We have a field consultant service which works with school boards and municipalities, quietly, without publicity. We feel it a great honor when a town asks us for help even though integration there is a long way off. We provide help for radio and TV. The Council is trusted by the press for reliable information.

High school students as well as authors use our information. We supply in a considerable amount the same for governmental agencies.

We seem to be port of call for foreign visitors to Atlanta and it is a great plaasure to look after them.

In the South there have been new developments in the last few months. Thirty cities have set up bi-racial councils. In Florida, the governor has established such a council, state-wide. This has happened in Oklahoma also. The Kentucky legislature has created a bi-racial Commission. This all represents what we stand for.

We are looking forward to the changing South and to taking part in it. It is a mind-changing time. The power structure is more able now to talk with objectivity and honesty. Our policy has always been a simple one: let's reason, think, speak openly about the problems in a shared belief in the individuality of every person in the sight of the law and God.

"B'nai B'rith"
Mrs. Seymour Haber

B'nai B'rith was begun about 118 years ago by a small group of men on New York's Lower East Side to help the poor, the orphaned and the widowed. From this has developed a world wide organization of both men and women. The name means "Sons of the Covenant."

The women decided after working many years with the men that they wanted to form their own chapters. Atlanta has four such chapters.

The program is on a national scale and is varied. It is fundamentally a service organization. It helps support the Jewish National Hospital in Denver, Colorado, which also does research in tuberculosis and heart disease. The hospital is non-sectarian. It also supports the Leo N. Levi Hospital in Hot Springs, Arkansas, which treats arthritis. Belfair, a home for retarded children in Cleveland, Ohio, is also supported. The Hillel houses on college campuses are maintained by B'nai B'rith. We have local youth organizations for both boys and girls. Perhaps the work that you are most familiar with is that of the Anti-Defamation League.

Locally we are involved with the Cerebral Palsy Center and Battle Hill Haven among others. We stand ready to support and to serve.

"United Church Women"
Mrs. W. Murdoch MacLeod

The United Church Women Councils were first formed on a local level across denominational lines towork on mutual problems and after them came the state councils and then the national one. We now have 2200 councils in 50 states.

We have an official United Nations Observer who interprets the United Nations to others. Our Christian World Missions is a very active department. The work there is changing of course with the rise of new countries and new governments. We have a very active Public Relations Department. We publish a monthly magazine, "The Church Woman" and numerous publications.

We, too, stand to serve, to understand to ameliorate the many problems of our changing world.

"Council of Catholic Women"
Mrs. George W. Bain

Pope Benedict the 15th felt it was necessary to call Catholic men and women to action for the church and so the first National Catholic Welfare Conference was held out of which was formed the National Council of Catholic Men and the National Council of Catholic Women.

The emphasis is on spiritual development, the home and the community, as far as the program is concerned. The directives come from the bishops. As the other groups are, the Council of Catholic Women is a service group also.

Tuesday morning - Period of Meditation - Mrs. Mable Morley

Prayer Hymn: "Father Eternal, Ruler of Creation"

Father eternal, Ruler of creation, Spirit of life, which moved ere form was made; Through the thick darkness covering every nation, Light to man's blindness, O be Thou our aid: Thy Kingdom come, O Lord, Thy will be done.

Races and peoples, lo! we stand divided, And sharing not our griefs, no joy can share; By wars and tumults Love is mocked, derided, His conquering cross no kingdom wills to bear: Thy Kingdom come, O Lord, Thy will be done.

Envious of heart, blind-eyed, with tongues confounded, Nation by nation still goes unforgiven; In wrath and fear, by jealousies surrounded, Building proud towers which shall not reach to heaven: Thy Kingdom come, O Lord, Thy will be done.

How shall we love Thee, holy, hidden Being, If we love not the world which Thou hast made? O give us brother love for better seeing Thy Word made flesh, and in a manger laid: Thy Kingdom come, O Lord, Thy will be done.

The words of this hymn were written in 1919 by Laurence Housman, a famous English author and artist at the request of his friend, the Rector of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields. Music to the words was composed in 1921 by Geoffry Shaw another Englishman, and the hymn was first sung at a meeting in Queen's Hall, London.

Will you read these stanzas in unison, one at a time, pausing after each one for Scripture and a brief meditation. After we have completed the last stanza with Scripture and meditation, Mrs. Rosa Page Welch will close this worship period praying the Lord's Prayer in song.

Will all of you now read with me stanza one of the Prayer Hymn pausing after the reading for Scripture and meditation. Let us read.

Read stanza one (aloud in unison)

"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth. The earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep; and the Spirit of God was moving over the face of the waters.
"And God said, 'Let there be light'; and there was light. And God saw that the light was good; and God separated the light from the darkness."
Genesis 1:1-4

Let us keep silent now for a few moments and meditate on God our Father eternal whose Spirit was moving over the waters in the beginning, who created the heavens and the earth from that which was without form, void and in deep darkness. As in the beginning when God said "Let there be light" and there was light, let us pray individually and silently that the light of God's revelation will take the blindness from our eyes that we may see Him the only true God and His Will for our world.

Read stanza two (unison)

"I am the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage." (Exodus 20:2)

"And now, Israel, what does the Lord your God require of you, but to fear the Lord your God, to walk in all his w ays, to love him, to serve the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul, and to keep the commandments and statutes of the Lord, which I command you this day for your good? Behold, to the Lord your God belong heaven and the heaven of heavens, the earth with all that is in it; yet the Lord set his heart in love upon your fathers and chose their descendants after them, you above all peoples, as at this day. Circumcise therefore the foreskin of your heart, and be no longer stubborn. For the Lord your God is God of gods and Lord of lords, the great, the mighty, and the terrible God, who is not partial and takes no bribe. He executes justice for the fatherless and the widow, and loves the sojourner, giving him food and clothing. Love the sojourner therefore; for you were sojourners in the land of Egypt. You shall fear the Lord your God; you shall serve him and cleave to him, and by his name you shall swear. He is your praise; he is your God, who has done for you these great and terrible things which your eyes have seen. Your father went down to Egypt seventy persons; and now the Lord your God has made you as the stars of heaven for multitude.

"You shall therefore love the Lord your God, and keep his charge, his statues, his ordinances, and his commandments always." (Deuteronomy 10:12 - 11:1)

Let us meditate upon our common heritage. There is only one God and he is Lord of us all. (Meditation)

Let us thank him for deliverance from bondage and pray that we may be channels for his Grace to reach out to all those whom our lives touch. (Silent prayer)

Read stanza three (unison)

"Now the whole earth had one language and few words. And as men migrated in the east, they found a plain in the land of Shinar and settled there. And they said to one another, 'Come, let us make bricks, and burn them thoroughly.' And they had brick for stone, and a bitumen for mortar. They said, 'Come, let us build ourselves a city, and a tower with its top in the heavens, and let us make a name for ourselves, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth.' And the Lord came down to see the city and the tower, which the sons of men had built. And the Lord said, 'Behold, they are one people, and they have all one language; and this is only the beginning of what they will do; and nothing that they propose to do will now be impossible for them. Come, let us go down, and there confuse their language, that they may not understand one another's speech. So the Lord scattered them abroad from there over the face of all the earth, and they left off building the city. Therefore its name was called Babel, because there the Lord confused the language of all the earth; and from there the Lord scattered them abroad over the face of all the earth."

(Genesis 11:1-9)

Will you meditate on the lack of communication between God's people today and pray for His Mind and His Spirit that we may have understanding and love for each other. (Meditation and prayer)

Read stanza four (unison)

"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. . . And the Word became flesh and dwelt among us, full of grace and truth; we have beheld his glory, glory as of the only Son from the Father. . . And from his fulness have we all received, grace upon grace. For the law was given through Moses; grace and truth came through Jesus Christ. No one has even seen God; the only Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, he has made him known." (John 1:1,14,16-18)

Let us thank God for himself, for his revelation, and pray that we today may not miss the fulness of His Glory, but that our hearts, minds and wills may be open to Him as each of us is able to comprehend, so that we may be trusted with Him and all that he would reveal to us.

Mrs. Welch will close our worship with "The Lord's Prayer."

W O R S H I P

Tuesday evening - Period of Meditation - Mrs. William Sale Terrell

Hymn - Praise to the Lord! the Almighty, the King of creation!
O my soul, praise Him for He is thy health and salvation!
All ye who hear, now to his temple draw near,
Serve Him in glad adoration!

Praise to the Lord! Who doth prosper thy work and defend thee;
Surely His goodness and mercy here daily attend thee;
Ponder anew - What the Almighty can do,
If with His love He befriend thee!

Praise to the Lord! Oh let all that is in me adore Him!
All that hath life and breath come now with praises before Him!
Let the Amen - Sound from His people again,
Gladly for aye we adore Him.

Scripture - "Seek the Lord while he may be found. Call upon him while he is near. Let the wicked forsake his way and the unrighteous man his thoughts. Let him return to the Lord that he may have mercy on him, and to our God for he will abundantly pardon. For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways says the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways and my thoughts than your thoughts.

For as the rain and the snow come down from heaven and return not thither but water the earth, making it bring forth and sprout- giving seed to the sower and bread to the eater - so shall my word be that goes forth from my mouth. It shall not return to me empty but it shall accomplish that which I purpose, and prosper in the thing for which I sent it.

For you shall go out in joy and be led forth in peace; the mountains and the hills before you shall break forth into singing and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands. Instead of the thorn shall come up the cypress; instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle, and it shall be to the Lord for a memorial, for an everlasting sign which shall not be cut off." Isaiah 55, 6-13.

A voice crys "In the wilderness prepare the way of the Lord. Make straight in the dessert a highway for our God. Every valley shall be lifted up and every mountain and hill made low; the uneven ground shall become level and the rough places a plain - and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together for the mouth of the Lord has spoken." Isaiah 40, 1-5

"With what shall I come before the Lord and bow myself before God on high? Shall I come before him with burnt offerings, with calves a year old? Will the Lord be pleased with thousands of rams, with tens of thousands of rivers of oil? Shall I give my firstborn for my transgression, the fruit of my body for the sin of my soul?

He has shown you O man what is good, and what does the Lord require of you but to do justice, and to love kindness and to walk humbly with your God." Micah 6, 6-8.

Prayer - "O God and Father of us all, breathe upon us now thy holy calm. Forgive the disorder, the fever, the vain purpose of our lives. We have made haste as those who believe not. We have spent our days contrary to the plainest laws. Our eyes have been fixed to the earth, and rarely lifted to the skies. We have not silenced ourselves to hear, not been patient to understand.

Help us now to stand a while in the shelter of thy shadowing wings, and to be still; to look out again upon life with new vision, that we may understand; to wait for the revelation of thy will that shall make us calm and strong." Amen. Muriel Lester, (WDP, 1940)

Meditation - We have spent the day together in worship, fellowship and discussion, considering our task in the light of our faith, pinpointing the issues and considering the most effective ways of meeting them. Has justice been weighed in the balance and found wanting, or have we found new hope and new courage to tackle our common problems? Do you remember those lines from "There is a Balm in Gilead"? "Sometimes I get discouraged and feel my work's in vain, and then the Holy Spirit revives my soul again." Take confort from the knowledge that "Though the wrong seems oft so strong" it is still God's world, and "He is the ruler yet." I like Moffat's translation of the second and third verses of the 75th Psalm, "God says 'Through all the long delay I am still ruling in my justice; when men in any panic melt away I still uphold the order of the world.'" (RSV. "When the earth totters and all it's inhabitants, it is I who keep steady it's pillars.")

Again and again since last spring when I reread the epistles of Peter I have remembered his injunction "Steady then, keep cool and pray." (Ist Peter 4:7 Moffat) Both nationally and internationally these have been difficult days requiring great patience, wisdom and faith. So it was when First Peter was written. Trustworthy tradition has it that both St. Peter and St. Paul were slain in the persecution of the early Christians that followed the burning of Rome. This letter was presumably written in Rome shortly after the martydom of Paul which gives added significance to Peter's admonition. It is good for us to remember it today with the rising tide of revolution, nationalism and east-west tensions. The demand for human rights, dignity and status, for economic and social justice, is evident all over the world, but justice can be a rather cold and legalistic word unless it is enriched and mellowed by a certain quality of empathy, which the Oxford dictionary defines as "the power of projecting one's personality into, and so fully understanding, the object of contemplation." It was Harry Golden, in his introduction to William Peter's "Southern Temper" who observed that "justice is impossible until the man who has not been injured by injustice is as indignant as the man who has." How much we need the capacity to put ourselves in the other person's shoes! Like Ezekial among the exiles at Telebib who "sat where they sat."

The Man of Galilee made no reference to justice in the sermon on the mount. In fact the only time we find in the concordance that Jesus used the word was in his denunciation of those "who tithe mint and dill and cummin, and have neglected the weightier matters of the law-justice, mercy and faith." (Matthew 23, 23.) But he did talk a lot about love and forgiveness and mercy and compassion and about putting first things first. If we really cared about people as persons, and identified ourselves with them our sympathy would become empathy. It is said that Karl Marx had pity for the masses but no compassion for people.

Only when we personalize the needs and suffering of those to whom justice has been denied can we fully comprehend what Harry Golden means when he talks about the "fettering of the human spirit" in his "Only in America." Everyone, from the Fund for the Republic to the Christophers, including educators, politicians and theologians, has been discussing freedom. United Church Women's triennial theme, the meaning, dimensions, and imperatives of freedom, was certainly well chosen. Currently the communicons of the National Council of Churches are in the midst of a year of coordinated emphasis on "Christian Responsibility for Freedom." It is said that if a hungry man in Asia were offered four sandwiches or Roosevelt's "four freedoms" he would choose the four sandwiches. Half of the people in the world go to bed hungry every night, but stronger even than the need for freedom from hunger and want and ill health is the passionate desire for the unfettering of the human spirit.

The cover of our Workbook carries the familiar quotation from the prophet Amos: "Let justice roll down like waters and righteousness like an everflowing stream." Amos was a shepherd and water was a necessity, an essential for both shepherd and flock. Could it ever be that justice and righteousness could become such an overwhelming flood that the age old stereotypes and the status quo would be completely washed away, and out of the redevelopment process and the cleaning up of the wreckage and driftwood left by the storm, a free new community with no restricted areas for body or spirit could emerge?

William George Jordon in a provocative chapter on "The Way of the Reformer" in his book "The Power of Truth" says "The reformer in morals, in education, in sociology. . .in any line of aspiration, is ever a pioneer. His privilege is to blaze the path for others, to mark at his peril a road that others may follow in safety. He must not expect that the way will be graded and asphalted for him. He must realize that he must face injustice, ingratitude, opposition, misunderstanding, the cruel criticism of contemporaries, and often, hardest of all the wondering reproach of those who love him best.". . ."When nature decides on any man as a reformer she whispers to him his great message, she places in his hand the staff of courage, she wraps around him the robes of patience and self reliance and starts him on his way. Then in order that he may have strength to live through it all, she mercifully calls him back for a moment and makes him - an optimist."

So, as we treasure every upward step, we would see even in life's darkest moments the faint evidences of the dawn, and press on toward the goal of brotherhood for all mankind. "For behold the day comes. . . when all the arrogant and all evil doers will be stubble. . . says the Lord of Hosts. . . .But for you who fear my name the sun of right-wousness shall rise with healing in it's wings."

Prayer - "O Thou who art the light of the minds that know Thee, the life of the souls that love Thee, and the strength of the thoughts that seek Thee, help us so to know Thee that we may truly love Thee, so to love Thee that we may fully serve Thee, whose service is perfect freedom. Amen."

CLOSING MEDITATION - Mrs. William Sale Terrell (Wednesday morning)

I have recently read several of a series of articles in LIFE magazine. One was entitled "Earth" and the other, "Oceans." Several others are to follow one on "Anartica" and one on "Near Regions of Space."

Life in writing these articles and speaking of the geophysical year whimsically calls it the geo-whizical year because such amazing strides are being made these days in the study of the components around, above and below us.

The first article on "Earth" spoke of "love waves" which are earth tremors and also of the "dawn chorus" which is a kind of radio static in the atmosphere but for us these words would have a different connotation.

There are millions of earth quakes and tremors a year beneath the surface of the earth. A single major quake there can equal one hundred thousand atomic bombs. Illustrative of the deep quakes over our world today are New Orleans, Little Rock, Montgomery and the Congo.

A number of years ago the scientists thought this was a contracting earth and we do have a contracting earth. I heard recently of a marvelous invention which is common property, belonging to us all. A letter can now be transcribed on air mail stationery and sent from New York to Los Angeles in seven minutes. Surely, we do live in a contracting earth. G. K. Chesterson said "It's ironical we have learned to talk around the world when we have nothing to say." But I feel we do have something to say.

Now the theory is that the earth is expanding. Knowledge is being enlarged every day and "outer space" is becoming common in our vocabulary and in our thoughts. We have an expanding family in the United Nations. The ecumenical movement is growing.

The LIFE magazine article on "Oceans" had some fascinating pictures. Often times there may be strong currents on the surface but underneath is a deep flowing stream which can represent to us the mighty stream of prophetic hope and action which is counter to surface discouragements. The South, the United States, the world, all hope the aspirations of right will be realized and what we are seeking will come to pass.

I am reminded of a passage from Scripture, I Corinthians, "Though I speak with the tongues of men and angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing." This thought we must keep forever before us.

A few years ago I was a Lake Winnepausaukee in New Hampshire for a meeting. Each morning early the clouds were covering the mountains surrounding the lake but as day quickened they began to roll away. The 90th Psalm came to mind; "Lord, thou hast been our refuge, from one generation to another. Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever the world was made, thou art God from everlasting, and world without end. Thou turnest man to destruction; again thou sayest, Come again, ye children of men." What a patient God we have, such astonishing patience. He sows generation after generation of men in the hopes that one day His kingdom will be brought to earth.

Some years ago, my husband, on a bitter, winter night, after working late at the office hurried to his car to come home. He found the lock had been tampered with and he was unable to unlock the car. He went to a nearby shop for help. The lady there had no one to send. He asked her as one does in these situations if she had any suggestions of what to do. She said that he could try breathing on the lock. He went back out into the cold night and with the breath of his body breathed into the key hole. Then he tried the key and the car came unlocked. All the way home he thought of the hymn, "Breathe on me Breath of God, fill me with life anew, then I will love what thou dost love and do what thou wouldst do." The Breath of God breathes on us all, filling us with strength anew so we need not fear the quakes, tremors or strong currents abroad today. His kingdom will come.

That We Be Ever Grateful for God's Goodness

READER - We give thanks unto Thee, who art the Lord our God and God of our fathers, for the privilege of life which is ours, for the wonders of earth and sea and sky about us, for all that is good and true in us and in our society, and for that promise of a greater goodness and clearer truth which, because of our faith in Thee, we know shall yet be fulfilled.

Do Thou open our eyes and illumine our souls, so that, despite frustration and pain, despite confusion and anguish, we may stedily discern the signs of Thy beneficent Presence; and, discerning them, may we face the present with confidence, and the future with hope.

God's Goodness - The Testament of Nature

READER - Thy goodness, O Lord, is written large and bold in the Testament of Nature, in the orderliness, the majesty and the beauty of the physical world. Wherefore, with the psalmist of old, we on this Day speak Thy praise.

Bless the Lord, O my soul.
O lord my God, Thou art very great;
Thou art clothed with glory and majesty.

CONG. - Thou coverest Thyself with light as with a garment,
And stretchest out the heavens like a curtain.

READER - Thou makest the clouds Thy chariot;
Thou ridest on the wings of the wind.
Thou makest winds Thy messengers,
The flaming fire Thy ministers.

CONG. - Thou didst establish the earth upon its foundations,
That it should not ever be moved.
Thou makest springs flow in the valleys;
They find their way among the hills.

READER - They give drink to every beast of the field;
The wild asses quench their thirst.

CONG. - Beside them dwell the birds of the air;
From among the branches they sing.

READER - Thou waterest the mountains from Thine upper chambers,
That the earth may be satisfied by the fruit of Thy handiwork.

CONG. - Thou makest grass grow for the cattle,
And herbage for the service of man,
To bring forth bread out of the earth

READER - And wine that cheers the heart of man,
And bread that sustains man's strength.

CONG. - The trees of the Lord drink their fill,
The cedars of Lebanon, which He has planted.

READER - Thou has appointed the moon for festival seasons,
The sun which knows its time for setting.

CONG. - How manifold are Thy works, O Lord!
In Wisdom hast Thou made them all.

READER - Praise ye the Lord from the heavens!
Praise Him in the heights!

CONG. - Let all praise the name of the Lord,
For His name alone is exalted;
His majesty is over earth and heaven.

READER - May the glory of the Lord endure forever;
Let the Lord rejoice in His works.

God's Goodness - The Testament of Man

READER - Thy goodness is inscribed in the Testament of Man, in the powers of his body, the skill of his hand, in his capacity to think, to feel, to aspire, in his ability to communicate with his fellows, in his will to labor cooperatively at their side. Aye it is written large and bold in the nobility of man's spirit.

This is a sign of the goodness of God, that there are men ready to surrender their comfort and their happiness out of love for their fellows, pity for the suffering and devotion to high ideals.

This is a sign of the goodness of God, that, hungering insatiably after the truth, they will sacrifice themselves to attain it, and possessing it, defend it with their lives.

This is a sign of the goodness of God, that they will be free, and, being free, will not rest until freedom be the lot of all men.

This is a sign of the goodness of God, that, though they might be at ease in the world as it is, they labor steadfastly to convert it into what it ought be.

Wherefore with the psalmist we speak our grateful praise to Thee.

CONG. - O Lord, our Lord,
How glorious is Thy name in all the earth,
Whose majesty is sung above the heavens!
When I behold Thy heavens, the work of Thy fingers,
The moon and the stars, which Thou hast established;

READER - What is man, that Thou shouldst be mindful of him
Mortal man, that Thou shouldst think of him?

CONG. - Yet Thou hast made him but little less than divine,
And hast crowned him with glory and honor.

READER - Thou hast given him dominion over the works of Thy hands;
Thou hast put all things under his feet;

CONG. - Sheep and oxen, all of them,
Yea, and the beasts of the field,

READER - Birds of the air, and the fish of the sea,
Whatsoever passes through the paths of the seas.

CONG. - O Lord, our Lord,
How glorious is Thy name in all the earth!

God's Goodness - The Testament of Israel

READER - O God, Thy goodness is manifest in the Testament of Israel. From Egypt didst Thou redeem us, O Lord our God, and from the house of bondage didst Thou deliver us. In famine hast Thou fed us, and in plenty sustained us. From the sword hast Thou rescued us, from pestilence hast Thou saved us, and from sore and grievous ills hast Thou delivered us.

With everlasting love Thou hast loved the House of Israel, Thy people; Torah and commandments, laws and judgments hast Thou taught us. Eternal life didst Thou implant in our midst. By Thy Torah we lived, by Thy Torah we live now, and by Thy Torah we shall continue to live and labor for the coming of Thy Kingdom.

Shall we not think Thee, O God, on this Day, for having kept Israel alive, for having bestowed on us the gracious gift of Thy Torah, and for having brought us near to Thy service? Even as it is written by the prophet:

But you, Israel My servant,
Jacob whom I have chosen
The seed of Abraham My Friend,

CONG. - You whom I have taken hold of from the ends of the earth,
And called from its uttermost parts,
Saying: You are My servant,
I have chosen you, not rejected you;

READER - Fear not, for I am with you,
Be not dismayed, for I am your God;
I will strengthen you, yea, I will help you;
Yea, I will uphold you with My victorious right hand.

CONG. - I, the Lord, have called you in righteousness,
I have taken you by the hand;
I have kept you and made you a covenanted people,
A light to the nations;
To open eyes that are blind,
To bring captives out of the dungeon,
Those who sit in darkness out of prison.

God's Goodness - The Testament of America

READER - Thy goodness is revealed in the Testament of America. Into this land there have assembled the outcast and the weary of the older nations of the world. Here they dreamed a new dream of a nation founded on the truth, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these rights are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

And because Thou hast been with us and Thy goodness has kept us strong, the freedom which they won is still ours. May we ever be worthy of our American heritage; may we ever treasure our liberties, not for ourselves alone but for all our fellowmen; and may our country become a guiding light to all mankind. In the words of Abraham Lincoln:

CONG. - With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in.

READER - To do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations.

CONG. - Why should there not be a patient confidence in the ultimate justice of the people? Is there any better or equal hope in the world.

READER - In founding the United States, our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

CONG. - It is for us to be here dedicated to the great task remainign before us. We here highly resolve that the dead shall not have died in vain, that this nation under God shall have a new birth of freedom, and that this government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth.

READER & CONG. - For all these, O Lord our God, we thank Thee: for Thy goodness as maintained in Nature, in the human spirit, in Israel's Torah, and in America's promise. Embolden our hearts so that, surmounting discouragement and despair, we may learn to see clearly Thy bounties, and seeing them, make them manifest to all the world. Amen.

JUSTICE WEIGHED IN THE BALANCE

Justice is turned back and righteousness stands afar off for truth has fallen in the public squares and righteousness cannot enter.
Isaiah 59:14 R. S. V.

Let justice roll down like waters and righteousness like an everflowing stream
Amos 5:24 R. S. V.

Love thy neighbor as thyself.
Mark 13:31

Providing for honest things not only in the sight of the Lord but also in the sight of men.
II Cor. 8:21

WE SEEK:

A conviction that will not let us rest,
A faith that will not shrink,
A courage that will not waver.

WE WOULD BE:

Firm in conviction, never afraid to speak the truth.
Persuasive in conversation,
Patient and understanding with those who do not agree--
"Fervent in spirit, serving the Lord."

"An inscription to be read by all who visit the chapel at Stanton - Harold, a small village near the center of England. It reads

'In the year 1653
When all things sacred were throughout the nation
Either demolished or profaned
Sir Robert Shirley, Baronet founded this church
Whose singular praise it is
To have done the best things
In the worst times, and Hoped them in the most calamitous.'

It is a song for us to march to, When the 'days are evil.' We know and are persuaded, God has His 'time' too, and in them even the evil is made to serve the good.

Unknown and unheralded, as the world holds, Sir Robert stands out in the minds of those who read and praise as a man of self-discipline and devotion in the midst of social unrest in the Cromwellian." -- Sidney Lovett

"Father eternal, Ruler of creation, Spirit of life, which moved ere form was made; Through the thick darkness covering every nation, Light to man's blindness, O be Thou our aid: Thy Kingdom come, O Lord, Thy will be done.

Races and peoples, lo! we stand divided, And sharing not our griefs, no joy can share; By wars and tumults Love is mocked, derided, His conquering cross no kingdom wills to bear: Thy Kingdom come, O Lord, Thy will be done.

Envious of heart, blind-eyed, with tongues confounded, Nation by nation still goes unforgiven; In wrath and fear, by jealousies surrounded, Building proud towers which shall not reach to heaven: Thy kingdom come, O Lord, Thy will be done.

How shall we love Thee, holy, hidden Being, If we love not the world which Thou has made? O give us brother love for better seeing Thy Word made flesh, and in a manger laid: Thy Kingdom come, O Lord, Thy will be done."

From The World Outlook, October 1960

The Catholic Church and Lausanne

At this summer's meeting of the European Ecumenical Youth Assembly in Lausanne, Switzerland, a number of Roman Catholic youth were present as observers. The Catholic Action group asked its members to pray for the Assembly.

Bishop Francois Charriere of Geneva issued a statement in which he said that the Roman Catholic Church does not belong to the World Council of Churches, yet it "nevertheless teaches that all humble and sincere efforts aiming at reconciliation of all Christians are the work of the Holy Spirit."

The Catholic population of Lausanne was asked by the Roman Catholic prelate to attend a special mass " to invoke God's blessing on the work of the Assembly."

The bishop's message said that the Lausanne Assembly "gives us encouragement for two reasons."

One reason is that "these are young people who come together to contribute to Christian unity" and when youth are enthusiastic about a great cause "we should all be wrong to despair about the future."

The other reason is that the Assembly theme is centered not on a secondary question "but on the central mystery of Christianity."

It is interesting to notice that, whereas Catholic and Protestant groups have come together rather successfully on secondary issues, it is the primary interest of the "central mystery" that the bishop of Lausanne raised up for praise.

We are not in doubt that it will be many years before the great divisions of the church can be healed. But it is good that some of the talk leading to friction is becoming a thing of the past.

GENERAL RECOMMENDATIONS AGAINST DISCRIMINATION

(Passed by White House Conference on Youth)

480. That all signs, stereotypes, symbols, and practices tending in any way to lessen the dignity of minority segments of our population be eliminated; and that any legislation requiring such practices be repealed.

481. That all discriminatory practices be abolished which deny equal opportunity in-- education housing employment places of public accommodation, publicly or privately owned

482. That the Conference-- endorse and support the nonviolent sit-in demonstrations of Southern students in protest against segregated facilities--welcome the widespread support of students of other colleges throughout the nation decry the use of force or of political or legal contrivances to prohibit or intimidate the demonstrators deplore their suspension by some colleges and urge their reinstatement urge the release of special Federal funds to enable those not reinstated to complete their education.

RECOMMENDATIONS

THE TEMPORARY STUDENT NONVIOLENT COORDINATING COMMITTEE

The Temporary Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee recommends that:

A. The General Conference accept the following as the statement of purpose for the student movement.

"We affirm the philosophical or religious ideal of nonviolence as the foundation of our purpose, the presupposition of our faith, and the manner of our action. Nonviolence as it grows from Judaic-Christian traditions seeks a social order of justice premeated by love. Integration of human endeavor represents the crucial first step towards such a society.

"Through nonviolence, courage displaces fear; love transforms hate. Acceptance dissipates prejudice; hope ends despair. Peace dominates war; faith reconciles doubt. Mutual regard cancels enmity. Justice for all overthrows injustice. The redemptive community supercedes systems of gross social immorality.

"Love is the central motif of nonviolence. Love is the force by which God binds man to Himself and man to man. Such love goes to the extreme; it remains loving and forgiving even in the midst of hostility. It matches the capacity of evil to inflict suffering with an even more enduring capacity to absorb evil, all the while persisting in love.

"By appealing to conscience and standing on the moral nature of human existence, nonviolence nurtures the atmosphere in which reconciliation and justice become actual possibilities."

(This Statement of Purpose was adopted in Raleigh, North Carolina on April 17, 1960, at the first general conference of student movement participants.)

Let Us Kneel-in Together!

✦ KNEEL-INS are new in name only. When small groups of Negro college students accompanied by white friends appeared at white churches in Atlanta on recent Sundays, they were doing what had been done many times before in southern and border states. Sporadically through the years Negroes have gone uninvited to white churches and have been received with varying degrees of hospitality or rejection. The motives of Negroes in going to white churches and the motives of whites in receiving or rejecting them have usually been vague and have often been mixed. At times they have been, on both sides, unworthy. It is not impossible and it is not improper to analyze those motives.

The stigma of racial segregation will not be removed until it disappears from white Christian churches, where it began. It will not be removed merely by juxtaposing whites and Negroes in the same church building. Such a relationship may be enough to satisfy the elemental demands of justice at lunch counters and public beaches and in buses and libraries; it is not enough to meet Christ's claim that his disciples are one. To speak of that claim is to speak of a relationship in which affinity is far more important than proximity. Bread served at a lunch counter is one thing; bread shared in church is another.

To say of Negroes that the motives which prompt them to attend white churches are often confused and sometimes ambivalent is not to question their right to attend and hold membership in any Christian church and to participate in the life of that church. It is rather to say that they do have this right, that they should not be excluded on the basis of race and that the fact of race should not make them suspect when they seek communion with white Christians. If white Christians are suspicious, resentful and defiant when Negroes appear at their churches, if even in the house of God they fail to "practice hospitality," the guilt is theirs. But Negro Christians have, nevertheless, a Christian duty; and that duty requires that to the best of their ability they give their white brothers no occasion for offense.

Negroes cannot perform this Christian duty, however, by staying away from white churches. Indeed, by staying away they confirm the clichés upon which exclusivist Christians rely; they deprive such Christians of the opportunity to measure their own faith and the proud protestations of their church against the demands of their Christ. A constant rather than sporadic attendance of Negroes at white churches would do more to compel all Christians of our land to re-examine the ground and purpose of their faith and to revive their calcified churches than any other single social factor.

It is not the presence of Negroes that causes white Christians to sin against their brothers. The evil is deeply buried; the appearance of the Negro at the church door merely hoists the signal which calls forth that evil. It is an evil which must be exposed, but it cannot be exposed by consideration of the hypothetical question, "What would we do if a Negro applied for membership?" It is when this actually occurs, when the Negro knocks on the door of the white church, that spirits stir within. Some of these spirits wear the mask of custom, but beneath the mask lurk the features of an ancient hatred. And others of these aroused spirits, struggling to be born, partake of the spirit of Christ. The white Christian church will never be what it ought to be until it is put to this trial, a trial in which Christ and racial custom engage in mortal struggle for the souls of men.

The Negro Christian, then, must approach the white church not for his own sake but as an instrument in the hand of God. He cannot serve as such an instrument if he attends a white church out of mere curiosity or to test for himself whether these Christians mean what they preach and sing. The church is sullied if it is used by men to expose and humiliate other men. The Negro Christian should not go in vanity to prove that he is just as good as other folk and perhaps better. Such profanation of the church has enough devotees among whites. He should not go for the purpose of harassing and disturbing the worship of other men. This is a misdemeanor which the law of the land properly does not tolerate. He should not go defiantly determined to invade and overthrow the last preserve of white supremacy. It must be overthrown, but not by establishment of some other kingdom of pride.

The Negro should go to the white church because he has heard the summoning of God and goes to hear what God will say to him. He should go because as a part of Christ's body he cannot endure separation from any part of that body. He should go because he wills under God's leading to be reconciled to his brother and knows no better place to begin than in the church. He should go because he knows that far beyond sitting at lunch counters together, men must break bread together. He should go not once but regularly, for inconstancy will be clear proof that his going is not sincere. He should go willing to sacrifice at the earliest possible date the unique role which his own separated church has played in his life in exchange for a church in which the body of Christ is not divided on racial lines. He should go in such a spirit, and in such a spirit keep on going despite rebuffs and humiliations. Once more the offended must suffer for the redemption of the offender.

But what about the motives of the white man? In four Atlanta churches on August 9 Negro visitors were accepted and were seated indiscriminately. Would the white Christians do it again and again? And with equal grace if the episode lengthens to an epoch in their church life and a few Negro visitors become many? At two of the churches Negro students were offered but declined to accept seats in the balcony and in the basement. Reports do not make clear whether in the two churches there were unoccupied seats among the white communicants. In any event it is unlikely that the Negro students, making their first bid for acceptance in white churches, would settle for the only seating arrangement under which their enslaved grandparents were permitted to worship with white people.

The chairman of ushers in one of the two churches is reported to have said, "They were just a bunch of agitators." (Christians have, of course, been called that from the earliest days of the church.) So long as visitors to a Christian church conduct themselves with quietness and dignity it is not the privilege of any representative of the church to analyze the motives of communicants or to refuse them admission. The church belongs to Christ, not to the ushers, deacons or trustees. Christ knows the hearts of men who come to his church; he will judge and will recompense them according to that judgment. Whatever the motives of the Negro visitors who come to white churches, the usher has only one duty and one proper course of action: to welcome the visitors and to see that they are comfortably seated. If the Negro is engaged in unchristian agitation, cordial white Christians may be the instrument through which God's grace may work a converting power upon his life. If his enterprise is Christian, the absence of slight or rebuff will be pleasing to God whose child has been accepted.

Moreover, it is not enough for white Christians to give a cordial welcome to Negroes in the hope that such a display will disarm the inquisitive or defiant or sincere Negro and thus relieve them of the need to face issues raised by the possibility of his returning again and again. The welcome must be genuine; it must be the greeting of Christian for Christian, of member for potential member. A hypocritical, calculating cordiality can desecrate God's temple just as much as a deliberate rebuff. In a word, the same motives should move both the Negro visitor and the white host: a confession of sin, a need for forgiveness, a commitment of the whole life to God's full will. The sit-ins and the wade-ins succeed, but the will of Christ for the races will not be accomplished until Negro Christians and white Christians break bread together on their knees. For a long time to come the presence of Negroes and whites in the same church will not be normal, but the abnormality can be turned to the glory of God and to the good of all his children.

EPISCOPAL GROUP BACKS SITDOWNS

Hails Negro Store Protests and Urges Similar Fight on Church Racial Bans

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, March 5—A national Protestant Episcopal organization has endorsed demonstrations against segregated public facilities and has suggested that similar protests be aimed at the church.

The action was taken by the board of directors of the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity. A statement from the board was released today by the society's headquarters.

The organization was formed two months ago in Raleigh, N. C., at a convention of lay and clergy delegates from the across the nation.

The statement grew out of a series of demonstrations by Negro students against segregated lunch counters in seven Southern states. The Rev. Mr. John B. Morris, executive director of the society, said that the statement was directed to the entire nation.

The board urged churchmen to "question if they can appropriately participate in a church activity which refuses to serve all regardless of race." Then it said:

"We commend those citizens who express love in suffering by passive disobedience to laws or mores that separate on account of race or religion in state or commercial enterprises.

"We suggest that all members of this society consider the participation in like visible objections to practices of the church in separating on account of race in any activity or institution supported, sponsored, controlled or operated by the church."

Mr. Morris said the statement had been drafted last week at the first session of the group's governing board at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York.

The executive secretary remarked in an accompanying statement that it was inevitable that the protests would spread. He said that they would eventually include "both white and Negro students in a Southwide movement to affirm the equal status of all citizens in public accommodations." He continued:

"The churches, where segregation is even more tragic, will not escape involvement. If negotiation and appeal fail, it is very likely that churchmen will find themselves picketing their own institutions and sitting down n restricted pews.

"Such demonstrative witness, motivated by love and expressed in nonviolent, passive resistance to evil, is thoroughly grounded in Christian teaching. Students at lunch counters and churchmen trying to set their house in order need only to look to Jesus for both an example of direct assault on sin as well as for the strength to persevere."

A Southern Point of View

BY

ELIZA PASCHALL

A Southerner who was born in Charleston, South Carolina, and who received her A.B. from Agnes Scott College, ELIZA PASCHALL has lived in Atlanta, Georgia, for the past twenty-four years. She is the mother of three children who attend public school in Atlanta and has been active in many local community organizations.

IT IS common practice among Southern spokesmen to refer to the "Southern point of view." Our capitol in Atlanta resounds with speeches which say that all Georgians agree. And it is always stated or implied that what they all agree on is that our present system of a legally racially segregated society is best.

With the threat of closed public schools, it has now become "realistic" to admit that, though there may still be doubt as to the jurisdiction of the U.S. Supreme Court over the state of Georgia, we should act as though the jurisdiction were legal rather than shut down all our schools. It has become "courageous" to accept token integration rather than have our children denied schools. All this realism and this courage, it is made quite clear, go against the Southern point of view.

I am a Southerner. From my point of view, not only does the U.S. Supreme Court have jurisdiction over Georgia, but the school decision was a correct one. Our schools are separate but not equal, and even if they were, legal racial segregation has no place in a democracy. It is a hangover from slavery. Historically it can be explained in the South, but it cannot be justified from my Southern point of view.

I am tired of justification by comparison. "But it is really so much worse in the North. Look at Chicago. And what about South Africa?" I do not set my standards of morality by what others do, in the North or in Chicago or in South Africa. I set them by what I believe in my heart, and I do believe in my heart that segregation is a disease that infects all parts of a being, human or political. It is a germ from which I should like to protect my children as much as possible, regardless of its virulence in other places.

My Southern point of view cannot accept the argument that a school board increases its effectiveness in administering a law by ignoring it until forced to obey by a court order. "They had to wait until court action, and they had to contest the suit," I am told. Why? I do not see that reluctance to enforce the law necessarily increases public support for those who are finally forced to abide by the law, or that it increases respect for other laws among adults or among youths.

I have heard these officials defended by those who "do not believe in segregation either" on the grounds that ignoring the law is a necessary political move, presumably to gain support of those citizens who prefer that the law be disobeyed. The implication is that the majority of citizens fall into this category. But I believe that there are many Southerners who expect their public officials to honor their oath to uphold the Constitution of the United States.

I do not agree with the "realistic liberals," who daily play the game which has as its primary rule: To be influential you must stay in the group. What influence do we have if we constantly yield to the pressure of "This is not the time. It would cause trouble"? Above all else, the group says, one must not cause trouble. The chorus goes like this: "We would have no objections, but others might. We might lose members. We might lose business. We might lose an organization." They never seem to consider that by positive action we might gain a soul, and there are many lost souls in the South today.

I resent the time and effort this problem which we create for ourselves takes from constructive efforts to solve more demanding problems that are not of our own making. At every point in the life of the community, these questions rise to plague us. Shall we admit Negroes? Where could we meet? Whom would we offend? The easy way out is to say that the Negroes prefer it this way and that they do not want to come to our affairs. I do not presume to know the minds of any group of citizens. No doubt many Negroes would not be interested. But I would let any citizen choose to participate or not according to his interests, not according to law or class.

Let me list from my personal experience a few examples of the dilemma facing liberals.

We have elected a Negro to the board of education, but it is difficult for civic groups to arrange meetings at places to which all members of the board may be admitted. The resources of a state educational institution are at the disposal of citizens in planning community projects if only the white population of the community participates. A United Fund agency has a fine International Club, where foreign students are invited to come and meet American students. Negro students are invited if they are from foreign countries, but not if they are Americans. In this instance, American birth seems to be a liability.

A local civic group interested in international affairs votes to affiliate with a national organization, a member of the national board of which is a local resident. He is also a college president and a Negro. He is expected not to attend local meetings. (He hardly would have time anyway, inasmuch as he travels a great deal representing our country on foreign missions.)

And what about private lives? There is no law that I know of regulating whom I may have in my home, but here in the South one always wonders about what the neighbors will think. "Will they understand?" Understand what? That I like some people and not others, but not on the basis of the color of their hair, or their eyes, or their skin? That I want my children to have an opportunity to know other Americans, as well as visitors from India, Pakistan, Germany, and Australia? At our local, integrated Unitarian-Universalist Church, my child has a Negro classmate with whom she has developed a strong friendship. The friend's father is a university professor, honored in his profession, chosen to assist in the planning of the 1960 White House Conference on Youth. But when his daughter comes to see my daughter, they do not go to the corner drugstore. I am not sure what would happen, and so I keep making excuses when asked point-blank, "May we go?"

"You are too sudden," I am told. "Don't try to change things overnight." Eighteen sixty to nineteen sixty: "sudden"? Nineteen fifty-four to nineteen sixty: "deliberate speed"? Our spokesmen say that others do not understand our problems. What is there to understand in a plan to give up all schools rather than admit one Negro child to one "white" school? Substitute "Hungarian and Russian" for "Negro and white," and would we call it democracy? Substitute "Jew and German" for "Negro and white"; would we call it democracy?

No matter how big our other problems are, we evidently feel that none is as great as accepting the fact of certain children's sitting down together to learn.

In a federal court I listened to the judge announce that, by his order, henceforth there were to be no more white and Negro schools in Atlanta. But the fact remains that all the Negroes are assigned to certain schools and all whites to other schools, and all the teachers end up in the same fashion. Even as we talk of possible desegregation, we speak in terms of a Negro child's asking for a transfer to a "white" school, though the judge has said there are no specifically white schools any more.

Week in and week out, at luncheon meetings, we salute the flag and pledge "liberty and justice for all." We do not have to meet the eyes of the Negro waiters, who are standing in the back, for our eyes are looking forward at the flag.

While we meet and eat, we are likely to endorse crash programs to improve the facilities and the treatment of our mentally ill, who are increasing in numbers each year. Yet how can we avoid split personalities, delusions of grandeur, flights from reality as individuals when we indulge in them as a society?

I have sat in the gallery of the state capitol and listened to the governor (several governors, in fact) and the legislators repeat, like a broken record, "We will never — never — never —" And I have wondered, What are they afraid of? Is it just habit? Do they think this is what is expected of them by the people? And do the people, hearing their officials, think the safe thing to do is to repeat after them, each following the other, round and round like a dog chasing his tail?

I am weary of the chase. I can no longer live with my own silence. I am tired of wondering what the neighbors will think. I would declare to the whole world, including my neighbors, that from my point of view democracy is a serious and wonderful thing, that it must be lived as well as believed in, that the game of "I don't mind, but I thought you did" is a vicious circle that binds and restricts and stunts minds and hearts, that if to thine own self thou art not true, thou canst not then be true to any man.

There is another Southerner whose view I would accept as my own. That Southerner is George Washington. The words are "Let us raise a standard to which the wise and honest can repair." The standard is the Constitution of the United States.

THE CHURCHES SPEAK

Resolution on the Student Sit-In Movement by the Board of Managers of United Church Women, meeting in Minneapolis, Minnesota April 26-28, 1960.

Believing as Christians that all persons regardless of race should have equal opportunity to live in dignity as children of God; and

Believing in obedience to the civil authority, regularly and legitimately constituted, but believing also that as Christians we must obey God rather than man;

United Church Women support the principle of service without discrimination at lunch counters and the principle of non-violent protest as a means of securing social justice.

We express appreciation to all students, who, using the method of non-violent protest, often at great personal risk and cost, have called national attention to one form of discrimination and symbolically to all discriminations wherever it exists in the United States.

We URGE church women individually and through local and state councils of United Church Women, in whatever ways are possible and effective locally, to support the protest movement not only in principle but concretely through such means as the following:

Continuous interpretation of the meaning of the protest movement and the facts of the local situation in conversation, in the local church, and in the community;

Efforts to strengthen, support or initiate by-racial committees of citizens to consider just solutions to the problems;

Support of merchants who show willingness to establish services without discrimination;

Statements to the local and national managers of stores and to the press regarding the position of United Church Women;

Contributions through established channels, such as the National Student Christian Federation, 475 Riverside Drive, New York 27, New York, to meet urgent needs including legal and scholarship aid.

Finally, we call members of United Church Women to give thoughtful study to the increasing body of material available, and to pray that we may equip ourselves adequately for our share in the task and that the work that we do may be illuminated and empowered by our common Christian faith.

Church Groups Speaking On This Subject Are Saying. . .

In Raleigh, North Carolina, 46 white ministers and 13 Negro ministers of the city have said:

"That we commend students and all other persons who use orderly and non-violent means in a forgiving spirit to express their views on the practice of discrimination."

Chapel Hill Ministers--Catholic, Protestant and Jewish said in a joint statement:

"We commend the leaders of these current protests for their dedication to the principles of Non-Violence. We believe that the right to protest in this fashion is a right generally recognized in our society--both by our laws and our 'sense of fair play.' Those who exercise this right peaceably deserve the full protection of our law enforcement agencies."

The Board of Social and Economic Relations of the Methodist Church has said:

"We commend participating students for the dignified non-violent manner in which they have conducted themselves. . . .Students should be free to exercise in their personal Christian responsibilities. Methodist institutions should not penalize students who do so."

The Presbyterian Outlook, Published in Richmond,Virginia, has come out wholeheartedly in favor of the "sit-ins."

The Division of Racial Minorities and the Division of Christian Citizenship of the Protestant Episcopal Church observed:

"Certain laws so degrade the individual that they threaten the dignity of law itself. The remarkable characteristic of most of the 'sit-in' protests has been the orderly way in which they have been conducted."

In San Antonio, Texas, a Disciples minister, C. Don Baugh, Executive Director of the San Antonio Council of Churches, took the lead in calling together civic leaders and businessmen to eliminate segregated eating facilities when the city was faced with the threat of "Sit-ins."

Religious News Service reported that at Nashville, Tennessee:

"Faculty members of Vanderbilt University's College of Art and Sciences and its Divinity School swiftly declared their opposition to dismissal of a Negro Methodist theological student for leading anti-segregation 'sit-in' demonstrations in Nashville stores.

"In two separate statements--signed by 127 out of 180 Arts and Science faculty members and 14 of 16 Divinity school professors--the educators deplored the expulsion of James Lawson, 32, a senior in the inter-denominational seminary."

The National Student Christian Federation in writing to its members says:

"One reason for drawing this to your attention is: (1) to remind you that as Christian students we are inevitably involved, and (2) that many of the students involved in the demonstrations while professing to be Christians consider themselves to be outside the camp of either church or society. With reference to the church we again and again receive evidence that there is a growing impatience about the continued segregation of the churches, and a growing feeling that the churches are not taking seriously the demand for racial justice and racial equality."

Though it seems probable that during the summer there will be some slackening of the growth of the "sit-in" movement, all that one can learn of it points toward renewed and greatly increased activity in the fall. Meanwhile, cases of individual "sit-in" protesters are being taken to court in dozens of cities.

The United Presbyterian Church (Student Demonstrations):

Since February of this year, college (and in some instances, high school) students in over seventy Southern communities have staged orderly, peaceful, and dignified efforts to obtain nonsegregated service at lunch counters, public libraries, and other places of public accommodation. Some have been beaten, cursed, spat upon, soaked with fire hoses in freezing weather. At least a thousand students have been arrested on charges varying from "disturbing the peace" to "conspiracy to obstruct commerce" to "trespassing." Not a few of those arrested have elected to serve jail sentences rather than pay fines or bail.

These spontaneous student demonstrations have been hailed as the most significant development in the movement toward desegregation since the famous Supreme Court decision of May 17, 1954. They have sparked sympathy demonstrations on over a hundred Northern college and university campuses and financial and moral support from dozens of organizations (in March, for example, from the members of the staff of the United Presbyterian Board of Christian Education and in April from members of the Board itself).

Statement of the Executive Committee of the Board of Home Missions, Congregational Christian Churches, April 28, 1960:

The Board of Home Missions, through its Executive Committee meeting on April 28, 1960 expresses its support of the students of its own affiliated colleges and of other educational institutions in their demonstrations against racial discrimination in stores, eating establishments, libraries and other places purporting to serve the general public.

We note with appreciation the excellent self-discipline of these demonstrators even in the face of physical attacks and verbal denunciations by ruffians. We commend the colleges that have not expelled or otherwise penalized their students for participation in these demonstrations and also those civil authorities who have attempted to protect peaceful demonstrators.

END VOTE BIAS, TERRELL TOLD

From Atlanta Constitution, September 14

MACON--U.S. District Judge William A. Bootle ordered the Terrell registrars to comply with his order within 10 days.

In a 27-page ruling, the federal district judge permanently enjoined the Terrell registrars from engaging in any practices which involve distinction on the base of race or color between Negroes and other citizens in voting and in registration for voting in Terrell County.

Specifically, the judge enjoined the registrars from:

1. Using different colored application forms for white and Negro voters.

2. Keeping separate registration and voting records for whites and Negroes according to race.

3. Delaying action on application for registration by Negroes while not delaying action on applications of whites.

4. Administering literacy tests requiring Negroes to read and write a more lengthly and difficult paragraph of the constitution of Georgia or of the United States than whites are required to read and write.

5. Administering literacy tests requiring Negroes to read aloud and to write from dictation while not requiring white applicants to do likewise.

6. Administering tests to Negroes singularly and apart from white applicants while administering such tests to white applicants in groups.

7. Requiring a higher standard of literacy of Negroes than of white applicants in passing upon the results of the literacy tests.

The four Negro complainants ordered enrolled on Terrell voter lists are Marjrie Moore Tune, Grace Boyd Gibson, Dave Gibson and Genevieve M. Shedrick

"It is the intent and purpose of this court," Judge Bootle's ruling said, that the persons enjoined shall do whatever is necessary to be done to enroll within 10 days of this decree upon the list of qualified voters of Terrell County, Ga., the names of all of the above four persons."

The lengthy court order also forbids the Terrell registrars from denying registration to any Negro applicant otherwise qualified whose performance in literacy tests is at least equal to that of other applicants who have passed such tests.

The registrars were enjoined "from failing to accord to any Negro citizen of Terrell County in a fair and impartial and non-discriminatory manner each and every right such citizen has or may have under the election laws, customs, usages and regulations of the state of Georgia and under the Constitution and laws of the United States pertaining to suffrage."

TERRELL PROMISES TO GIVE NEGROES EQUAL RIGHT TO VOTE

From Atlanta Journal, September 23

MACON, Ga., Sept. 23--The Terrell County Board of Registrars, loser in the Justice Department's first suit under the 1957 Civil Rights Act, has promised full compliance with a federal court order, to stop discriminating against Negroes.

The Judge has not acted on a Justice Department request for appointment of a federal referee to supervise Negro voter registration in Terrell. Under the injunction, however, any Negro who considered himself discriminated against could ask the court's help.

The report, signed by chief registrar James G. Raines and attorney Charles J. Bloch who represented the registrars announced that the names of four Negroes, Mrs. Marjorie Moore Turner, Mrs. Grace Boyd Gibson, Davey L. Gibson and Mrs. Genevieve M. Shedrick, were added to voting rolls according to directions of Judge Bootle.

The Terrell report said that a plan, drawn up by Raines with the approval of Bloch, was made outlining procedure to be used to comply with the court decree. "Said plan was designed by Mr. Raines for the purpose of being able to show to the court at any time," the report said, "that a conscientious compliance with the court's decrees is being effectuated."

The report said the names of the four persons ordered registered were included "as nearly as possible in alphabetical order" on the copies of the rolls in the possession of the registrars, and that a request had been forwarded to Secretary of State Ben Fortson in Atlanta to correct his list to include the names.

A new list was then drawn placing all voters in alphabetical order "without reference to the race of the voters." Raines said he had destroyed all the green cards previously used for registering Negro voters, while whites used white cards, and that all the information from the tinted cards had been transferred to white cards.

Official Restriction of the Opportunity of Negroes to Register and Vote

in Macon County, Alabama

For more than twenty years, Negro citizens in Macon County, Alabama, in their efforts to register and vote, have almost continuously met strong official resistance. Various techniques have been employed to limit or prevent the participation of Negroes in politics. Although Negroes have constituted more than four-fifths of the total population, they have only just recently constituted one-fourth of the total voters in the County.

Between January 1, 1951 and December 31, 1959 (nine years), certificates of registration were issued to only 510 (32%) of the 1,585 Negroes from whom applications were accepted. This was an average of 56.7 per year.

Following is a list of techniques which have been employed by the white officials to limit or prevent Negroes from political participation:

1. Requiring Negroes and Whites to register in separate rooms and in separate parts of the Macon County Courthouse.

2. Registrars frequently reporting for work late and leaving work early, thus reducing the number of hours available to Negro applicants.

3. Permitting only two Negro applicatns in the registration room at the same time.

4. Requiring Negro applicants to read and transcribe articles from the Constitution of the United States, in addition to filling out the voter registration questionnaire.

5. Conversing with applicants as they write, which practice disturbs them, and stimulates making errors.

6. Permitting a Negro voter to vouch for only two applicants per year.

7. Preventing some Negro voters from vouching for any applicant.

8. Failing to issue certificates of registration to Negroes immediately upon the successful completion of the requirements for registration.

9. Failing to inform unsuccessful applicants of their failure to fulfill the requirements for registration.

10. Failing to work on many registration days.

11. Resigning from the board in order not to register Negroes.

To the foregoing restrictions, other Couhty officials have

1. Refused to appoint any Negro voter to serve in any capacity as one of the 108 workers at the polls on election days.

2. Refused to appoint any Negro to serve on the seven-member County Board of Public Welfare.

The State Legislature has also contributed to the restrictive measures by enacting legislation which

1. Permits Boards of Registrars to use twelve of their working days for clerical work only, and in even years to use up to twenty additional days in the precincts away from the courthouse. (There is no requirement that the Board announce in advance which days will be so used.)

2. Gerrymandered the city of Tuskegee in such a manner as to eliminate from residence in the city 400 of its 410 Negro voters. (Not a single white voter was removed from the city).

Supplementing the foregoing, many local white citizens refuse to accept appointment to serve on the Board of Registrars, and the Governor and his two associates (the State Appointing Board) refuse the appoint qualified Negro voters to serve.

ECONOMIC BOYCOTT

Undercutting the White Citizens' Councils (Fayette County, Tenn.)

Belatedly the Justice Department has acted to stop economic discrimination against Negroes who seek to assert their civil rights by registering to vote. In Tennessee the department has brought injunction suits against banks and individuals in an effort to stop economic coercion impairing citizens' rights. The coercion has been manifested in various ways. A number of Negro teachers have lost their positions; others have been warned that they will be fired if they attempt to register. A Negro minister who had urged his people to register was denied a small loan at a bank even though his cosigner was conspicuously solvent. Negroes have been compelled to move from their homes, to pay loans prematurely, to go far afield to sell their products. Some have been unable to rent land, buy necessities, or obtain services, simply because they tried to behave as good citizens should. Now the justice department has moved to halt the application of economic sanctions against Negroes. In so doing it has struck a solid blow at the so-called White Citizens' Councils, which often apply economic sanctions against Negroes or against whites who seek to help Negroes vote. In fact, economic coercion has been the councils' chief form of attack on Negro rights. It is to be hoped that the Justice Department will file and press suits not only in Tennessee but in other states where the councils practice their cruelties.

Consent judgement was made at Memphis, April 24. The first voting rights case under 1957 Civil Rights Act to be settled by Negotiation.

Justice Department filed suit against the registrar of the Parish and the White Citizens Council. One thousand two hundred eighty-one qualified Negroes had been removed from the voters list through challenges of the White Citizens Council.

On January 12, 1960, the Judge J. Skelly Wright ordered the names of these 1,281 Negroes to be placed again on the voters list. This decision was upheld by the Supreme Court on February 29, on the grounds the Negroes were asked questions not asked to white people.

Hearings by U. S. Civil Rights Commission in New Orleans, September 27-28, 1960

Berl Bernhard, Commission Deputy staff director reported, the Commission had received complaints of discrimination against Negro registration and voting from 17 Parishes -- Bienville, Bossier, Caddo, Clairborne, De Soto, East Carroll, Jackson, Madison, Ouachita, Red River, Tensas, and Webster from North Louisiana; and from South Louisiana, East Feliciana, West Feliciana, St. Helena, Washington and Plaquemines; 35 witnesses coming from Ouachita, East Carroll, Madison, Caddo, Clairborne, St. Helena, Jackson, Plaquemines, Webster, Red River, Bossier Parishes testified.

Complaints

Listed by Clarence A. Laws, field secretary of the N. A. A. C. P.:

1. Outright refusal to register Negroes.
2. Telling Negroes that the registration office is closed.
3. Telling Negroes that they must come at another time even though whites are being registered.
4. Stating that Negroes have failed to properly identify themselves or to establish citizenship.
5. Alleging that application form for registration was not properly accomplished.
6. Concluding questions asked about the federal or state constitutions or some other subject were not properly answered.

State Attorney Gremillion is contemplating invoking the new law passed by the legislature in 1960, which provides imprisonment of one to five years, a $1,000 fine if a person is convicted of making a false, ficticious, or fraudulent statement to any federal agency, asserting that a state or parish official has denied any right guaranteed by the United States or State Constitution.

From The Atlanta Journal and Constitution, May 8, 1960

Some Officials Hurting State, Mitchell Holds

ROME, Ga., May 7--Without calling any names, Rep. Erwin Mitchell Saturday laid out other Georgians serving in Congress and in state offices as a group "doing more harm to our region than any group of Northern Democrats and Republicans could ever do."

"This small group of men and women, and thankfully it is small and will continue to grow smaller, is one of the major obstacles in the path toward unprecedented economic growth, development, and prosperity in our region," Mr. Mitchell said in a speech here.

The 35-year-old Georgia solon, retiring from Congress because of bad health, made his talk to a meeting of the Seventh District Democratic executive committee. The committee met in the city auditorium Saturday to set the rules under which Mr. Mitchell's successor will be chosen.

About 200 persons were in the audience which heard Congressman Mitchell speak and they interrupted him several times with applause. There was a strong ovation at the end.

The solon said that afterwards, a number of individuals came up to him and extended congratulations on what he had said. A number termed the speech "courageous." Mr. Mitchell said he got no adverse reaction although there may have been some.

The Congressman, whose home is at Dalton in Whitfield County, took the occasion to tell the assembled Democrats that he thinks people who are elected to office on the Democratic ticket should act like Democrats.

"When any candidate seeks to run as a nominee of his party, he thereby signifies that that particular party's ideas and goals most closely approximate his own," Mr. Mitchell said.

"This being so, it is a source of amazement that we constantly return to office, as Democrats, elected officials who have established the practice of berating our party, its leadership and its principles.

"It is absolutely astounding that we permit these men and women to bear the Democratic badge when they at every opportunity, through voice and vote, join with the opposition party. I can say this because I believe in the Democratic Party.

"I can say this because I have not and never will be part of the sham and hyposrisy that permeates the rank of the Democratic Party in the South.

"And when I say this, I am talking about political leadership both state and national throughout the South.

"May the day be forthcoming, and I say to you with the strongest conviction of which I am capable that this day will be forthcoming, when we Democrats will nominate and elect Democrats and will send scrambling those who use our party only as an expedient avenue to public office."

As one example of the manner in which he believes these "self-styled Democrats" have damaged the South, Mr. Mitchell said they "through their hue and cry have with a great deal of success instilled in the minds of Georgians and other Southerners the false belief that the remainder of the nation literally hates us.

"These are the ones who constantly cry out that Northerners seek to crucify us, to insult us, to make whipping boys of us.

"I have travelled throughout our great nation and I have never found this to be so. I have many friends in the Congress from all over the United States and I know that is not their sentiment. On the contrary, the prevailing sentiment is that the South is a part of the United States, just as is the West, North, and East. . . .

"These political leaders who deem themselves the preservers of our way of life might well be called the destroyers of our future.

"These people through their negative approach and with the help of a substantial portion of the Southern press have sought to convey the impression that we in the South are the last bastion of freedom in our great republic. This we know to be untrue.

"These same thought-molders have developed the negative and defeatist attitude that the remainder of the nation stands aligned against the future growth and progress of the South. This we know to be untrue.

"Our fellow Americans, regardless of where they come from, stand ready to join with us for our mutual benefit if we would only let them. But the attitude of our political leaders closes the door to this prospect.

"They say we are suspicious of you, we don't trust you, and we will not cooperate with you."

As a result, Mr. Mitchell declared, the influence of the South is lessened each year in Washington.

The Southern solons refuse to go along with the "genuine needs" of the nation's metropolitan areas. And as a consequence, the representatives of the metropolitan areas are withdrawing their support from the farm program which is vital to the South, he declared.

"This same untenable attitude has led all public education in our state to the very brink of destruction, Mr. Mitchell stated.

"It warns of federal domination, it shouts federal encroachment and control, it says on the one hand 'stay away federal government and let us operate our schools as we see fit,' and on the other hand it says to you and to me in the local school district that you cannot have the freedom of choice to determine locally what you desire. . . .

"This same leadership screams 'states rights' when the Congress enacts legislation to insure the right of vote to every qualified American regardless of where he may live. And at the same time it is responsible for legislation that takes away from you the right to vote for the Democratic nominee for president."

Mr. Mitchell was referring to Georgia's presidential electors law, first sponsored by then Gov. Herman Talmadge in 1952, and subsequently extended to apply to later presidential elections.

"How many of you recognize the fact that when we go to the polls in November of this year to elect the President of the United States that here in the state of Georgia, if you desire to vote for the Democratic nominee, you will have no opportunity to do so?

"Our only opportunity will be to vote for a slate of unpledged electors. They will cast the electoral vote of our state for whomever they may choose and without your or my concurrence, advice, or instruction.

"The same leadership that says there is no need for more legislation to insure the privilege of voting in Georgia is the very same leadership that is responsible for taking away from us the cherished right to cast our ballot for the specific Democrat we would like elevated to the presidency."

Congressman Mitchell, formerly a solicitor general and a superior court judge, said that no one is prouder of his heritage than he is.

"No one loves Georgia and the Southland any more than I, but I am afraid that by and large our leadership has been guilty of too much tradition and not enough vision," he declared.

"This is the age of rockets and nuclear power. What is our past, we will continue to revere and will continue to be enriched by it. But we must come of age politically.

"We must elect men to office whohave a full consciousness of America's great reservoir of progress that is awaiting to be tapped. While we should continue to treasure the past and gain experience from it, we should no longer live in it.

"We must have leaders who are living in the present and are looking to the tomorrow."

HOW SHALL WE FACE THE EVERYDAY TESTS

AHEAD?

With Faith--the inner spirit with which we win moral victories over chaos, unrest, and evil.

With Belief--a belief in God, his creation and the life everlasting.

With Prayer--as regularly as night follows day.

With Conscience--the counterpoise between right and wrong.

With Courage--the indomitable quality that keeps us going forward.

With Honesty--because it is an obligation within ourselves.

With Content of the simple things--so that we may defeat selfishness and personal concerns from undermining the high plan of His will.

With Love for one another--the new philosophy of life.

With Christian living--that which we can attain only through thinking and doing what is in accord with Christ's teachings.

With trust in this credo--for it is God's will.

FROM -- THE EPISCOPAL ADDRESS GENERAL CONFERENCE 1960 METHODIST CHURCH

The Unceasing Battle

Methodism, everlastingly, has fought against the traffic in beverage alcohol, regarding it as a beast tearing at the vitals of society. The struggle goes on, not as a matter of expediency but of national survival. The bare facts are appalling and must not be minimized: more than five million alcoholics now, with the number increasing sharply every year; forty thousand annual traffic fatalities of which at least one-third are caused by drinking drivers; an unholy alliance between liquor and all forms of vice and crime; countless broken homes and children abused by drinking parents; some eleven billion dollars diverted each year from the channels of legitimate trade; an expenditure of more than four hundred million dollars annually in alluring and deceptive advertising by hired specialists in the art of hidden persuasion; militant opposition by an ever-active legislative lobby against every effort to curtail or control this rampant wickedness.

The liquor industry seeks to operate under the protection of civil law on the specious grounds that it is a legitimate business and that its tax revenues are necessary to support the government. Actually, it is nothing but an economic and moral parasite, consuming manpower, dissipating enormous quantities of good grains in a hungry world, and dispensing poison to the bodies and souls of men. Its billions produce nothing of positive value, its tax revenue is only a sop in return for waste, and for every tax dollar from liquor five must be spent in the futile effort to salvage the wreckage it causes, in law enforcement which it undermines and in caring for its victims.

Even among Protestants, with our traditional emphasis upon sobriety, social drinking appears to be on an upward trend. This insidious endeavor to cover the vice of drinking with a cloak of respectability demands an honest search for scientific truth and for the mind of Christ on this relentless problem. Believing that these two sources agree in this matter, Methodists have taken their stand for total abstinence. Nor do we stand alone. Indeed, there are other bodies of Christians that surpass us in their zeal for sobriety. It is time we matched them.

We record our gratitude for the vigilance and unceasing activity of the Board of Temperance. Let nothing inhibit its unceasing battle against alcohol and its unfaltering efforts to reclaim and rehabilitate the alcoholics. With so effective an agency as Alcoholics Anonymous reaching only one out of thirty-five of these victims in America, it is easy to see that the Church's mission in this field must be greatly expanded. This must include competent education about alcohol, based upon continuing scientific research and social studies, begun in the home and continued throughout the curriculum of church and school. A capably written book, "A Study of Alcohol and Christian Responsibility," will be the church-wide Mission Study book for 1961 and has been approved as a leadership training text by the Board of Education. This study has our hearty endorsement. The circle of dedicated resistance of those pledged to total abstinence should be enlarged through the regular observance of Commitment Day and reinforced by constant encouragement and study.

But our responsibility is not discharged by these efforts at salvaging and prevention. They are necessary but not enough. To achieve a more realistic break through in our labors in this field we must discover legal means through political action to establish more effective social controls of the liquor industry.

Liquor control measures have been characterized by inadequate legislation, and often poor and corrupt administration of existing law. We urge that study and consideration should be given to a review of the functions of state liquor control boards. Such boards should become agencies to promote not only efficient tax and licensing procedures but also socially constructive attitudes toward alcoholic beverages.

We must recognize that we confront an enemy that knows no pity, an entrenched evil that in its lust for profit has never yielded an inch except it has been driven back by an outraged and determined citizenship. It is folly to trust the blandishments of the liquor industry about moderation or self-control. The time has come when the clamor of the minority insisting upon their assumed right to buy and consume beverage alcohol when and where they please must be vigorously resisted by a majority who demand their right to a degree of safety on the highways, to freedom from the hidden tax burden caused by liquor, and to protection from liquor-induced crime. It is unworthy of us to believe that the liquor traffic is so powerful that its death-hold cannot be broken. A return to a crusading spirit in Methodist pulpits and among Methodist laymen could be a decisive factor in the effective restraint of this unmitigated evil.

On another front, evidence continues to mount, from prolonged and precise research, that there is a direct relation between the use of tobacco and the incidence of certain deadly diseases. We would be recreant to our trust if we did not reiterate, with increasing concern, the warnings against the use of tobacco given in the last Episcopal Address and in the resolutions adopted by the last General Conference. It seems to us clearly inconsistent with the fullest degree of Christian freedom for one who regards the human body as a temple of the Holy Spirit to be in bondage to any enslaving habit, any conspicuous waste or any form of self-indulgence. This in our view is the reason for the pledge to refrain from the use of tobacco which is required before a license to preach can be granted in the Methodist Church and must be renewed by each probationer in an Annual Conference.

We are deeply convinced that Methodism with its doctrinal emphasis upon a constant aspiration toward the perfect life and with its traditional ideal of disciplined and joyous living has a distinctive contribution to make to the thought and practice of contemporary Christianity. May God give us grace and courage to fulfill this mission!

SUMMARY FROM THE 100 OR MORE SHEETS TURNED IN BY THOSE ATTENDING THE WORKSHOP OF THE FELLOWSHIP OF THE CONCERNED, NOVEMBER 6-7, 1961

"What I Will try to do when I go Home."

There are certain phrases that appear over and over again in the answers, such as, "I will try to take the inspiration and information to the group with which I am affiliated," "Communication between the races,"occuring so many times reveals an awareness that we do not know each other, and barriers exist that must be erased.

There are words also used often, i.e., "Contact" "Report" "Share" "Witness" and "Communication."

If all the promised contacts and reports are made to the many organizations, the 1961 Workshop of the Fellowship of the Concerned will be far-reaching.

Some Excerpts - each quote (in quotation marks) comes from a different sheet submitted.

THROUGH PERSONAL CONTACTS.

"I will take steps to break through the barriers by working harder than ever through my membership in organizations to find closer relationships between the races."

"I will try to stimulate white Methodist women to fellowship with sister churches in the Central Jurisdiction."

"I will work to break some barriers and intimidations that prevent action."

"I will write ten Negro and white church leaders to discuss Bishop Pike's 'Roots of Prejudice,' in hopes there will be enough interest to desire other discussion periods."

"Wherever possible I'll patronize only desegregated places - I hope to help my county United Church Women to desegregate - perhaps beginning with World Day of Prayer."

"Give my recent copies of New South to uncommitted persons, asking them to read carefully and prayerfully."

"I am going to see the Charter of Race Relations is adopted by my District Woman's Society."

"I will have an integrated group at my apartment to read and discuss religious plays."

"I will have an area meeting and at coffee hour, discuss "One-ness'"

"I will continue to develop personal friendships with Negroes, visiting in each others homes, for meals, etc.

"I will entertain a Negro student from Bethune-Cookman College along with other students from Methodist Student Center at University of Miami."

"Report the Atlanta Meeting at P.T.A. as I moderate a panel on "Time to Explore New Ideas."

"Barriers in my church are the hardest, I will try on this. This may be my first, though I fear the last opportunity."

"Talk constantly with my husband, report to my church circle, my class of couples, to the Y. W. C.A."

"I shall talk to my pastor on integration in the church."

"I shall make a real effort to fullier integrate our Y.W.C.A. program for the under classes."

"I shall talk to the editor of our paper about this meeting."

"My highest priority is the Woman's Auxiliary of our General Hospital, where half or more of patients are colored - only white women are in the Auxiliary."

"I will spot leadership potential among Negro women in the integrated group to which I belong and will work to get recognition of their talent by helping them to be elected or appointed to leadership places, beginning with the P. T. A. Council. We hope to include Negroes in the 'World Day of Prayer' Service - Leaders of both races will plan to execute a Bible School for the Negro children."

HOUSING.

"I am working on housing for Negro students in the University, setting an example for others by taking a Negro graduate student into my home."

"I will look into a new housing project being instituted through the Urban Renewal."

"Check with Urban Redevelopment Commission to see about housing for Negroes being moved out of area."

CITIZENSHIP AND LAW ENFORCEMENT.

"Meet with Improvement Council to set up Registration schools in churches."

"Work in Registration Drive - Help prepare persons to pass the Alabama tests."

"Call a meeting - Christian Social Concern Commission in my church to plan observance of Human Rights Day."

"Try to do something to help and encourage High School students serving jail sentences in Pike County - Follow up my interest in justice in the courts in my state, at least by attending courts myself."

"I shall continue to press for law enforcement on our beach so that our Negro citizens and Negro college students shall not be molested or intimidated."

"I shall begin working for better training for policemen."

"I will give names of those in my state, who attended the Fellowship of the Concerned, to the Chairmen of Legislative Council of United Church Women, that she may contact them on issues in the legislature, January, 1962.

JOB OPPORTUNITIES.

"I will work to get a number of organizations to work together on a survey of job opportunities for Negroes and for qualified personnel available for jobs."

"Start investigating employment practices, seek to form a fact-finding committee."

"I shall alert our Public Affairs Committee to the need for gathering information about job openings giving equal opportunities for both races - need accurate information."

LETTER WRITING.--runs all the way from writing to Attorney General to articles to a Newsletter of organizations; to our Art Association protesting the fact that no Negroes have an opportunity to enter the classes; to letters of commendation to courageous editors, and sometimes letters to the public through the newspaper."

"I will try to write to my local papers questioning the lack of industry, which might be required by Federal law to maintain 'fair employment practices'" - It is fairly obvious that these industries are not being invited to my city by our Chamber of Commerce in order to maintain segregation of employment."

There are three promises of interviews with local editors.

PRAYER.

Many know the plans they have made are not easy undertakings - and know help must come from out and beyond them.

"At present time, I am living on a college campus - but it is the members of my own church in the State Capitol that needs help. Perhaps I can find a way - God being my help."

"I shall continue to pray for God's guidance in the whole matter."

"Pray, pray, pray, will try to form an inter-racial prayer group."

Five others have stated they will do their best to form inter-racial prayer groups.

"I will ask God to give me faith, strength and patience, keep me humble, and somehow grant me poise and wisdom and always love."

"The future, and its opportunities are unknown, all we can do is to stand by alert - concerned and willing to follow God's will.

STEWARDSHIP.

There is a sense of stewardship running through the lines - a feeling that they must "share" as evidenced by the number of promises to report to other groups. The word "witness" is used over and over . There is also a dedication to the job ahead. Two sheets by different women sum this up - - -

"To become deeply dedicated to ideas, principles, and practices of Christian living, to let our 'know' catch up with our 'doing.'"

"Recognizing the struggle for human dignity, I will take advantage of every opportunity to say something or do something to extend commitment to truth and worth of human beings and the realization of the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of man."

CONCULSION.

They listened to the messages of the speakers, they had their discussion groups - they really caught the spirit and purpose of the Workshop.....

We seek...

A Conviction that will not let us rest;

A Faith that will not shrink;

A Courage that will not faller.

REPORT OF THE DISCUSSION GROUPS

Q. What an we do as individuals to grow in depth and vision lest we grow weary in well-doing?

A. Reporter for Group I:

Take advantage of any opportunity. Meet with people of other races and nationality. Construct relationships on our part. We should use empathy.

Reporter for Group II

Individual action and commitment to good causes are necessary b before concrete results can be achieved.

Reporter for Group III.

Individual contact with individuals to establish true friendships and concern.

RECOMMENDATIONS: Subscribe to the Negro Magazines; read writers' work for greater dimension. Correspondence - lifting spirits through correspondence, knowing of what is happening in and around the world.

Q. How can we bring concerned individuals in Negro and white communities together in more significant communication?

A. Group I.

Help in daily vacation Bible School; Communication; have prayer groups meet regularly; Use youth Y-Teen groups; using all methods we possibly can, carry on meetings.

Group II.

The first step should be taken on both sides in order to bring concerned individuals in the Negro and white communities closer together. The "let George do it" attitude is out in achieving better human relations.

Jackson: Small towns and communities should be given a more tr true understanding of facts. Community relationships seemee better in larger towns and groups. Establish lines in communication.

Ashley: Depend on organized groups, for communication. Person to person communication.

Q. How can we bring to commitment those who are uncertain but troubled in conscience?

A. Group I.

Contact borderline persons, and through large groups, make known their need to know of complications of small groups, Study groups. Get definite feelings and positive attitudes.

Group IV.

In view of the fact that we represent such great faiths, we should depend on them, talk them up, live them up, and in this way possibly we can bring about a satisfaction to the troubled and uncertain conscience.

Group II.
For those who are uncommitted but concerned and are tottering on the brink of indecision, we should give all the love and understanding possible, and maintain a tolerant attitude while they are making up their minds.

Q. What can we do in our parishes and Synagogues to bring them to corporate witnesses?

A. Group V.
Set up leadership. Combine groups under one responsible leader. Issue a Manifesto, this could be done by the Ministers, College leaders, doctors, scientists.

Group VIII.
Start with the churches, extend invitations, exchange programs, etc. Workshops, personal connections, person-to-person contacts, challenge the face-to-face contacts.

Group II.
In our churches and synagogues, our corporate witness should begin with ourselves. Try inviting persons of another race into the fellowship of the congregation.

RECOMMENDATIONS: Begin within organized groups, and invite other races to jokn and attend our fellowship.

Q. What significant action can be taken as individuals to further employment on the basis of merit and the unrestricted opening of housing opportunities?

A. Group II.
Significant action should be taken by each of us as individuals if we would bring about a better world.

Group III.
Job opportunities based on technical training probably greater in small areas; pressure put on merchants and employers for the employment of youth, also certain citizens.

Housing: Urban renewal; subsidizing housing rule has been ignored; committee should be formed; people should live where they wish, not integration, but de-segregation.

Group VII. Urban Refugees - should be a concern for all; check with agencies and organizations, for housing and job opportunities.

It was reported that Louisville, Ky., had dropped its tag on racial property, equal opportunity in employment.

Mrs. Boozer: SRC has helped to conduct four employment surveys. Available information on these surveys available through the Southern Regional Council.

Q. What is our role in seeing that one Supreme Court decision on the desegregation of Public Schools is implemented in spirit and the truth in our own communities?

Group I. Check with such groups as OASIS, AND HOPE.

Group 5: (1) Quiet work is important; (2) Inter-group Conference a good way to improve the Supreme Court's decision. OASIS grew out of the schools, religious, youth and civic groups. Let us remember that "God is not in an earthquake, or fire, but in a small voice."

DURR-CAHN: Beyond personal, volunteer groups, government groups, bring to attention the possibility of looking on the government groups handling housing. Write letters, write Kennedy, too, for protection of freedom riders. Ask for protection from terror.

STEVENS: Meeting has been a symbol of what we want to do when we get back home.

1. Meeting was given by one woman with upper-room experiences.
2. Meeting was under the great umbrella of the so-called agency, Allies, special church relations, etc.
3. Represented here in this room are three great faiths, which was felt to be a wonderful way to start helping to bring about better race relations, not only on the local level but also on a national level.

Comments on Employment: As a channel through which to work, government contracts, Chamber of Commerce especially. However, we find that many organizations, etc., will accept no government contracts because of pressure that will be put on them.

COMMENTS ON RELATIONSHIPS: Get our children to be friendly. Get attitudes "set in" in early life, also, help the mothers in seeing the need for togetherness.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED BY
DR. DOW KIRKPATRICK
PASTOR, ST. MARK METHODIST CHURCH, ATLANTA, GEORGIA TO THE FELLOWSHIP OF THE CONCERNED WORKSHOP

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

Its been a good morning, and now we come to a word of St. Paul in Romans the first chapter. You will need to refer to the Phillips translation to get it to read like this. "I feel myself under a sort of universal obligation, I owe something to all men." We were being shephered by that most remarkable Methodist Bishop, Newall Booth, through immigration formalities in the air port in Elizabethville, last May. At the table sat the Immigration Officer, behind him the ever present picture of President Tshombe . Tracy Jones, one of my traveling companions and one of the top level Missions executives of the Methodist Church, said to me, "You didn't miss that sermon illustration, did you?" I said, "What sermon illustration?" Admitting that I had missed it of course. "Why," he said, "look what's behind that Immigration Officer, just under Mr. Tshombe's picture." There was one of these porcelain tables that belong in the delivery room in the hospital, a table on which mothers give birth to babies. Tracy said, "Surely you can't miss that." A nation is being brought to birth here, and the whole world is suffering its birth pains.

Well, I hadn't been thinking much about sermon illustrations that Sunday afternoon in May. We had set out that afternoon from Salisbury, Rhodesia to come to Elizabethville. It had been a wild kind of ride, the flight was a scheduled flight but when we boarded the plane, we noticed that it had no markings whatsoever, it was an old DC-4, I thought they were out of existence. And they were. They are out in the Congo, being used. In the passenger compartment was a lot of interesting looking freight, some boxes marked, (this was in May), marked "Easter Eggs made in Czechoslovakia." The crew, the kind you know, the pilot a fellow who grows a beard, and wears an ascot kerchief, and carries a dog under his arm when he gets on and off the plane, so we were apprehensive and as we circled the Elizabethville airport we noticed a great mob of people straining at the fences and that didn't help any. But when we landed and saw what was really happening we let off with that nervous kind of laugh that always releases tensions for we discovered that the citizens of Elizabethville were out for a pleasant Sunday afternoon at the airport to watch the parade, and to hear the bagpipes, for the Irish soldiers of the UN, (these boys who have been in such bad trouble lately), were in their Kilts and with their bagpipes were out for the afternoon, and that was something for an African to behold.

This is a little sample of our world, for as strange as it all seems, it is just as surely our world, as this lounge of Clark College is our world. And when you stop to try to list what are the factors that make one, it would be easy to make a long list, and yet perhaps it would be more helpful to make a very brief list, for the one thing that is sure about our world and the one thing that is universal about our world is that it is revolution. It's a revolutionary world. Now it ought not be necessary to prove that to a group like this. You know that just over four years ago, there were four independent nations in Africa, now there is something like twenty-eight. That within the last year approximately seventeen areas have become independent areas.

The Congo is central because in a sense it is a sign and symbol of what's wrong and sad about our revolution. It's so central to the continent of Africa, it touches almost all the other areas of Africa, and the world. Five years ago, just five years ago, the officials of the Union Minere in Elizabethville, that's the Belgian company, that operates the minds there, the copper mines, and the source of much of the trouble. One of the officials of that company told Bishop Raines, who is the president of our Methodist Board of Missions, just five years, "Of course, these people must have independence, and we mean for them to have it in about fifty years." Five years ago! Well, five years ago, we were talking like that in Georgia, you remember.

There is a revolution and it is not as easily recognized as it may seem. In Rodesia for example, the trouble there is over the acceptance or rejection of certain so-called liberal concessions made in the constitution and the composition of the assembly. The Africans are saying,"no, we don't want these concessions,"and the white man is saying, "why not?" "We are offering you fifteen seats in the assembly." But fifteen out of fifty-two, it is too late in the world for that kind of thing, the revolution is already past beyond that. Or in Johannesburg, I was riding with one of our Missionaries in the afternoon, out in a section of the city, I recognized that we were in his end of the city and I said, "If you'll just put me on a bus, you won't have to take me downtown, you can just go on home." And he did, but only after explaining to me that they don't have segregated seating in Johannesburg, they have segregated bus lines! They've got two, and at every bus stop, there are two bus stops. It's too late in the world for that kind of thing, I tell you, the revolution is gone past it. Or in Angola, where the worse fighting of all is taking place, where you've got millions of African people, but only 30,000 allowed to vote, and that only once in seven years in an election for the president, who has already been picked before the election. It's too late in the history of the world for that kind of thing, there's a revolution on, all over the world.

You remember in Carlisle writing, the history of the French revolution, there was the night when the Duke of Lioncourt broke into the Royal Apartment of Louis the 16th, and told him of the activities of the people of France in the streets of Paris, Louis, the poor simple soul, said, "Why man, that's a revolt," Lioncourt said, 'Sire, it is not a revolt, it is a revolution." Now there are one or two things that disturb me, about the universal nature of this revolution, that apply to us now. Of course, what has been said about Africa, can be said about the rest of the world, I was there as a part of its consultation on Missionary policy of our Church, we call it a part of long-range planning, we just wonder if God and history will give us enough time to make long-range plans. We're going to Latin-America next, we hope we can get there before too many revolutions break out, and then there is all of Asia. It's the same story all over the world, but there are one or two factors that bear down on us this morning, one is that this one world that is forming, is not forming along the lines you and I had expected.

We had hoped and believed that the one world would come together as a Christian World. This is not happening. What is happening is that there is emerging one culture, all over the world, and that culture is scientific and materialistic, Africans or Latins, or Asians may want the same culture we have, but they don't necessarily want our Christian culture. They want our scientific culture. They want our educational opportunities; they want our materialist standard of living. So you and I have got to decide what this means to the Christian gospel all over the earth. How we deal with a revolution which is producing one world as we had hoped.

The one world that is based on other factors in our culture, and not necessarily on our religious factor, and I think this says something to all of us of whichever race for everyone of us here this morning, has been caught in some of the subtle temptations of the scientific materialistic revolution of our time, the white church of America presents to the world a facade of materialism. The Negro race of America can easily be suspected of wanting freedom not for freedom sake, and not for the sake of the freedom of others in the world, but for the sake of economic privileges, and the social privileges.

We have already confessed that neither one of us has any right to judge another. I simply say that we must face the fact that the world today is advancing in a direction we may not fully desire nor control. And it may be that we are caught in the same emerging materialism, we must be aware of it. The second place where this bears down on us is of course in our own church life as I have already indicated, and here of course I speak more perhaps to those of us who are members of white churches, but the thing that bothers me about my Methodist church is that I see it overseas as a part of and as the producer of this revolution. While in this country it is the conservative force pending to slow down or even work against revolution. Not always, but predominantly. For example, in Angola, we have had five missionaries arrested, one has been released the others have been taken to Lisbon, where they are awaiting trial. It's no wonder that American Methodist Missionaries have been arrested by the Portuguese Government, Angola. It came as something of a shock to read or have read to me from Luanda paper, the Capital of Angola, stories and editorials, which said that the Angola rebels are being furnished their arms from the American Methodist Mission Station.

It is a shock to read that. It is not true, but I will confess to you to a little bit of pride, that our church in Angola and our missionaries have been so identified with the revolutionary desires of the African people that the government could suspect this kind of thing. You would never suspect it of the American Methodist Church here. There they are one thing, here we are another. Or again an illustration. We spend a week-end in Victoria Falls before going on into Johannesburg, and on Sunday,,I purchased a newspaper from Johannesburg, a Sunday paper, I was going to Johannesburg the next day, and read with great interest and pride headlines, which said "Prime Minister says No to Methodists." Now this was the headline of a story about a very dear friend, Dr. J. B. Webb. Joe Webb has stood tall in his pulpit for more than twenty years, in the center of Johannesburg. He is one of the few men like Allen Payton, so influential that the government dare not touch him while they are arresting others, they dare not arrest men like this yet. These were the days just before the republic was proclaimed and there were many voices in South Africa calling for nation-wide multi-racial conventions to deal with these problems.

Finally Joe Webb had said to the Prime Minister, "Let the Methodists initiate such a conference, let us invite them, we will invite them to meet in our church," and it was to that proposal to which the headlines reported, "Prime Minister Says No To Methodists." This is the kind of identification with the world-wide revolution, which our churches have overseas, but not in this country.

Now our problem here in a sense is the same though very different, from the problems of the church overseas. For example, we hear a lot about African tribalism. I was privileged to be in the Annual Conference in Rhodesia, as they were debating a very interesting question. In Old Umtali in Rhodesia in the city of Umtali, there is a church named St. Andrews, which has been a Methodist congregation connected with our American Methodist mission for many years. It was organized to serve the European that came out from England largely. That congregation has insisted on remaining all white, and it has been a source of great irritation.

These laymen are primarily of English background and they haven't been happy with the breezy manner of the young American Missionaries who have been assigned, I mean you don't offer yourself to be a missionary to Africa to go to be pastor of a white congregation in Umtali. So it's been a source of irritation, and this year the proposal has been made by the laymen of the church that they be allowed to transfer out of our American Methodist Mission into the Synod of British Methodism. I may hasten to say that this gives a picture of British Methodism, which is not quite fair, but these are the facts locally. So the debate was taking place in the Annual Conference as to whether this congregation would be allowed to move from American Methodism to British Methodism. And there arose a brilliant young African Layman, a Head-master of our School system there, he is a man with a Master's degree from the University of London, he is coming next fall to Harvard to do PHD work; he is one of the Lay-delegates at Delhi at the world council of churches assembly this month. Matthew said, "We hear often about African tribalism, let me tell you this is British tribalism." Let me ask you today, when the door of a church in your state and town and mine is closed to worship to an African or the American Negro, is this the religion of the New Testament? Or is it Tribalism? Is it the religion of our Lord Jesus Christ? or is it religion based upon the family mores and customs of our social culture? Or let me ask you again, when a patient is brought by an ambulance to a hospital door, a hospital owned and operated by a Christian Church and they are sent away, is this the religion of the Good Samaritan? Or is it Tribalism?

What we are saying today is that our world, though it can be characterized universally by many factors, is characterized by the revolution which unless we can somehow re-direct it, will not be Christian but will be scientific, technological, and materialist. And in the second place it bears down upon us in our own church life. Let me remind you that we have a unique reason for bringing the whole world together, Paul said, "I feel myself under a sort of universal obligation, I owe something to all men." Now Paul did not mean that he felt that he owed every man something because of what every man had done for him, but he felt he owed something to every man because of what God had done for him. My own experience is, and I am sure that yours must be, that when I stand in the presence of the Cross, I am struck with the over-whelming power of the Love of God for me. I know it's for everybody, but for a while, it's only for me, it's for me! This I can not escape, and when I realize that it's for me, then I am aware of how unworthy I am of it. I would say to God, "No, you can't love me, not like that, because you do not know how little I deserve it." But from the cross comes that answer, "I do know you, and I do love you," I can never forget that I owe something to all men, not because of what they have done for me, but because of what God has done for me. And so I suggest that you and I must find a way to identify ourselves with this revolution, this world and what's taking place in it.

Our places will all be different, everyone of us. I've not felt called upon to go with my friends on sit-ins, the freedom rides, but every person must find his place where he can sacrifice something where he can give something of himself to be a part of the redemption of the whole.

Coming out of Israel this summer, I had a new interest in Exodus, that I had not had earlier. If you read the book or saw the movie, you remember there is an incident that I want to close with in both. It is the story of the little girl Karen, talking to her boy friend, who has his own reasons for being bitter against everybody. She is telling about how her own family sent her to Denmark, hoping to escape the Nazis scourge, but it moved on there too, finally, and then came the day when the decree was made, in Denmark, that all Jews would wear the Yellow armband, with the star of David. This cruel device had been used effectively in other places and now, it had come to Denmark. On a certain day every Jew must mark himself off from the rest of the human race by this outward sign, and you know what happened? When that morning came the King of Denmark appeared in public with a yellow band and the star of David, and all the citizens took the cue and soon everybody, Jew and Dane alike, were wearing the cursed sign.

Now you and I have got to find some sign in our lives, that this world revolution has cut deeply, down deep where it hurts into our hearts, and for some of us it will be the shape of a cross for that cross reminds us that He loved us that much, and because He loves us, we are under a sort of universal obligation, we owe something to all men.

HAROLD C. FLEMING
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

A Council to attain, through research and action, the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South.

Dear Friend:

The dates of the annual South wide Workshop of The Fellowship of the Concerned are

November 6 - 7, 1961.

It will be held here in Atlanta. Please mark these dates on your calendar.

This will be a most necessary Workshop as we must find techniques and ways to help our Churches face issues more squarely.

We need your thinking and experience.

Please plan to come.

Sincerely,

Dorothy Tilly

In Hitler's last mad drive to exterminate the Jews, 250,000 terrified men, women and children were helpless. One man, unknown then, acted to save them. Today, he is known and loved by millions.

The woman on my right was engrossed in sprightly table talk with the man on her right.

We had been introduced as we sat down to dinner, but her name had escaped me in the wave of chatter and the shuffling of chairs. I did quickly notice, however, the evident modishness of her dress and the smartness of her grooming. "Chic" was the word, and to a middle-aged romantic she was immediately designated as a Continental.

I had no desire to eavesdrop, but snatches of her conversation reached me, disconnected words and phrases which despite their vagueness suddenly interested me. There was something in the way she flattened certain vowels and thickened her consonants which hinted at an accent that seemed to have meaning to me.

When, finally, she turned toward me, I reintroduced myself and put the question: "Are you from Europe?"

She laughed at the naïveté of my question and answered, "Couldn't you tell by my accent? I'm from Hungary, from Budapest."

"Were you there during the war?" I asked.

"Oh, yes, for most of it."

I remarked that I knew something of the hardships suffered by the people there at that critical time, adding, "Especially the Jews."

By this time our conversation was no longer the typical chatter one exchanges with dinner partners. Her face clouded over with an expression close to pain as she quietly told me, "I should know. I was one of them."

"But you did get out before the end?"

"Yes," she said after a moment's hesitation. "Yes, I got out, at the last moment. But if I hadn't been baptized that night, in a bomb shelter, I might not be here today, talking to you."

The words were simply said, but the impact struck me with more force than she could have expected. In that moment I was transported as if in a filmed flashback to another period, years earlier and thousands of miles away.

I was aboard a tiny excursion boat on the Sea of Marmora which separates the Aegean and Black Seas and is practically landlocked by the two halves of Turkey. It was late in the summer of 1944; my companion was Gilbert Simond, the International Red Cross representative in Turkey and we were on our way to the tiny island of Biuyacada to see Monsignor Angelo Roncalli, the Apostolic Delegate of the Vatican in the Middle East.

At that time I was serving as a special envoy for the War Refugee Board, which had been established by President Roosevelt with the express purpose of saving lives wherever and whenever possible. My personal mission was to extricate refugees from the Balkans.

In the months that I had been in Turkey, we had been able to force the closing of the concentration camp at Transnistria in Rumania. Ships of all sizes and descriptions were leaving the Black Sea port of Costanza, loaded with people fleeing to escape the fate suffered by so many others—being driven, in turn, into ghettos, concentration camps and finally the extermination centers. And the flow of these refugees across Turkey and Syria to safety in Palestine had grown to sizable proportions.

But all of us concerned with saving the remnants of European Jewry were horrified and frustrated by the news that was leaking out of Hungary. The reports that came to us from underground sources would have been unbelievable if we had not by that time learned at first hand of the actual existence of the gas chambers, the crematoria and the other implements of Hitler's savage and unrelenting war against the Jews.

We learned that the Nazis, under the personal direction of the infamous Adolph Eichmann, goaded by the knowledge that the tides of the war were racing against them, were determined to complete their grisly task of extermination, their "final solution to the Jewish problem." They sought to accomplish in weeks in Hungary what had taken years in Germany, Austria, Poland and the rest.

The statistics of the charnel house tell their own tragic story. From April 10, 1944, to June 28 of the same year, 516,075 Jews of all ages had been transported from Hungary to Auschwitz and systematically slaughtered. In slightly more than two months all Hungary outside of Budapest had been rendered "Judenrein"—free of Jews—the most devastating mass annihilation in the history of mankind.

We didn't know all the grim statistics then, but we did know that the time for rescue had shrunk to a few precious weeks. Something drastic had to be done immediately to save the Jewish population of Budapest—approximately a quarter of a million terrified and helpless men, women and children.

In desperation I turned to Gilbert Simond, a man of great good will who had been instrumental in the saving of thousands of lives. Simond was an influential Catholic layman and I begged him to prevail upon his friends in the church to help us in the name of humanity. He suggested that we see Monsignor Roncalli and arranged a meeting.

The home of the Pope's highest emissary in the Middle East was a spacious old house sitting high atop a hill. Hidden from below by lush foliage, it nevertheless afforded a stunning view of the sea in all directions. Immediately on our arrival on the island, we had been ushered into a well-appointed room where we waited for Monsignor Roncalli.

After a brief wait, he entered, a short rotund man whose good humor was immediately evident in his eyes, twinkling under his black skullcap. Warmly and graciously, he welcomed us in Italian, bidding us be seated. As we did so, I offered a silent prayer of thanks for the Italian I had learned some years back: it established an easy contact between us.

Once Simond and I were comfortably settled, our host turned to a small cupboard from which he took a bottle of red wine. After admiring its color, he poured out three glasses and insisted upon drinking to our health. Anxious about my mission, I discreetly tried to introduce the reason for my visit. But Monsignor Roncalli brushed me aside, saying, "That will come later. First we must enjoy the view, the conversation and the wine."

His personality was so radiant and his conviviality so genuine that I was warmed by his spirit and for the moment let the purpose of my presence escape me. In fact, it wasn't until the dregs of a second bottle had been downed that he would permit any thought of practical discussion. Then, suddenly, he announced, "Dunque, cominciamo . . . now, let us begin."

Monsignor Roncalli listened intently as I outlined the perilous plight of the Jews in Hungary. I cited the meager statistics available to me and repeated several of the eyewitness accounts I had received from underground operatives. Then he pulled his chair closer and quietly asked, "Do you have any contact with people in Hungary who will cooperate?"

After my affirmative reply, he hesitated a few moments before asking, "Do you think the Jews there would be willing to undergo baptism ceremonies?"

Not prepared for this suggestion, I equivocated a bit and said that I could only guess or assume that if it meant saving their lives, they would be ready to do so gratefully. I added, "I know what I would do."

He went on to say that he had reason to believe that some baptismal certificates had already been issued by nuns to Hungarian Jews. The Nazis had recognized these as credentials and had permitted their holders to leave the country.

We agreed that he would communicate with his representatives in Hungary and that I would get in touch with our underground connections to arrange for either large-scale baptism of Jews or, at least, certificates to be issued to women and children. It would be up to those who were baptized to decide later whether they would wish to remain in the church or "go their way."

The proposal and agreement had been accomplished in what seemed like a few minutes. It was clear to me that Monsignor Roncalli had considered this plan before my arrival and that he had created an atmosphere in which to test my credentials, my discretion and my ability to put the operation into effect practically. I had no doubt that the wheel would soon be set in motion in Hungary for "Operation Baptism" under the auspices and with the mercy of the Catholic Church.

Simond and I were silent as we sailed back to Istanbul in the little ferryboat. Somehow we were awed by the scope and direction of the events of the afternoon, arrived at so simply and without inhibition, but so heavy with possibilities. In our silence, each of us was taking stock of the implications of our compact. We were approaching twilight, and as our little steamer skimmed over the water the lengthening shadows stretched ahead like moving phantoms. Could this be a portent of the lifting of a curtain to reveal a new freedom for those whose lives depended on our help?

Try as I may, I have not been able to ascertain exactly how many Hungarian Jews were saved or had their lives made easier with those baptismal certificates. They must number in the thousands. And all this thanks to the compassionate intervention of the benevolent Apostolic Delegate to the Middle East.

No other personality I met during those troubled times in Turkey had more sharply etched himself into my memory. How often I have recalled our meeting and remembered his warmth, dynamism and sympathy. It was not within the purview of his pastoral duties to be involved in the rescue of Jews. His action was proof of his humane concern for the welfare of all people.

Is it any wonder that I was moved to tears when in 1958 I read the headlines which announced to the world that Angelo Roncalli had been elected the ruler of the Catholic Church and was from that date to be known as Pope John XXIII? END

BOARD OF MISSIONS OF THE METHODIST CHURCH

·WE BELIEVE·

1. We Believe that God is the Father of all people and all are His children in one family.
2. We Believe that the personality of every human being is sacred.
3. We Believe that opportunities for fellowship and service, for personal growth, and for freedom in every aspect of life are inherent rights of every individual.
4. We Believe that the visible church of Jesus Christ must demonstrate these principles within its own organization and program.
5. We Believe that the Woman's Division as an agency of The Methodist Church must build a fellowship and social order without racial barriers in every area it may touch.

·WE WILL·

1. Commit ourselves as individuals called by Jesus Christ to witness by word and deed to the basic rights of every person regardless of cost.
2. Unite our efforts with all groups in the church toward eliminating in The Methodist Church all forms of segregation based on race whether in basic structure or institutional life.
3. Create in local churches opportunities for inclusive fellowship and membership without restriction based on race.
4. Act with other groups and agencies to involve families in new experiences with other races and cultures.
5. Share in creative plans that challenge youth, students and young adults of all races to new understanding of the Church's mission and ministries.
6. Interpret and strengthen recruitment and employment practices of the Woman's Division consistent with our belief in the oneness of God's family.
7. Open the facilities and services of all Woman's Division institutions without restriction based on race and make such policies clearly known.
8. Establish all Schools of Missions and Christian Service and all leadership development and enrichment programs on a regional basis without restriction based on race.
9. Seek to change community patterns of racial segregation in all relationships including education, housing, voting, employment and public facilities.
10. Work for national policies that safeguard the rights of all the nation's people.
11. Support world-wide movements for basic human rights and fundamental freedoms for peoples everywhere.
12. Join with others who seek in church and community justice and freedom for all members of the family of God.

As we begin this New Decade, the Woman's Division of Christian Service calls with new urgency on the Woman's Society of Christian Service and Wesleyan Service Guild to study the principles and goals stated in this Charter, looking toward early ratification. Such ratification will constitute a commitment to work for the speedy implementation of those principles and goals within jurisdiction, conference, district and local Woman's Society or Guild.

THE CYNICISM of our times seems at its glibbest in savant diagnoses of the psychic ailments of Negro protestants and their white allies against segregation. Psychiatrists in learned journals and parlor conversations suggest "a problem with authority" which drives young rebels to public demonstration and foul confinement in Southern jails. Sagacious businessmen and church women, and some puzzled pastors, point out in omniscient understanding that white girls join the movement for lack of dance dates, fraternity pins and steady boy friends. Negro leaders of an earlier vintage speak in gentle tolerance of the "lack of background" of nonviolent fighters who compensate for poverty and obscurity with the blaze of a Freedom Ride or a two-months' stint in solitary at Baton Rouge, replete with TV and newspaper notoriety. Angrier elders cry that "they do it just for attention," or "kicks," "excitement," "youthful defiance."

We are also treated to the fashionable theory that these wild-eyed youngsters and self-seeking preachers—working for the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the Congress of Racial Equality and in local uprisings all over the South—are primarily, if unconsciously, concerned with "punishing their parents." This analysis is applied with especial care and detailed erudition to young white demonstrators who cast their lot with our revolution, and pain their parents by publicly picketing, sitting in or helping rural Negroes register to vote.

Aside from the possible parents' punishment in economic reprisal and social snubs, one must concede that the young revolutionaries' families are in-

Separate but Equal Lives

by Robert Coles, M.D.

WE ARE AT GRADUATIONS, high school graduations in Atlanta. We come to see them and are brought to recall the moments of a school year.

John walks down the aisle, tall, self consciously straight, eyes fixed in blinding attention, and calls back last summer of him, quiet, shy, determined calm over uncertain, poised muscles. When I first saw him he was reading a law book on assault and battery. It was a month before school was to open, and he was idling, or would shift to cutting hedges to keep from getting lazy and to keep his body trim and ready and fit. Only because he wanted to become a lawyer did he keep reading this law this summer, he let me know firmly, and then there was silence for both of us. His appetite was down, his sleep unsteady, but by his mother's description and not his. They lived in the dimness and almost dank air of a janitor's place, and while his father sorted trash and was summoned to the daily complaints of a large building, his mother quickly or nervously or wearily fastened rubber balls to small wooden Bola Bola rackets for children. Hundreds of these, counted not in pride but for small money, went from her hands six long days a week. On Sunday they all prayed long and hard.

School officials called his first days of school "normal." Detectives drove him to school, reporters interviewed him and when he came home he watched himself walking on films. The telephone sounded anonymous abuse, annoying or sharply funny by days but bringing choppy, fretful evenings and dazed, enraged early mornings. When he came home from school his mail offered special deliveries of scorn, and it was weeks before his box was empty. By then, he rather missed putting his books down on the floor and sitting on the edge of the couch and looking at his name on those heavily stamped envelopes and reading about all that he was doing and undoing (such as the Southern Way of Life, all by himself), and learning about what others said would happen to him, would come to harm him.

After some weeks John walked to school, and no trouble came his way. He would enter the building a little earlier than most and go directly to his classroom where he would open up again one of his books or lessons, sometimes seeing no distinct words but feeling the protection of sitting at his desk and reading. He was intent on learning, and his teachers found him serious and an eager student. He denied fear and he denied interest in the attitudes of his classmates. He knew that in that building he was a student whose color evoked constant, anxious notice, a source of fear, of novelty, of uneasy and often guilty respect; but he indicated in gesture and word and deed that he also knew that his survival depended upon work, upon a special disregard of himself and forgetfulness of the feelings of others. He might falter or fall if he stopped to plan or ponder, if he spent time on worry and anxiety.

Dr. Coles, a child psychiatrist, is spending two years with the Southern Regional Council in the study of children in desegregating Southern schools. He is the author of papers for journals of medicine and psychiatry and has written for The Atlantic Monthly.

For a tape one day he recorded his imagery: "Sometimes when I do stop and think about what's going on this year I realize that I'm in a kind of battle, a real tough situation that starts every morning and settles in the evening and then starts again the next day. There's very little rest, and even at midnight one of those people will call you up and breathe heavily upon you. If I didn't react like a soldier does in a war or like someone in a sudden crisis like a fireman or a policeman faces sometimes, I'd get paralyzed by worrying and thinking. I try to forget and just do my work and live from day to day and job to job, and trust my ability and strength, if I have any . . ." What he also knew, what many sympathetic and concerned white people often did not guite grasp, was that the unpleasant or humiliating moments were not new, that he and millions like him had lived a life of them, that they had slowly and unwittingly developed ways of handling their hurt, and that he could now endure them with a sense of purpose and fulfillment which almost made them sweet pain.

He came to this year and his new school feeling like a stalking scarecrow from whom others would fly in unknowing fear. He found refuge in study and in success in study and in the very passage of time. He found comfort from his family and admiration from his community. He silently suffered nervousness, frequent headaches and a few nightmares of gloom and anger. Much of what was hard for him, most unsettling and troublesome, came ironically with his new position of equality, from friendly smiles, shared experience, occasional words or motions of recognition. His toughest moments were with unwonted kindness. And his greatest knowledge, he felt, was of himself, when he was able at last to see and accept what many of his classmates felt for him. The night before his graduation he told me of his final triumph there, when he took the initiative in sitting by some friends in the cafeteria. They were glad, but he was more surprised at himself than at their responses.

John was graduating 14th in his class in a school which sends most of its graduates to college. He had gone to some school basketball games, attended a class picnic, and, upon receipt of his diploma, would soon be at the senior dance. He seemed in late May, for all the year's burdens and troubles, much more casual and relaxed than last summer. His health was good. He had always been susceptible to colds and had had asthma when younger. But, if the year had been stressful, it had not brought physical disease. For the first time in his life he had started taking vitamin pills this winter, because he was anxious not to miss school, and he felt that they gave him the energy he so needed. These pills, he would summarize, accompanied by unusual regularity of study and sleep and a new absence of tiring social activities, made him feel exceptionally well. Somehow, this year, he missed fewer school days than ever before.

The condition of his mind was sound at the beginning and sound at the ending. His spirits were high in May, even as his body moved more easily and spontaneously. He seemed less grim, less apprehensive. His smile came more readily, lasted longer and seemed more natural. A psychiatrist writing for his medical records would describe him as a well developed, well nourished young man in good contact with his environment, with no signs of moodiness or despair, of good intelligence and ability to communicate his ideas and feelings.

When doctors evaluate health in people they call upon other people for comparisons. Knowledge of contrasts or similarities makes for differential diagnosis. Time offers itself promiscuously to everyone during a year, and gathers uncertain rewards in exchange. One interesting boy comes to mind at another graduation several days later. Jim is tall and lithe, a friendly young man of 17 whose blond hair calls your initial attention. Later you gather his firm gestures of hand and his strong voice which transmits an easy and articulate flow of words and opinions. He thinks that some day he will be a journalist, and the style of his mind and manner support this as more than idle whim or fancy.

Jim told me that he was opposed to the entry of the two Negroes into his high school. His parents were very much against any desegregation, and their son echoed these sentiments firmly and forcefully. He anticipated from these Negroes a rough year, with damage to his education and his enjoyment of school life. He talked of incompatibility and of outrage to customs and traditions. His words reflected strong and deep feelings, and yet these feelings seemed to live apart from his genuine friendliness for the large, dark housekeeper who moved with comfort and considerable competence about his house during my visits there.

During the year Jim learned about the laws of physics and the equalities of algebra his understanding of a foreign language improved; he read some books and memorized some lines from Macbeth. Week by week we talked of many things, of school and world events, of his career and those of the two Negro girls in his high school. He has a good eye and a good ear, and these both assert their own strength in spite of vigorous emotional opposition. What was for him the harsh and corrupt shadow of incipient "mixing" vanished into a daily experience with a specific person. His first encounter was with a nameless, faceless suit of dark clothes, in his eyes unkempt, with pockets of harm, treachery, disease and ignorance. But people wear suits and dresses and people show their own characteristics of thought and language, of feeling or even gait.

Jim's eyes were good and his ears were sound. He slowly began to recognize the differences which separated the two dark girls, differences of intelligence, of spirit, of interests and abilities. He saw one to be distant and a bit dull. He saw the other to be keen to please others and quick to comprehend. He saw distinctive and contrasting dresses or coats. He found himself describing the happy manner of one and the heavy, silent manner of her friend. With his friends he now discussed and argued as much about two persons as about their origin and race. His worries slowly began to shift from what damage the two girls might inflict to what harm would happen if all of their dark friends and neighbors would come into the white schools. With an increasing sense of the two Negroes as persons and girls came a cautious sympathy for what they were enduring in silence and often unkind isolation. Indeed, by spring, he could look at them as stubborn and gritty, grant them a hesitant praise as pioneers with obvious personal courage, and confine his scorn and rancor to the fading fear of what their presence would produce in the future. He never forgot his own role as a white student at school for the first time in his city's history with a Negro, even as he began to talk of working beside them in a laboratory or sitting near them in a class, more in neutral telling than charged and pointed comment.

In truth he was in conflict. The Negro children experienced fear and loneliness, and largely replied with determined endurance. Such persistence could only splinter the responses of the white children. From the start Jim had rejected the few white boys or girls who were immediately friendly or protective toward the Negroes. He watched this small number withdraw their gestures from the Negroes under the pressures of ostracism and unaccustomed rebuke and insult, abandoning the two colored girls to silences interrupted only furtively in cloakrooms or empty corridors. He himself had called the Negroes and these few white classmates the common variety of names, had sent their way the usual jeers, all of which expressed a collective and personal confusion and feeling of betrayal which would yield only slowly to long days of simple if relentless time spent together in rooms and halls and cafeterias.

One long April afternoon he explained to me very carefully how he distinguished his friends at school, engrossed, as many adolescents are, in finding and locating his own identity by looking not only at himself but at those around him.

There were still these few, he reminded me, who came from another land of feeling or experience, or even hope, who seemed strangely unlike him in their willingness or ability to approach colored people and struggle with them for mutual knowledge and concern.

Moving to a majority were those who seemed to care little and notice less, annoyed, most of the time, by what seemed a distraction whose nature was less significant than its occurrence. Many adolescents are chiefly concerned with themselves, their study, their athletics or social life. Race is one more "ideology," one more complicated affair which asks for commitments from them which they reserve for their more immediate world. He described these friends almost wistfully.

Then he went on to those in another direction whom he saw as different from himself, but moved by fears and rage which he could understand, which he may have felt at moments, but which he described as alien to himself. We shared our knowledge of medical syndromes and he told me about the case of a girl friend who became physically sick, who wanted or needed to vomit, when she came "too near" a Negro. She avoided them in buses and shunned them in the classroom as if they were a deadly threat to her very life. "It's a physical thing with her, she's afraid she'll faint . . . I don't get that reaction. I don't want them here, but I'm not afraid of them, either." He continued about another friend who was provoked to words and deeds of dislike and attack which he also felt to be far from his own feelings and increasingly unattractive and upsetting. What puzzled him was not so much the content of their ideas, long familiar to him and also expressed by him on occasion, but the continuing intensity of their attitudes, and their compulsion to translate their impulses into sound and movement. He categorized himself in perhaps romantic separation from all these children, sensing the desires and troubles of others even as all these touched separate chords of his own life and being.

Now, in this last day of school, Jim joined 18 of his classmates in solemn and surprising notes in the Annual of their graduating Negro companion, a rather bright, if by now weary, girl with a smile which offered her nervous fear disguised as pleasure. In his last month of school he had taken to history and current world politics with his characteristic high vigor, and his note to Sandra mentioned, with hesitant admiration, her part in "a changing world."

It was not that I hadn't felt changes in his sentiments over the months; it was the reminder, again, that each person will find his own way and moment, and that it's easier to analyze than predict what any person will do.

All over the South schools hold in their rooms new faces and old emotions. If we are interested in John and Jim as individuals we may have to abandon some notions which stick fast on groups but fall loose from particular people. There seems no end to surprises or contradictions as we talk with both Negro and white children in Atlanta and New Orleans. Of course, some of the paradoxes in school desegregation succumb in part to such explanations as the year of the event, the city affected, the age of the children involved and the jobs, the amount of money and the position in society of the families concerned. Although young children of six or seven can draw definite ideas and indicate definite feelings about racial identity, at their age games have precedence over ideas. Unless their parents have literally demanded of them the disease of a severe childhood phobia, they will learn about white and black skin, but they will also play together freely in even a harassed New Orleans school not out of naivete but in the natural and predominant playfulness of their age. The segregationist sees truly the risks of the very young of both races together in a school; but he is perhaps too gloomy about his own survival. Desegregation will not destroy hate that is taught at home. Young children, whether Negro or white, will ignore what they learn not because they don't realize it, or because they forget it, but because their age and its nature emphasizes other things. As they grow older and near the world of the grown person they recall all too easily old remarks, shrill threats, soothing or plaintive rationalizations, cries of defeat or despair.

Yet even in adolescence there are forces working both for and against the old traditions and customs, and the new ways which press themselves on each generation. Children gather many harvests from the early years and from family teachings, but adolescents thresh and winnow notoriously, often to the anguish of their settled parents. It is a practiced teacher indeed who is not challenged by the stubborn, often trying, curiosity of teenage youth. They may turn querulous or mischievous, but they are often astonishingly uncluttered by the handy excuses, the profound insights and tempered phrases which mark the matured minds and careful hearts of many of their elders. Teachers gasp in surprise and remind themselves that "his parents would die if they heard what he said," missing, in what seems to them confusion or inconsistency, the logic of the 16-year-old child who abandons centuries of history in the delight and pain of a mind in the labor of birth. Before this tide, racial attitudes have no special dam, and, given any support at all by friends or officials of the schools or community, eddies of adolescent scrutiny can gather surprising force and direction.

Often over these past months I have heard people wonder at the experience of the relatively isolated Negro child in a school of white children or speculate about how white children receive them. It is a commentary on our time and habits of thought that we can ask some of the broadest questions with the least embarrassed quickness. People pounce with, "What have you found?" as if human nature is in some special way revealed in a desegregated classroom. Whether the question is asked in concern, anxiety, guilt or fear, the answer will always be that here were children who lived their separate lives, each bringing himself and leaving with whatever he became during those months. It is, of course, convenient to carry generalizations about, particularly when so much of our living and our relationships are splintered, guarded, not very lasting and touching. Under such conditions of existence a theory and its language can grant comfort and even offer itself for fixed passion, dissolving feeling and experience between people in its substitutive certainty. Conclusions and theories about human nature are as available today as they are wanted and begged. They may change hastily and contradict one another endlessly, but they abound. Why Man's fate and nature should have to be redefined and worded differently with such frequency and zeal, often for such scant reasons of discovery or experience, is as interesting as the assertions themselves.

Perhaps what we find, therefore, in these classrooms over the South, is our children, once again, like us before them, living with ambiguities, the hopes and fears and perils of what it is to be alive, to be a human being. From each of them we gather a different story, even as there are threads of similar thoughts and emotions through many or all of them. Perhaps their best moments will come when and if they themselves can sense this truth about themselves freely and even gladly.

Martin,

Man of God,
What message lies within the shadows of your face?
What healing can you bring to this sore-ridden world,— some anodyne, some way to meet a need?

Martin,
model for a people seeking life, life only found in folding it away—
the seed in God's own bosom buried deep.

Martin,
Do we dare
to love completely?
What if we cast this one last crust of bread upon these ancient waters?

Martin,
Let your silence tell us of the song that hearts can sing that are in love with God.
Let your blackness usher forth the light we need to splinter blindness from our naked eyes.
Let your greatness tell us of the kingdom hid within.
Martin, help us,
Martin,
Man of God.

Arts and Entertainment for Southern Negroes

A smattering of sociology and ordinary observation suggests that the human being is more than the sum of his food, clothing, shelter and job, that he is also what he can read, see, enjoy and talk about. What then is open to the Negro? What is withheld from him? Does he have a chance to make of himself a whole man?

The Negro's status in the South is more than his economic buying power, his living quarters, his employment opportunities. As important as these are, his status is also his entree to our world of culture.

While citizenship embraces the right to vote, work, speak and think, it also encompasses the rights to see a play or a movie, hear a debate, talk in a discussion, read freely in a library, visit a museum or an art gallery, or relax in a park.

The Southern Regional Council questioned 13 cities in 10 states of the South: Birmingham, Ala.; Little Rock, Ark.; Atlanta and Savannah, Ga.; Jackson, Miss.; and Tulsa,* Okla.; Charlotte and Durham, N. C.; Columbus, S. C.; Nashville, Tenn.; Dallas* and Houston, Texas, and Richmond, Va.

Surveyed were movies, drive-in movies, municipal auditoriums, local theatre groups, summer theatre, and libraries.

We made no effort to assess the quality of culture available to whites and Negroes in the South. However, a single sample shows a disparity repeated countless times in countless places. On September 2, 1962, a day picked at random, the following movies were available to the white public in Richmond:

THE MUSIC MAN

BIRD MAN OF ALCATRAZ

AIDA and MADAME BUTTERFLY

GUNS OF DARKNESS

THE SPIRAL ROAD

BIG RED

(and 6 others, newly released and of equal quality.) Here are all the movies available that day to the Negro public:

TARZAN GOES TO INDIA

LONELY ARE THE BRAVE and ADA

DON'T KNOCK THE TWIST and
THE OUTSIDER

This one example indicates the cultural dearth imposed by segregation.

Three of the survey cities have desegregated theatres (downtown): Nashville, Atlanta, and Tulsa. Recent desegregation in movie theatres has also occurred in Chapel Hill, N. C.; Knoxville, Tenn.; Henderson, Louisville, Covington and Lexington, Ky.; and El Paso and Austin, Texas, though stringent measures have sometimes been taken to restrict Negro patronage to students.

Dallas omitted from movie and drive-in movie surveys.

On the whole, movie segregation presents a fairly solid barrier to the intellectual growth and enrichment of the average Negro Southerner. In some places, Negroes are able to go downtown and sit in a segregated balcony of one or more of the "first-run" houses. This lofty perch, sometimes dubbed "The Buzzard's Roost," is often empty since the advent of the sit-in movement.

The movie barrier, as this type of segregation can be termed, is not, however, impenetrable. Negotiations with theatre owners, mayors, and members of the adult and student Negro community are underway in cities in the upper and Deep South, and may open more theatres soon. There have been stand-in protests by Negro students and adults in Knoxville, Nashville, Lebanon and Chattanooga, Tenn.; Hampton, Va.; Charlotte, Greensboro, Henderson, Eatonton, Salisbury, Chapel Hill, Fayetteville, Durham, Winston-Salem and High Point, N. C.; San Antonio, Austin, Houston, Amarillo and Dallas, Texas; Alexandria, Arlington, Falls Church, Hampton and Richmond, Va.; Louisville, Ky., and Tallahassee, Fla.

Although some might have assumed that drive-in desegregation would go easier than others—after all, Negroes and whites would be in their own cars in a darkened lot—this does not seem to be the case. The presence of crowds, the types of people who frequent drive-ins, the intermission eating and the free-wheeling behavior in such theatres seem to contribute to the tension over desegregation. Only in Kentucky has drive-in desegregation been at all successful. The Kentucky Commission on Human Rights reports that 70% of 106 theatres surveyed admit Negroes without distinction. On the southwide scene, however, drive-in desegregation has been negligible, and one of the few attempts to desegregate a drive-in theatre occurred in Columbia, S. C., and erupted into violence.

Where Negroes cannot go downtown, or to a drive-in and cannot stand the movie price "uptown," many Negro citizens have gone for a year or more without seeing a motion picture at all.

In two of the survey cities—Tulsa and Nashville—at least some drive-in movies have integrated parking. Three cities have drive-in theatres for Negroes. But in seven of the cities, there are no drive-in theatres "for" Negroes, or drive-in theatres with segregated parking areas.

The survey cities reported many local and summer theatre groups which offer a great variety of serious and musical productions. Some of these are amateur, and some staffed with talented professional actors and directors. This is a rich field of culture in the South.

Negroes are not permitted to see productions in three of the 13 cities surveyed. Eight have summer theatre programs, mainly outdoor. Two of these do not permit Negroes to attend.

pal auditoriums offer opera, orchestras, dance groups, as well as all night hillbilly folk songs and wrestling. Therefore, a study of facilities open to Negroes in auditoriums is important, since in some cities the municipal auditorium houses whatever fine arts programs exist or are brought to the city. It should be noted then that the returns of these questionnaires show a considerable advance in the admittance of Negroes as compared with movie theatres.

In six of 13 cities, municipal auditoriums are open to all, and provide no special arrangements for Negroes (no separate sections in the auditorium, or balcony, no special day of the week, or other such stipulation). These are Tulsa, Durham, Atlanta, Charlotte, Houston, and Dallas.

Those auditoriums which do not have "special arrangements," i.e., those which permit seating freely chosen, have not been scenes of riots or incidents. Furthermore, desegregation of auditorium facilities has, for the most part, been the result of voluntary agreements and not court orders.

"Double" concerts—one for whites, and one for Negroes, often on the same day—have been arranged in the stronghold of the still militant Deep South, Birmingham.

On June 1, 1962, an Actors Equity Ruling—that no Equity member of the 54 companies which produce live shows can act in a play in front of a segregated audience—took effect. The southern circuit for these companies has, in the past, included such stops as Charlotte, Atlanta, Birmingham, and New Orleans, as well as smaller cities en route. As of June 1, the only cities in a position to offer an Equity show—on the circuit route—to a desegregated audience may be Atlanta and Charlotte, according to an Equity spokesman.

culture if they are permitted to read freely without special rules to follow or special rooms reserved.

Libraries were sources of dispute during the sit-ins, and were often opened by the movement which first attacked seating at lunch counters. In Danville, Va., for example, libraries closed in the summer of 1960 to avoid court-ordered integration. They then reopened on an integrated "stand-up" basis, which continued for three months, after which all facilities were integrated. Protests of students and local ministers occurred in Petersburg, Va.; Jackson, Miss.; Baton Rouge, La.; Albany, Ga.; Greenville, S. C.; and Memphis, Tenn., among others. (In Greenville, the library opened, segregated by sex.)

At the same time, desegregation of library facilities during the past two years has been peaceful in what might be regarded as strongholds of segregation—i.e., in Charleston, S. C.; Savannah, Ga.; Montgomery, Ala.; and in two counties in Mississippi.

Of the 13 cities in this present survey, only two still have segregated libraries: Jackson and Birmingham.

Strictly Subjective

deed punished with daytime fears and bedtime nightmares when their "unstable" and "neurotic" sons and daughters are instructing and escorting Negroes to register to vote, sometimes to the tune of gunfire and street beatings in deepest Dixie, or are enjoying the Southern Way of Life in a Black Belt jail.

It is not easy for kinfolks to wonder if this tall, laughing son is cowering in black solitary in Terrell County, Ga., with only bread and water, or if their gentle, bespectacled poetry-writing boy has a broken jaw or a ruptured kidney from a jailer in rural Alabama. It is certainly punishing for a white mother and father in Birmingham or a Negro couple in Nashville to wonder if their 18-year-old daughter is shot at from ambush or weeping under the crush of a wrist-breaker in prison in Mississippi.

But is parents-punishing their real "motivation," as we must nowadays term the reasons for faith, purpose and self-sacrifice? Our fancy analysts of personality and motives seem to know far better than Martin Luther King, Jr., Dion Diamond or Miss Ruby Doris Smith, just why, for instance, Dr. King endured house-bombings, arrests and threats on his family's life in Montgomery and jailings in Georgia, why Mr. Diamond chooses to risk street beatings and take on months of solitary in Baton Rouge and why the indefatigable Miss Smith pops up in the most dangerous demonstrations and the most brutal prisons in the South. To be sure, these critics have never met these Negro leaders, but this circumstance by no means impairs their confident judgments. Nor have they talked to Mr. and Mrs. James Forman who quit a $11,000 joint income so he could advance his career as head of SNCC for $60 a week, which the Formans frequently, but not always, collect. Yet these profound students of character and motive will assure us that the Formans and their employes, some of whom labor for an uncertain $15 or $20 a week in rural Mississippi, choose their temporary profession for huge salaries poured from the coffers of the NAACP, rich, South-hating Yankees or Muscovites. Nor do these omniscient analysts put any credence in the Negroes' simple claims that they push, demand, suffer and imperil their bodies and spirits because they want to win public rights and freedom and to persuade whites to admit colored Americans to the human race.

Those of us who do credit these stated motives as honest ones are, of course, usually smiled away as "sentimentalists" or border-line "neurotics" ourselves.

I cannot, of course, say that every young person in the Movement is a marvel of "security," wholeness and fine emotional balance. Indeed, I met one Freedom Rider who seemed to me as obnoxious a young ass as I've encountered in contemporary life in or out of the Movement. I know one young white girl who seems to me—and here, I reckon I'm entitled to a bit of presumptuous psychologizing myself—quite devoted to hurting her southern parents, and from my brief acquaintance with her parents, I judge this may be a worthy cause.

As to the others, as far as my opportunity to know and judge them goes, they look to me as sound, attractive, gay and "integrated" of personality as any young folks I know who are giving their all on the football field, to dear old Phi Delt, for a degree in business administration or a new career as somebody's secretary or brisk young bond salesman. And they exhibit courage and constancy beyond anything I can detect in the well-adjusted, well-dressed and comfortably cynical youths who behave like everybody else. Of course these boys and girls do seem a bit edgy when they get out of a long stint in a Deep South jail or come fresh from a bus-burning, shooting or street beating. But a long ordeal, like final exams or a weekend of overwork, makes our "normal" young people nervous, too.

It occurs to me—and, again I presume to undertake amateur analysis—that our psychology fanciers are calling the wrong people crazy, and that they're doing so because their own ambitions and moral concerns are somewhat deficient for a best of all possible worlds.

If these critics believe that it is neurotic to struggle against oppression, cruelty and injustice to which their neighbors are subject, then they must cherish money, safety and the good opinion of the arrogant and mean-hearted more than they value freedom, kindness and equality for all Americans, even Southerners. Certainly their accusations against people in the Movement—of need for notoriety, sexual frustration and social failure, greed for money or hatred of parents—are "insights" which suggest vulgar values and petty desires in people who imagine these motives in others.

I am reminded of a more acceptable "insight" of Marion Wright, SRC vice president, in his review of the book, FREEDOM RIDE, in NEW SOUTH. With unprofessional wisdom, Mr. Wright wrote: "A better Freudian than this reviewer must determine why the white riders were the objects of especially brutal segregationist attention. 'Traitors to the white race' is the usual and facile expression. Perhaps the reason is deeper. It may lie in the spiteful and bitter resentment which little men instinctively feel for their betters. They resent manifestations of a nobility they themselves do not possess. In the fury of their assaults may lie secret admiration and envy."

I suggest that in the solemn psychoanalysis of freedom fighters which abounds today there may be, as Mr. Wright has it, secret admiration and envy of braver, stronger personalities.

New South

Integration, Yes, But . . .

"In the North, they're all in favor of integration on a 'yes, but' basis. 'Yes, but not now. Yes, but not here. Yes, but not next door.' I'm not saying there's no difference between the North and South because there's a world of difference.

"But in a way the South is healthier and less frustating. Both sides know where they stand. The white South says 'No!' We say 'Yes!' It's right out there between us where we can all see it and kick at it in public. I get the feeling that when integration comes in the South it will be with eyes open on both sides, and life down here will be healthier than in the North."—A northern Negro student leader quoted in "Negro Youths' New March on Dixie" *by Ben H. Response to a Panel on "The Church in a Valley of Decision"

File Sec Fellowship of The Concerned

Rev. Vincent Harding

To: The Workshop of The Fellowship of The Concerned - October 30-31/62

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

I speak for Father John Morris as well as for myself when I seek to offer this response to yesterday's panel presentation on "The Church in a Valley of Decision."

Our first response was this: God bless the women! God bless the women for their deep concern. God bless the women for their searching and sensitive spirits. God bless the women for so often being so far ahead of the men in the joyful, agonizing search for the way of discipleship in the midst of our nation's racial conflicts.

After having said that, it would be tempting for me to sit down, and for all of you to sit up and pat yourselves on the back and say "how good we are." We must not yield to this temptation, though, for self-congratulation and the easy offering of undeserved praise are among the besetting sins of the church. Rather, let us look and see what we have not done, what we have yet to do before we may even claim the title to "unworthy servants."

Actually, the panel left many things to be desired --- partly, of course, because of the meagre allotment of time that was made to each speaker. On the topic itself, "The Church in a Valley of Decision," little was really said. The nature of the decision was not defined in any way, and this omission was unfortunate, to say the least. For the title was no mere playing with words; the church is indeed faced now with a decision that is focussed on this matter of race. It is a great decision. It must choose to be or not to be the Church. It must choose to be the Church or a social club. It must choose to be the Church or another variety of white citizens' council. It must choose to be the Church or to be a Negro haven of rest. It must choose to be the Church or a Colored fashion show. Ultimately, of course, the choice before the Church now is to respond to God's challenge on the issue of race, or to die of abject fear. Here is the valley.

Perhaps it was because of this lack of a central definition that I found so little of a sense of urgency about the entire presentation. But a sense of urgency is greatly needed, for the context of the title words, as they are found in the book of Joel, is this: "Multitudes, multitides, in the valley of decision! For the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision." This is the point: the day of God's judgement is no less near to us, for a revolution now sweeps around us, the world is passing us by, as schools, restaurants, bars all move ahead; and day by day, a silent, segregated church becomes more and more irrelevant to the new society. Soon, before very long, separate but equal churches will be antiquated anachronism, fit only for the dung heap.

Somehow, the panel needed to say more about our need to face the church fully and honestly with this time of decision. In some way we must help it to cease evading the moment of truth when it must decide to be God's people or to remain a white people and a colored people. We must bring it to the time when it will see no path but the path of decision between being the Body of Christ or being permanently split into white and non-white bodies. At the same time we must call the church to a new understanding of who it belongs to. Again and again, we heard the panel members speak of opening "our church" to the Negroes. Instead, we must cause men to know that our great calling may well be to get out of the way and let Christ open His church to all people. For it is His church, you know. Unless it is his, unless it follows his command to make disciples of all men, wherever they are found, unless it is open to all men, then it has not yet come near the fullness of his calling. Indeed, if this is not its stance, there may be great reason to question its credentials as a church under his Lordship.

Throughout the panel discussion, it was possible to sense an uncomfortableness not dissimilar to that which has been experienced in the nation at large of late. Just as men and women grew uneasy with the lack of local action to implement the 1954 Supreme Court decision and the 1961 Interstate Commerce Commission ruling, so, too, has our uneasiness increased over the plethora of church pronouncements on race in the face of so little local congregational implementation. And as I think of the action we need, I remember a lady from Virginia who approached me at the recent World Mennonite Conference and asked: "Are you starting a new colored work in Atlanta?" My response to her was: "Sister, what we are really trying to do is to get all of the colored people out of the colored churches, and all of the white people out of the white churches, and put them together into one true Christian church." For in a real sense, this is our goal; not to integrate the churches, as some ladies said. No, our goal is to help create a fully Christian church, a church that refuses to let the walls of the world be built up in the church, a church which preaches and practices, "whosoever will, may come."

Now, how shall this necessary action come? How shall the church be brought to its hour of decision? How shall the volumes of pronouncements become flesh and live in deeds among us? The answers to this are not simple, but perhaps a direction may be seen. Just as the 1954 court decision and the 1961 ICC ruling did not bring (and have not brought) voluntary corrective action without some real stimulation in most cases, so we must not expect church pronouncements to bring action without similar stimulation. Is this not in keeping with our Protestant, crisis-centered theology? Rarely, for instance, do we expect a man to become a Christian only by reading volumes of documents about conversion. In our tradition -- for better or worse -- we look for a crisis experience, a sharp encounter with the truth, which may in turn lead to a turning from old ways and a commitment to the new. Is this not what our churches need in order to become truly inclusive fellowships? Do they not need to be faced with an inescapable crisis of decision?

How shall we do this? There are many ways. On the political level it took men and women who were willing to grasp Negro children by the hands and lead them to principals and school boards -- then the issue could not be avoided. It took courageous young men and women to enter the restaurants and sit at the counters, facing the owners with the reality of their presence and the necessity of a choice. What does it take in the church?

Now, we may sit back and wait, perhaps, for some of these same young persons to enter the church without invitation and thus stimulate our decision-making. This is not a wise way, though, for many of them will never bother to come to our churches -- for a host of good and bad reasons. More importantly, though, this is not a wise way because it removes the initiative from our hands, and it is in our hands that it belongs. We are the people of the church. There are many ways in which we can grasp the chance (Miss Mears of United Church Women's "Project: Race" has a host of ideas). However, I should like to offer one suggestion which seems to me to be faithful both to the theme of this conference and to the life of the church. I would suggest that we give up those feelings of self-righteousness which so easily overcome us when we attend regional and statewide conferences like this. I would suggest that we grow dissatisfied with talk about the hands we have shaken and the tables we have shared at this level. The time has come for us to move down (or up!) to the level of our local congregations, to take our sister of another color by the hand, a and to walk by her side into our church sanctuary. Take her, and walk with her, and say to any who ask: "This is my sister in Christ; if this is Christ's church, then she belongs here as fully as I do." Indeed, we might be called upon to add the words: "If she does not belong here, then neither do I." In our hands -- there is the initiative. Joined hand in hand we may face the church with its choice.

Obviously, this is no easy way for us to go; but that is good. It is good because this issue of race, this frightening, shaking issue may finally bring us to our senses: at last it may break down our frantic efforts to be Christ's disciples and socially acceptable at the same time. In moments of the church's crisis, this kind of double life is rarely possible or even desirable. Thus the valley of our decision on race may be a place in which we discover anew that following Christ still brings with it the joyful agony of the cross.

Only briefly was this alluded to yesterday, when one of the panel members reported on the difficulty Albany's leading Baptist minister is having in finding a place to have his hair cut. (Actually, the barbershop problem is only a symptom of the greater trials this man faces.) He simply spoke for the openness of Christ's church, and has been granted the provilege of a glimpse at the cross. In Montgomery and New Orleans, some ladies now present have been faced with rejection by their husbands as a price for their own decision. Such experiences remind us that we too must be ready for this at every moment if we would really take the present opportunity in our own hands. We must be ready to be taken off the best invitation lists. We must be ready to be socially ostracised, intimidated and reviled. This was the way of our Master; why should his followers ask for a more pleasant path?

(At this moment I remember an example given by Archbishop Fulton Sheen illustrating the difference between Christianity and Communism.

He said that the communists have marched up to the Christ of the cross, torn him from the cross, cast him aside, and have marched off bearing the cross -- the cross of suffering, ridicule and rejection for their cause. On the other hand, we of the western world, said the Bishop, have walked up to the cross, taken Christ off, and have walked off with a gentle Jesus, meek and mild, leaving the cross and its costliness behind. Neither of these is the true faith, of course. For just as there is no real Christian cross without Christ, so, too, is there no true Christ without his cross. In our valley of decision on race, each of us must make our own choice.)

Here, then, is our response. And as I thought of the decision we now face -- a calling to open Christ's church to all men -- it seemed to me that T. S. Eliot was speaking to us all through his Murder in the Cathedral (and perhaps God was speaking through the poet). There, in his dramatic recounting of the life of Thomas Becket, 12th century Archbishop of Canterbury,Eliot often dwelt on the conflict between Thomas and the King, between the commands of God and the decrees of the state, between the way of our Master and the way of the world. Then, near the closing of Thomas' life in the play, Eliot portrays the priests of the Cathedral as they urge Thomas to lock himself in the sanctuary and to bar it against the King's knights who seek to kill him. They cry out:

Priests: Bar the door. Bar the door.
The door is barred.
We are safe. We are safe.
The enemy may rage outside, he will tire
In vain. They cannot break in.
They dare not break in. They have not the force.
We are safe. We are safe.

Thomas: Unbar the doors! Throw open the doors!
I will not have the house of prayer, the church of Christ,
The sanctuary, turned into a fortress.
The church shall protect her own, in her own way, not
As oak and stone; stone and oak decay,
Give no stay, but the Church shall endure.
The church shall be open, even to our enemies.
Open the door!

Priests: My Lord! these are not men, these come not as men come, but,
Like maddened beasts. They come not like men, who Respect the sanctuary, who kneel to the Body of Christ,
But like beasts. You would bar the door
Against the lion, the leopard, the wolf or the boar,
Why not more
Against beasts with the souls of damned men, against men
Who would damn themselves to beasts.
My Lord! My Lord!

Thomas: Unbar the door!
You think me reckless, desperate and mad.
You argue by results, as this world does,
To settle if an act be good or bad.
Unbar the door! Unbar the door!
We are not here to triumph by fighting, by stratagem,
or by resistance,
Not to fight with beasts as men.
We have fought the beast and have conquered.
We have only to conquer now, by suffering.
This is the easier victory.
Now is the triumph of the Cross, now
Open the door! I command it. OPEN THE DOOR!

The door is opened, and within a few minutes time, the King's knights murder Thomas (for God has never promised safety to those who do his will, only his eternal presence with them). However, in the final moments of the play, the people of Canterbury are granted that great vision which helps them to see that Thomas' death, resulting as it did from his refusal to close Christ's church to any man, was indeed a blessing upon them all. It had caused them to see God and themselves. Therefore they could sing out:

Chorus: . . . . . .

. . . O God, we thank Thee
Who hast given such a blessing to Canterbury.

Forgive us, O Lord, we acknowledge ourselves as type of the comman man,
Of the men and women who shut the door and sit by the fire;
Who fear the blessing of God, the loneliness of the night of God, the surrender required, the deprivation inflicted;
Who fear the injustice of men less than the justice of God;
Who fear the hand at the window, the fire in the thatch,
the fist in the tavern, the push into the canal,
Less than we fear the love of God.
We acknowledge our trespass, our weakness, our fault;
we acknowledge
That the sin of the world is upon our heads; that the blood of the martyrs and the agony of the saints
Is upon our heads.
Lord, have mercy upon us.
Christ, have mercy upon us.
Lord, have mercy upon us.
Blessed Thomas, pray for us.

Man holds in his mortal hands the power to abolish all forms of human poverty and all forms of human life . . . .
... from Inaugural Address of President Kennedy

The vast power in the atom, can be used to create wealth in the waste lands and figuratively stretch the surface to the earth, now uninhabitable into fit dwelling places for man.

It could be employed to bring to light treasures of mineral wealth now buried in accessible places; to irrigate deserts and transform them into blooming gardens; to air-condition vast stretches of the tropics and of the Artic sub-Artic continents, thus literally providing more living space for the increasing world population.

In short, man is on the eve of the era, in which he will be able to rebuild his world "nearer to the heart's desire" --- only if he maintains peace with his fellowman.

Love Thy Neighbor As Thy Self -- Lev. 19:18

Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethern to dwell together in unity!

It is like the precious ointment upon the head that ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard; that went down to the skirts of his garments.

As the dew of Hermon, and as the dew upon the mountains of Zion, for there the Lord commanded the blessing, even life forevermore. Psalm. 133:

They helped everyone, his neighbor, and everyone said to his brother, be of good courage.

So the carpenter encouraged the goldsmith, and that smoothed with the hammer, him that smote the anvil, saying, "It is ready for the sodering," and he fastened it with nails that it should not be moved. . . . Isaiah 41:6-7.

Thou shall not respect the person of the poor, nor honor the person of the mighty, but in righteousness thou shall judge thy neighbor.

Thou shall not go up and down as a tale bearer among thy people, neither shall thou stand against the blood of thy neighbor. I am the Lord -- Thou shal not hate thy brother in thy heart.
Lev. 19: 15-17.

Thou shall not bear false witness against thy neighbor.
Exodus - 20:16

Hatred stirreth up strife, but love covers all sins. Prov. 10:12.

Let love be without dissimulation. Abhor that which is evil, cleave to that which is good.
Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honor preferring one another. .. Romans 12:9-10
Love is patient and kind; love is not jealous or boastful, it is not arrogant or rude.
Love does not insist in its own way, it is not irritable or resentful, it does not rejoice at wrong, but rejoices in the right. Love bears all things, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things. So faith, hope, love, abide these three, but the greatest of these is love.

PRAYER IN UNISON:

Grandfather, Great Spirit, You have been always, and before You nothing has been. There is no one to pray to but You. The star nations all over the heavens are Yours, and Yours are the grasses of the earth. You are older than all need, older than all pain and prayer.

Grandfather, Great Spirit, all over the world the faces of living ones are alike. With tenderness they have come up out of the ground. Look upon our children, with children in their arms, that they may face the winds, and walk the good road to the day of quiet.

Grandfather, Great Spirit, fill us with light. Give us the strength to understand and the eyes to see. Teach us to walk the soft earth as relatives to all that live.

Help us, for without You we are nothing. Amen. . . . . from, Sioux Indian Prayer, Western United States

When Will My South Ask These Questions - -

-- Henry Burton Trimble

I was born in the South. I have lived in the South all my life with the exception of three or four years. I don't want to be a professional Southerner. I want to be an American too. I had much rather think of the things that I have in common with the whole of America than about the points of variation.

We can as a group, I think, feel that we are a family. We are talking about problems of mutual interest to us; some pleasant, some unpleasant. There is a nice thing about talking in the family spirit. You can say what you wouldn't say to a stranger.

As a family, I want to ask some questions. These are real questions to me. They are not frivolous at all. And I have nothing dogmatic to say in answer.

First I would ask: -- WHY HAS THE SOUTH CEASED THE PRODUCTION OF GREAT POLITICAL LEADERS? At least, their greatness has not been rewarded, for example by being elected to the Presidency. Look what we used to do: -- Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Jackson, Polk, Lee. We haven't produced a man of that magnitude in a century. At least, I do not know of one. Over in Nashville, Tennessee, I served as pastor of the McKendee Methodist Church. James K. Polk was once a member of that church. Just down the street is the First Presbyterian Church. Andrew Jackson was once a member of that church.

Now, why don't we have folks like that now? This is a family question. Could it be that our leaders, to be elected to high office, must commit themselves to principles and ideas that are restricted to our area? And which are necessary to accept? Could that be the trouble?

I can't believe that a section which raised so much of the early leadership of a great nation has lost the knack of producing great men.

Woodrow Wilson began his active life as a lawyer. He hung out his shingle in Atlanta, and practiced here for two years. I suppose he intended to stay here the rest of his life, and be a Georgia lawyer. Would Woodrow Wilson ever have become President of the U. S. A. if he had remained in Georgia? Now, that is just in the family. I don't know. But it is a question that I think ought to arrest our attention.

There is another question that I would like to ask, I direct this -- Well, we are all church people. Here in The Southeast live, I suppose, the greatest solid block of Protestants on earth. It is an area where the church wields great influence. A large percentage of our population are church people. Sometimes we are called The Bible Belt. I don't think we deserve it. WHY IS IT THAT HERE IN THIS CENTER OF CHRISTIANITY, A RELIGION THAT TEACHES HUMANENESS AND KINDNESS AND BROTHERLY LOVE HAS SUCH A HARD TIME? Now, just in the family, I ask the question.

Why doesn't a Nobel Prize winner teach, or research, in a Southern university?

I believe that these are fair questions, and I think that they are of interest to the Southern people. We ought to give them serious consideration because they may be symptoms of something.

Now we talk about our way-of-life and our-South. But when I hear a person say anything about The South, I almost always feel like asking "Which South?" Because, clearly, there are two Souths. They both date back to Appomattox and, I suppose, even beyond that. When it was evident that the South was facing immediate defeat, there were two ideas. One was held by Robert E.. Lee, and his associates. The other held by another group, who didn't want to surrender. They wanted to break up into guerilla bands, take to the mountains, and prolong the desolation that had befallen the country.

We have had both types of successors to these two ideas. We have had the guerillas. We have had them in politics. We have had the guerilla who has been terribly afraid of Yankees and colored people.

But we have had the other school, too -- the school of thought inherited from Jefferson, Jackson and Lee. Now our hope resides in the quality of the education we are able to give our young people. We should all be greatly encouraged by the progress that has been made in all the departments of education in our South land during the last generation. May God grant that it shall never cease. Liberal institutions require the best possible education. To abandon efficient education is to abandon the highest and best type of civilization.

Is our Southern atmosphere a liberal atmosphere? Is it conducive to the development of the highest possibilities of our region?

What do we mean by a liberal atmosphere?

1. It is a situation where Freedom of Speech, Freedom of Press, and Freedom of Assembly are encouraged and actually used.

2. It is a place where problems are viewed objectively, and the mind, as well as the emotion, is employed in solving them.

3. It is a place where differences of opinion are tolerated.

4. It is a place where, in respect to important issues, a balance is maintained. No issue is allowed to be brought up to the point where it's significance is all out of proportion to its importance.

5. It is a place where ideals are popular, and progress is open to all people on the basis of merit.

6. It is a place where you don't use devices and pressures to press all the people into a single mold.

Now, I do not score our Southland on this test. I am not even sure that it is a good test. But I RAISE THE QUESTION AMONG US SOUTHERN PEOPLE AS TO WHETHER AND TO WHAT EXTENT WE NOW HAVE A LIBERAL SOCIETY CONDUCIVE TO THE DEVELOPMENT OF DEMOCRATIC INSTITUTIONS TO THE FULLEST EXTENT POSSIBLE?

And now a few words about the church. I am still talking about our Southland, and still asking questions. I quote a familiar passage of scripture. Jesus was asked, "Which is the greatest commandment?" You know that his answer was, "Love God with your whole heart, and your neighbor as yourself."

There is a strange thing about the common interpretation of that passage to me. I go back to the time when we had the "testimony meeting." I have heard a great many people give their religious testimonies. It is puzzling that practically all of the testimonies were related to the first part of that Commandment -- a man's relation to his God. The other part of it is just as important. But it never seems to be drawn into the Christian testimony.

And yet, it can be. Albert Schweitzer, I think, is the most influential Christian alive. One of the reasons that took him to Africa was to make some atonement for the wrongs done the black man by the white man. He tells a story concerning religious experience in the area that I am asking you to think about, -- OUR HUMAN RELATIONS.

He had not been there too long in his little hospital, when a man came in from the forest suffering great abdominal distress. There was no nurse around. Dr. Schweitzer managed to get the man to sleep. Then he performed the operation and sat waiting by the bed side. After a long wait the man began to move. He opened his eyes in bewilderment. Then he suddenly felt his side, and said, "Oh. What has happened. The pain is all gone. I am not hurting anymore."

Then Dr. Schweitzer tells how he reached out and took the black man by the hand and said, "The Lord, Jesus Christ, sent me to Africa to do this." And he added, "All consciousness of human division vanished from my heart. And I felt myself one with all mankind."

THE PROMISE OF TOMORROW

From Collier's Weekly - December 23, 1955

On Monday, August 8, 1955, on the opening day of the International Conference on the Peaceful Uses of Atomic Energy, at Geneva, Switzerland, I was one of the group, composed of leading scientist from many nations, including Russia, that stood in hushed silence around a large circular tank filled with some 13,000 gallons of crystal-clear water.

The scene was the special building, directly behind the Palace of Nations, that housed the United States nuclear reactor, the first atomic power plant of any kind ever to be exhibited publicly anyway on earth. All of us present, including the Russians were aware that we were about to become witness to one of the greatest events in history, at which Peaceful Atom, a 20th century version of Atlas carrying a new world on his shoulders was to make public appearance.

Sophisticated men of science, many of them rationalists and even outright agnostics, stood wide-eyed with an air of expectancy and wonder very like that of children around a gift-laden Christmas tree. For consciously or sub-consciously, every one present realized that he was about to witness the arrival of the new Promethus with a richer gift by far than the gift of Promethus' fire that started men on his slow march from the cave on the road to the stars.

There was nothing unusual about the over-sized fish bowl to which the makers referred to as the "swimming pool reactor." The tank was about ten feet in diameter and 22 feet deep, but the lowe 18 feet were buried in the ground. At the bottom of the tank was a bizarre-looking contraption, a grid plate supported from below, about five and one-half feet high. This was the core of the reactor, loaded with some 40 pounds of uranium, enriched to contain about eight pounds of active fissionable variety of the element. Rather a small amount of fuel one might say. Not so small when one realizes that as an explosive the eight pounds would yield the equivalence of 72 thousand tons - yes, tons of TNT, while as a source of power that rather puny amount in terms of concentual fuel would yield a total of well over 100,000 kilowatt hours of energy.

As we stood there the lights went out and we were left in total darkness for a time that seemed very long. Out of the depth of the tank, there emerged a faint blue glow. Slowly, imperceptively the glow became more and more luminious until the reactor lattace was enveloped in whitish blue light. Around it was a halo of unearthly greenish blue that ended abruptly in a haze of many shaded purple. The haze grew more intense, a purple fire that seemed to penetrate through the ring of steel that confined it, to spread ever outward until it permeated the entire room, enveloping all of us in a mantle of eerie cold purple light, coming, one felt from a source not of this world, from the very bowls of the cosmos as it were.

Outward, outward, the cloud of purple haze spread into ever-widening cirlces, until they seemed to penetrate the very walls of the room into outer space. It gave one the sensation of the eminence of a new dawn, of the rising of a new sun on the horizon of another worldly purple sky. One became aware being present at the birth of a world...

...As the lights were turned on again, we gradually returned to the mundane sphere of every day life, I remembered the other occasions at which I saw the same force from the inner core of the cosmos, the citadel of the atoms of which the material world is made.

I saw once again the purple ball of fire liberated in an uncontrolled burst of purple flamd and concentrating the light of more than a hundred noon time suns, that rose over the desert near Alamogordo, New Mexico, on the morning of July 16, 1945, when the first atomic bomb exploded in the greatest wartime secrecy. I remembered the giant mushroom cloud that emerged out of the super-sun, carrying a deadly radiations that annihilate all life in its path.....

I remember a bit of dialogue between me and one of the scientist who designed the atomic bomb on our way back to Los Alamos from the explosion at Alamogordo, "This was the nearest thing to doomday one can possibly imagine." I heard the voice of the scientist next to me say, though it seemed to come from a distance, "I am sure, I am sure," I heard the voice say, "that at the end of the world milli-second of the earth's existence, that last man will see something very similar to what we have seen."

And out of the silence that ensured, there came another voice=in-my-own-which also sounded from a distance - "Possibly so," said the voice, "but it is also possible that if the first man could have been present at that moment of creation when God said, "Let there be light," he might have seen something very similar to what we have just seen."

Here were two individuals who had just witnessed one of the greatest, if not the greatest events in modern history, one of the most significant in all history. Yet one saw a twilight, while the other saw the vision of a new dawn; one saw the potential end of a man on this planet, whereas the other saw the vision of a new dawn; one saw the potential end of man on this planet, whereas the other saw the possibly beginning of a new life in a richer, more peaceful and abundant world.

Which of the two visions was nearer to the truth? During the momentous decade which followed there were times when the vision of dooms day seemed the most likely to come true. . . But that day in Geneva in August 1955, and during the two weeks of the historic conference that followed, it became more clear that man had successfully passed the greatest crisis in his history that had at least emerged from a world of night-mares, topped by giantic mushroom clouds into a world holding out the promise of the fulfillment of his most cherished dreasm -- peace, prosperity, and an environment fashioned by himself in which he will have the opportunity for the first time to realize his unlimited spiritual potential, achieved not by only a relative few...

It thus became clear at Geneva Atomic Conference that man was on the eve of the greatest industrial, social and economic revolution in the million years of his evolution on earth. From a civilization controlled by scarcity, he is about to emerge into the green pastures of a civilization build on plenty. From a world torn by strife and war he is about to enter a new world based on peace, a world built to order with no limitations to the realization of his vast potentialities physically intellectually, spiritually.

Ironically enough this great potential future that man may realize only if he maintains the peace with his fellows, came about as the product of the greatest and most destructive war in history, "Out of the eater came forth food, and out of the strong came forth sweetness" -- a modern solution of Sampson's riddle.

The vast power in the atom, can be used to create wealth in the vast lands and figuratively stretch the surface of the earth, now uninhabitable into fit dwelling places for man. It could be employed to bring to light treasures of mineral wealth now buried in accessible places; to irrigate deserts and transform them into blooming gardens; to air-condition vast stretches of the tropics and of the Artic sub-Artic continents, thus literally providing more living space for the increasing world population. In short, man is on the eve of the era in which he will be able to rebuild his world "nearer to the heart's desire" -- only if he maintains peace with his fellowman.

FELLOWSHIP OF THE CONCERNED

What is the Fellowship of The Concerned? It is what its name implies -- a fellowship of the Church Women leaders of both races, and the three faiths, concerned about their South. There are no officers and no membership dues. It is sponsored by The Southern Regional Council. The initiative for action, however, is entirely in the hands of the women.

HISTORY

Whenever there has been a crisis in human relations in the South, Church women have come together to face the issues and work out a program of action. The first call was to a Cause and Cure of War Conference, just before World War II. This answered a national call, under the direction of an appointed Southern leader (Mrs. M. E. Tilly).

Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching.

When lynching was prevalent in the South, the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching was formed, under the direction of Mrs. Jessie Daniel Ames of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation. The story of their work is well known and saved the South from continued mob violence. (Mrs. Tilly was secretary of this group -- since then she has directed all other of these Southwide meetings.)

Rural Health.

Rural health was the next disturbing situation faced. This began as a Methodist project, but, realizing it was the concern of all the South, the leaders of the groups of the three faiths came together. The U. S. Surgeon-General gave his blessing to the endeavor by his presence and address at the meeting. This health conference was followed by district meetings in the States. In our files we have a letter from the Director of the State Health Department of Georgia, stating that it was entirely through these meetings that the Legislature passed the appropriation of one million dollars for rural hospitals a few months later. This same story could be said of each of the States.

Demobilization Conference.

Realizing that the women had spent a great deal of time in First Aid and Red Cross work, and now that the war was over this time should be mobilized for peacetime action, women were called together in a Demobilization Conference.

Workshop of Civil Rights.

With a member of the staff of the U. S. Department of Justice with us, this workshop was held to study civil rights and to become aware of current infringements of these rights in our South.

Conference on Injustice in the Courts.

At this conference was worked out a program "Know Your Courts as You Know Your Schools." Here the women named themselves The Fellowship of The Concerned, and began sitting in courts, giving courage to judges and juries alike. They presented the sheriffs of two-thirds of our counties with the pamphlet, "Race and Law Enforcement."

Supreme Court Decision on School Integration.

The first conference was held in 1953 just before the decision came and here the women planned what they would do in preparation for the decision. In February of 1955, the women again came together from the States of Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, and South Carolina. These have been followed up with State Meetings. On October 30-31, 1956, one-hundred-nine women came from 10 southern states -- this was a gathering of the women of three faiths, of each denomination, and of both races. This meeting is being re-enacted in the states. Altogether about 2,000 women, each year, have been in the South-wide and State meetings on this question. These Workshops have been great by every measure. One is impressed by the deep spiritual nature of them. This is well, for spiritual power is needed. These women are finding the spiritual strength and power to be --

Firm in conviction, never afraid to speak,
Persuasive in conversation,
Patient and understanding with those who do not agree..
"Fervent in spirit, serving the Lord."

1957 Workshop was held October 29-30.

The general subject was, "The Challenge of Controversy."

1958 Workshop was held October 16-17.

The subject was "Recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world."

1959 Workshop was held November 5-6.

The general subject was, "Roots Of Freedom."

1960 Workshop was held November 15-16.

The general subject was, "Justice Weighed in The Balance."

1961 Workshop was held November 6-7.

The general subject was, "One God, One World, One People."

1962 Workshop - - - October 30-31.

The general theme - - "In Our Hands." We used as a background a part of the 8th Psalm - - also Kagawa's poem, ". . . a secret plan, Is Hid in My hand."

THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL - ITS ORIGIN AND AIMS

The Southern Regional Council and its predecessor, the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, have been active since 1919. The Commission was founded in that year by a group of the South's leading church men and women. Through the ensuing years it built up a body of acquaintance and confidence that has been an increasing asset. It worked to encourage an interchange of ideas and mutual trust between the South's two peoples. The notion of cooperative action by persons of good will, both white and Negro, took firmer root and has continued to grow.

In time the Commission sought ways of expanding its activities to permit a broader approach to the problems of the South. This led to the formation of the Southern Regional Council, which was chartered early in 1944. The incorporators were Dr. Rufus Clement, president of Atlanta University; Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk University; Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution; Bishop Arthur J. Moore, of the Methodist Church; and Dr. Howard W. Odum, professor of sociology at the University of North Carolina. The Commission on Interracial Cooperation formally merged its program and assets with those of the Council.

The Southern Regional Council consists of a board of some 80 Southerners, drawn from the major religious faiths, both races, and the 13 states of the region. These people are the Southern Regional Council. The Council is non-profit, non-political, and non-denominational.

In 1951, the Council formally committed itself to the aim of an unsegregated society. It did so because it believed segregation to conflict with moral values, with democratic principles, and with the best interests of the country and this region. The Council has, therefore, an announced point of view. It has, furthermore, a single-minded devotion to the method of fair, open, and well-informed discussion. It believes that Southern problems cannot be satisfactorily solved unless Southerners are willing to discuss them frankly, critically, and realistically. The Council's program is planned and its publications are prepared to serve that end.

Financial support for the Council has come from many different individuals and organizations. The latter include national foundations, many church denominations, and various trade unions and business firms.

The Council's present functions may be summarized as follows: 1) it provides consultative services to private and official agencies; 2) it carries on research and publishes frequent reports of findings; 3) it publishes a monthly magazine, New South, and works with the press, radio, and television; 4) it is a clearinghouse and coordinator for other agencies concerned with Southern problems.

The Southern Regional Council seeks to be a practical organization, aiming at working solutions rather than spectacular pronouncements. It is an educational organization. It believes that each community in the South must find its own answers to social issues within the framework of law and conscience. It offers no blueprint, no panacea for the South's human problems. It does offer a method--that of representative citizens, white and Negro, coming together in equal dignity to find the best ways to move ahead.

PRAYER

Grant us brotherhood, not only for this day, but for all our years.
A brotherhood not of words but of acts and deeds.
We are all of us children of earth --
Grant us that simple knowledge.
If our brothers are oppressed, then we are oppressed.
If they hunger -- we hunger.
If their freedom is taken away,
our freedom is not secure.
Grant us common faith that man shall know bread and peace,--
That he shall know justice and righteousness,
Freedom and security, and equal opportunity,
And an equal chance to do his best,
Not only in our lands, but throughout the world.
And in that faith, let us march toward the clean world our hands can make . . . . Amen.

"Why Are You Fearful"

Behold, the Lord passed by,
A great strong wind rent the mountains,
and broke in pieces the rocks before the Lord,
but the Lord was not in the wind; and after the wind an earthquake but the Lord was not in the earthquake, and after the earthquake, a fire, but the Lord was not in the fire; after the fire a still small voice.—I Kings 19:11-12
And in that still voice onward came the Lord.

Fear not them which kill the body
but cannot kill the soul;
but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body.
—Matthew 10:28

I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come,
Nor heights, nor depths, nor any other creature,
shall be able to separate us from the love of God.—Romans 8:38-39

"Fear Not"

O man, greatly beloved, fear not, peace be unto thee, be strong, yet be strong: and when he had spoken unto me I was strengthened and said, Let my Lord speak; for thou hast strengthened me.—Daniel 10:19

Fear ye not the reproach of men, neither be afraid of their reviling.—Isaiah 51:7

Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake.

Rejoice, and be exceedingly glad for great is your reward in heaven, for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you.

—Matthew 5:11-12

Who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good?

But and if ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye, and be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled.

But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear.

Having a good conscience, that, whereas they speak evil of you, as of evil doers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ.

For it is better, if the will of God be so, that you suffer for well doing, than for evil doing.

—I Peter 3:13-17

Fear thou not, for I am with thee;
be not dismayed, for I am thy God.
I will strengthen thee, yea, I will help thee.
I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteuosness.

For I, the Lord, thy God will hold thy right hand, saying to thee, Fear not, I will help thee.
—Isaiah 41:10,13

Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing? and one of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father.

But the very hairs of your head are all numbered.

Fear ye not therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows.—Matthew 10:29-31

Be strong, and of good courage, dread not, nor be dismayed.
—I Chronicles 22:13

Wait on the Lord, be of good courage and he shall strengthen thine heart,
Wait I say on the Lord.—Psalm 27:14

Fear ye not, stand still and see the salvation of the Lord.—Exodus 14:13

Have I not commanded thee?

Be strong and of good courage; be not afrighted, neither be dismayed; for Jehovah thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest.
—Joshua 1:9

I Sought the Lord and He Delivered Me From My Fears

—Psalms 34:4

There is no fear in love, but perfect love
castest out fear.—I John 4:18

What time I am afraid, I will trust in thee.
In God I will praise his word,
in God I have put my trust.
I will not fear what flesh can do to me.
—Psalm 56:3-4

The Lord is my light and my salvation;
Whom shall I fear?
The Lord is the strength of my life.
Of whom shall I be afraid?
Though an host should encamp against me,
my heart shall not fear.—Psalm 27:1,3

God is our refuge and strength,
A very present help in trouble,
Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed,
And though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea.—Psalm 46:1-2

We glory in tribulation, knowing that tribulation worketh patience,
And patience experience, and experience hope,
And hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit which is given us.—Romans 5:3-5

He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High
Shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty.
I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress;
My God, in him will I trust.
Surely he shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler,
And from the noisome pestilence.
He shall cover thee with his feathers,
And under his wings shalt thou trust.
His truth shall be thy shield and buckler.
Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night,
Nor for the arrow that flieth by day,
Nor for the pestilence that walketh in darkness,
Nor for the destruction that wasteth at noonday,
Because thou hast made the Lord, which is my refuge,
Even the Most High, thy habitation,
There shall no evil befall thee,
Neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling;
For he will give his angels charge over thee,
To keep thee in all thy ways.
They shall bear thee up in their hands,
Lest thou dash thy foot against a stone.

—Psalm 91:1-6, 9-12

I will lift up my eyes unto the hills,
from whence cometh my help.

My help cometh from the Lord,
which made heaven and earth.

He will not suffer thy foot to be moved;
he that keepeth thee will not slumber.
Behold, he that keepeth Israel
shall neither slumber nor sleep.

The Lord is thy keeper;
the Lord is thy shade
upon thy right hand.
The sun shall not smite thee by day,
nor the moon by night.

The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil;
he shall preserve thy soul.
The Lord shall preserve
thy going out and thy coming in from this time forth, and even for evermore.

—Psalm 121

The Eternal God Is Our Refuge and Underneath Are the Everlasting Arms

—Deuteronomy 33:27

The Lord thy God in the midst of thee is mighty,
he will rejoice over thee with joy,
he will rest in his love,
he will joy over thee with singing.

—Zephaniah 3:17

Fear not, for I have redeemed thee;
I have called thee by thy name;
thou art mine.
When thou passeth through the waters
I will be with thee
And through the rivers, they shall not overthrow thee.
When thou walkest through the fire thou shalt
not be burned,
Neither shall the flame kindle upon thee.

—Isaiah 43:1-2

Thou will keep him in perfect peace
whose mind is stayed on thee,
because he trusteth in thee.
Trust ye in the Lord forever,
for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength.

—Isaiah 26:3-4

They shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree,
And none shall make them afraid,
For the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it.

—Micah 4:4

We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed;
we are perplexed, but not in despair;
Persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down but not destroyed;
Always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life of Jesus might be made manifest in our body.

—II Corinthians 4:8-10

Yea, though I walk through the valley
of the shadow of death,
I will fear no evil, for thou art with me;
Thy rod and thy staff, they comfort me.
—Psalm 23:4

Watch Ye, Stand Fast in the Lord: Quit Ye Like Men, Be Strong.

—I Corinthians 16:13

"If God be with you, who can be against you."

Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might.—Ephesians 6:10

Be strong and of good courage, fear not nor be afraid, for the Lord thy God he it is that doth go before thee; he will not fail thee nor forsake thee.—Deuteronomy 31:6

FORGET NOT THY MAKER

I, even I, am he that comforteth you.
Who art thou, that thou shouldest be afraid
of man that shall die,
of the son of man which shall be made as grass,
And forgetest the Lord thy maker,
that hath stretched forth the heavens
and laid the foundations of the earth, and hast feared continually every day
because of the fury of the oppressor,
as if he were ready to destroy?
And where is the fury of the oppressor?
—Isaiah 51:12-13

OVERCOME EVIL WITH GOOD

Let love be without dissimulation. Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good.

Bless them which persecute you; bless and curse not.

If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink.

Be not overcome with evil but overcome evil with good.—Romans 12:9,14,20,21

LOVE NEVER FAILS

Love suffereth long and is kind.
Love envieth not.
Love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up,
Doth not behave itself unseemly,
Seeketh not its own, is not easily provoked,
Thinketh no evil,
Beareth all things, believeth all things,
Hopeth all things, endureth all things.
Love never faileth.—I Corinthians 13:4,5,7

CONTROL THY SELF

Yea, and for this very cause, adding on your part all diligence, in your faith supply virtue, and in your virtue knowledge.

And in your knowledge self control, and in your self control patience, and in your patience godliness.

And in your godliness brotherly kindness, and in your brotherly kindness love.

—II Peter 1:5-8

IN NOTHING BE ANXIOUS

In nothing be anxious but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your request be known unto God.

And the peace of God which passeth all understanding shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.

Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true,
whatsoever things are honest,
whatsoever things are just,
whatsoever things are pure,
whatsoever things are lovely,
whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.

Those things, which ye have both learned and received, and heard, and seen in me, do and the God of peace shall be with you.

—Philippians 4:6-9

THE REWARD

And my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus.

—Philippians 4:19

Fear not, little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom.—Luke 2:12

Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.—Matthew 28:20

. . . Most of the reasons offered for segregation are, upon careful examination, flimsy; we see that the dangers against which it is supposed to protect us are for the most part unreal; we see that some of our attitudes in the matter are simply habits, and others a cloak for selfishness, and still others the result of the confusion of life, which is sacred, with segregation, which is only one of its perishing forms; we see, finally, that these old habits stand in the way of certain positive forces within us struggling for expression, chief among them the spirit of love which Jesus expressed and commanded—and yet—and yet—we are afraid it can't be done. We think it ought to be; we really don't want to defend it ourselves; but we're afraid it can't be—at least not now.

Perhaps this vague fear exists in the minds of many Christians. If so, we should name it for what it is. For its proper name may shock us into a deeper awareness of ourselves, and in the fantastic world we have created in the South, that would be all to the good.

It is lack of faith. Faithlessness. No more and no less. If we had more faith in God, we should have less fear. If we were filled with faith, we should have none. (No man attains, except at moments, this peak. Yet it is the peak toward which we climb.)

As we believe in love—which is to say, as we have love—we do not have fear. As we are afraid, then, we lack love, and lack faith in a God of love. Our fearfulness is the mark of our faithlessness, and simply means that the essential fire of Christianity burns but flickeringly upon the altar of our hearts.

How may that flame be steadied? By placing it alongside the original, the brightest of all its expressions, the life of Jesus. Contemplating that shining example, we shall find his spirit growing within us and the fears that now cling to our hearts like miasma along Southern ditches in summer dispersing before the beams of the rising sun.

As we have faith, we shall develop the institutions of a more Christian society. It is not easy to give institutional shape to love; it means transforming it into justice. Regardless of this difficulty, the source of our strength—and of our weakness—is clear: out of the heart proceed the issues of life. As our hearts are sensitive both to God's presence and to human need, as we yield ourselves to his encompassing love, we shall act well, and shall build, in these changing times, a more Christian society.

PRAYER IN UNISON:

Almighty God our Heavenly Father, who has set the solitary in families, we commend to Thy continual care the homes in which Thy people dwell. Put far from them every strain of prejudice, every root of bitterness. Fill them with faith virtue, patience, knowledge, Godliness. Turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to the fathers.

We praise Thee for renewing Age with the company of Youth, Bless their vision of a New Time, grant that they may be strong; that Thy Word may abide in them that they may run a straight race, and not be weary. ...Amen.

"If all the girls in the world took hands,
beginning here with me,
It would make a line exceeding fine that would

If all the boys in the world took hands, stretching from shore to shore,
It would make a circle of friendliness where wars could be no more."

My family resides in a segregated society, where even to be a "moderate" is to be suspect, and where "One Worlders" are referred to with contempt. From such a situation many people, both white and colored, seek to escape by moving. Every section of our land is faceing its greatest struggle, and its greatest opportunity, at the same time. I want to remain in my community to share the struggle and the opportunity.

... Wherever I am, I try to teach my children, by precept and example, to respect persons as persons, and as children of God.

... We have a globe in our home, and some large maps: one of the United States and one of the world. We have a picture of the flags of the United Nations. Three of our children can associate flags and nations.

... One daughter is a member of the World-Wide Doll Club and receives periodically a doll from some different country, along with an explanation of the customs of that country.

... Our family watches together some TV programs, one of which is the World Series in baseball. Sometimes it is amazing how many different nationalities and ethnic groups are represented by the players. Another program which we see together frequently is the World News Roundup. By this means we travel here, there, and yonder around the world. We become more aware of places and problems, though, than we do of conflicts among persons of other races and backgrounds.

... We sometimes count, and locate on the map, the date lines to the front page of the newpspaer. Our family uses various devotional guides. Occasionally THE UPPER ROOM has a"World Fellowship Number."

Human rights are more basic than states' rights. The state does not create rights; its task is to make fraternity and conditions which support equal rights secure for all its citizens. We can't legislate morality, but we can and should develop and support legislation which encourages and supports morality. There is a natural "consciousness of kind" but it need not be "unkind." Each person, as a child of God, has the right of equal opportunity for full self realization. Intelligence, mutual respect, and co-operation are musts for survival. They are necessary if we are to build a good society, and more necessary still if we are to take seriously the discipleship of our Lord who calls us to prepare the way for the gift of the Kingdom of God.

Your Child

Your Child and His Attitudes

By DONALD M. MAYNARD

Once upon a time there was a father who had no interest in bugs or crawling things. In fact, he didn't like them. To him they were objects to brush quickly from one's clothes, and to avoid when possible. One evening his young son, who was having his first experience with catching fireflies, rushed up to him and asked him to hold a firefly he had just caught. The father's first inclination was to withdraw his hand quickly and to refuse his son's request with an exclamation of disgust and irritation. Fortunately, he caught himself just in time, and gingerly held the firefly in his hand, and then another, and then still another, as the son delightedly continued what was to him a thrilling experience.

It is worthy of note that this young boy continued his interest in all phases of nature, and today, many years later, is carrying on significant research in the field of zoology and teaching in one of the great universities of our land. The father has been grateful through the years that in this every-day, and yet crucial experience with his son, he did not pass on to him his own attitude of dislike for bugs. How easy it would have been for him to transmit the feeling to his son that bugs and crawling things were to be avoided, or to be crushed and killed. And how impoverished the life of the son would have been had the father's attitude been passed on to him.

The purpose of this illustration is to remind us that it is during the formative years of a child's life that many of his basic attitudes are established, attitudes that will do much towards determining whether or not he has confidence in himself, whether or not he has wholesome attitudes towards others and can get along with them, and the kind of values around which he builds his life. As a parent contemplates this responsibility, it is almost frightening.

But it is equally important that we do not let this illustration give us the wrong impression. Important as the parents may be in the formation of children's attitudes, he is not the sole determiner of them. Other people, the child's peers, and his first hand experiences with objects and people in his environment, all influence him. This particular boy, for example, even though he had at first caught from his father a dislike for bugs, might have changed when he discovered that many of his peers were interested in objects of nature. A teacher in the school might have directed him into many interesting contacts with, in this case, bugs, and later on the teaching of science in school might have created an interest in the whole field of zoology. Nevertheless, the influence of parents, especially during the earlier years, is likely to be more important than any other factor.

By the term "attitudes," we are thinking primarily of the feeling that a child or a person has towards objects, events, people, or ideas. It is the feeling aspect of attitudes that is as important. And although it is true that we feel more intensely about some things than others, we think of an attitude as having an intensity of emotion connected with it that leads to a certain type of behavior. Attitudes give direction to our behavior and our lives. If I have a favorable attitude towards someone, I want to be with that person, in my behavior I tend to approach him. If I have an attitude of dislike, I try to avoid the person, and I tend to go away from him. I tend to be favorably inclined toward the ideas of people whom I admire and like; I tend to be critical of the ideas of those whom I do not like or admire.

It is important, then, for you to ask yourself two basic questions: What are the more basic attitudes I want my child to develop? And second, what part do I have to play in the development of my child's attitudes?

How Attitudes Are Formed

The child is not born with attitudes about people or ideas. He is not born with prejudices toward others; he is not born with a deep-seated sense of inferiority. These are attitudes that are acquired, that grow out of his experiences. Because they are acquired, they may either be prevented in the first place, or changed after they have been developed. This, of course, is why you, the parent, have such a significant role to play. Your child is in your care during the formative years when many of the most basic attitudes are created.

As you think of your child and his attitudes, keep in mind the following:

1. Your child, very early in life, learns to behave in ways that bring about the gratification of his needs, some of which are physical, others psychological and social. He discovers that how well they are satisfied depends upon how well he gets along in his interpersonal relationships which, for a small child, means with you, the parent. The behavior that he discovers is pleasing to you becomes associated with certain attitudes. These attitudes consequently influence his future interpretation of his environment and create within him a readiness to act in a certain way.

Your child, for example, has a great need for your approval. If he discovers that whenever he exercises initiative and resourcefulness in his play, or manifests great curiosity about the world of nature and of people, you seem to be a bit irritated and express your disapproval, he may decide that it is better to stifle creative thinking and curb impulses to express himself freely and enthusiastically. He is likely to develop a basic attitude towards life that says life must be lived cautiously, rather than with an adventuresome spirit. In the future, therefore, he responds negatively to creative opportunities.

Again, in his play with his peers it is inevitable that he should run into conflicts and difficulties. This is a normal part of the process of learning how to get along with others. But one evening he comes home and says he has been in a fight, and he speaks disparingly of his adversary. It soon is revealed that the boy is one of another race, or creed. You may not realize it but this may be a very crucial moment in your child's life. How you respond to the situation may determine whether your child develops racial prejudice or exemplifies a feeling of tolerance and appreciation for others. If you, too, speak with contempt for the lad of another race, and encourage your son to feel that he is "no good" or inferior, the seeds of racial prejudice may be firmly entrenched. On the other hand, if you show disapproval of such evidences of racial prejudice, your child's attitude towards others may become one of respect and appreciation. Behavior, you see, helped influence the development of attitudes, which attitudes, in turn, influenced future behavior.

II. Although your child's attitudes may be affected by what you say, other means of communication are likely to be more effective. And of course what you do is more important than anything else. But do not forget that it is important that you offer verbal expressions of approval and appreciation to your child. Do not take for granted that he knows you love him and are proud of him. Tell him so, in no uncertain terms.

Far more important than your words, will be the more subtle means of communication. The smile on your face and the light in your eye as you congratulate your son on something he has done, are far more significant than the words you may utter. And a scowl, or a shrug of the shoulders, or the pursing of the lips when your child shares with you a mediocre report card conveys your disappointment more eloquently than scolding or recrimination. Saying nothing in such a situation may be more devastating to the spirit of your child than the honestly facing of the facts in the situation.

Actions have special significance as you try to help your child develop wholesome attitudes toward religion. You can tell your child that you believe in God, but if in the telling you are unenthusiastic and seem to be expressing shibboleths that you have learned, your child is not fooled. If, in addition, he sees no evidence that you ever pray to God; if you never speak of Him in connection with the ongoing life of the family; and if your grace at the table is purely perfunctory, he soon senses the fact that God isn't a very vital factor in your life. You can take your child to church school and tell him it is good for him, that you went as a child. If you then return home to read the Sunday paper, and do not bother to attend the services of your church, your son will look forward to the time when he is big and can stay home. In other words, your child's attitude toward religion is likely to reflect your own.

III. Your child will tend to assume the attitudes of persons and groups with which he identifies himself. When he is small, you may note that he frequently expresses the attitudes of a beloved character in his favorite story. Later on he tends to emulate the athletic heroes with whom he identifies himself. There is considerable evidence that children who watch television extensively reflect the attitudes of their favorite characters.

In later childhood, and especially during adolescence, your child will be particularly concerned about the approval of those who belong to a special group of which he is a part. Sometimes the expectations and attitudes of these peer groups are quite different from your own. Your child thus finds himself in a quandary. He wants to please you—although this may be news to you—and he also wants the approval of his group. He may find himself vacillating between espousing the attitudes of the group, and those of the home. He may be genuinely concerned as to what is right or wrong, as attitudes are closely related to values. Try to be as sympathetic as possible with him in his predicament. Watch for moments when you can share with him the reasons for your attitudes; give him a chance to express his own viewpoints, and encourage him to make up his own mind.

Recognizing the importance of peer groups upon the formation of attitudes, it is perfectly proper that you should be concerned about the groups to which your child belongs. You will try to provide for your children friends and companions whose basic attitudes you deem to be commendable, although they may not always be identical with your own.

IV. Far less important than the influence of peer groups, is the influence of logical argument, or the acquisition of factual information, although they both have some influence upon attitudes. Encourage your child to think logically and to get the facts that form the basis of judgment and thus of attitudes. Remember, however, that these are not all important. It may be well, also, to remember that the attitudes of your child will not be markedly changed by threats or punishment.

V. Your child's first-hand experiences with his environment help determine his attitudes toward himself and others. A child who is guided into a creative activity in which he achieves something that seems to him and to others to be significant, develops confidence in himself. Happy experiences with those of other races provide a foundation for attitudes of respect and appreciation for them. A role-playing experience in which he tries to feel as others feel, may bring about changes in his attitudes.

VI. Do not forget the influence of the community in which you live upon your child's attitudes. In your efforts as a citizen to see to it that you have honest officials, that your schools and teachers are held in high regard, and that throughout the community there is respect and appreciation for the various racial and religious groups, you will be trying to provide your child with that kind of an environment which will help produce wholesome, worthwhile attitudes.

TRIBUTE AT CHICAGO—Mrs. M. E. Tilley, member of Haygood Church, Atlanta, was surprised by both verbal and floral bouquets at the second national Methodist Human Relations Conference held in Chicago. Dr. Dow Kirkpatrick, shown above with Mrs. Tilley, introduced her to the conference. A citation to her said that the conference "gives thanks to God for the life and witness of Mrs. Tilley, who for more than 40 years from her native Atlanta led the south and the nation, especially through inspiring church women, forward along the road to Christian brotherhood. Her love for her fellowman, after the pattern of God's love for all men, has caused her to contend on innumerable fronts for justice, freedom and brotherhood in the face of threat, persecution and suffering. In it all she has maintained in her own soul a Christlike gentleness and a contagious joy."

"LET THE WORD GO FORTH FROM THIS TIME AND PLACE, TO FRIEND AND FOE ALIKE, THAT THE TORCH HAS BEEN PASSED TO A NEW GENERATION OF AMERICANS -- BORN IN THIS COUNTRY, TEMPERED BY WAR, DISCIPLINED BY A HARD AND BITTER PEACE, PROUD OF THEIR ANCIENT HERITAGE -- AND UNWILLING TO WITNESS OR PERMIT THE SLOW UNDOING OF THOSE HUMAN RIGHTS TO WHICH THIS NATION HAS ALWAYS BEEN COMMITTED, AND TO WHICH WE ARE COMMITTED TODAY AT HOME AND AROUND THE WORLD.

"LET EVERY NATION KNOW, WHETHER IT WISHES US WELL OR ILL, THAT WE SHALL PAY ANY PRICE, BEAR ANY BURDEN, MEET ANY HARDSHIP, SUPPORT ANY FRIEND, OPPOSE ANY FOE TO ASSURE THE SURVIVAL AND THE SUCCESS OF LIBERTY.

"LET BOTH SIDES UNITE TO HEED IN ALL CORNERS OF THE EARTH, THE COMMAND OF ISAIAH -- 'TO UNDO THE HEAVY BURDENS,.. AND LET THE OPPRESSED GO FREE.'"

President John F. Kennedy

II. THE CIVIL RIGHTS ACT OF 1964

Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy calls upon us to fill the "vacuum" of leadership in civil rights that followed the Supreme Court's school desegregation decision.
"...we need only think back ten years to another legal milestone in our civil rights history... What happened after that decision? Where were the pulpit, the press, the public officials? The answer is that they were silent... Leadership was provided by demagogues and mobs. We got what we deserved.
"Rarely in history are nations presented with a second chance, with a new opportunity to correct a deep failure of the past. I believe that we have been given that chance."
--From - Remarks by Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy to the National Citizens' Committee for Community Relations, August 18, 1964

We pray Thee, O Father....

Keep alive within us the vision of our higher purposes and nobler destiny, and renew our zeal for the divine tasks of life.
Open our hearts to the cry of the persecuted and the despoiled.
Hasten the day when hate and strife shall cease to divide the family of men, and justice and love reign supreme....
--From - Union Prayer Book

III. OUR CHILDREN -- TODAY - TOMORROW

O God, hear us as we pray for all the children of our nation and of the world.
For those especially do we pray who are being brought up in homes where there is no beauty, nor joy, nor love; for those who suffer from deprivation, want, and sickness for whom no proper care is offered;

OUR CHILDREN (cont'd)

- for those who suffer in mind and soul through fear and bitterness and strain;
- for the wayward and those who are misunderstood.

In Thy mercy restore to them that which they have lacked and that which has been taken from them.
Bless all efforts that are made in behalf of child welfare.
Awaken those who are in positions of power and responsibility to a deeper consciousness of the rights and needs of children.
Wipe out from the souls of all neglected children the scars of suffering, misery, and fear.
Give back to them the courage, the confidence, and the untroubled joy which should be theirs.
Grant to all who tend and teach children the love and patient wisdom they need.

--AMEN

THE CALL TO US --- A voice cries

In the wilderness prepare the way of the LORD, make straight in the desert a highway for our God.
Every valley shall be lifted up,
and every mountain and hill be made low;
The uneven ground shall become level,
and the rough places a plain.
And the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together,
For the mouth of the Lord has spoken.

CIVIL RIGHTS DIGEST

PUBLISHED BY THE U.S. COMMISSION ON CIVIL RIGHTS

1701 PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE, N.W.. WASHINGTON, D.C. 20425

SPECIAL BULLETIN—AUGUST 1964

A SUMMARY OF THE CIVIL RIGHTS ACT OF 1964

This summary of the 1964 Civil Rights Act was prepared in response to questions about the Act which have come to the Commission from citizens in every section of the country. It is designed to provide a clearer understanding of the major provisions of the new statute.

Some of the questions raised about any new law cannot be fully answered until the policies and programs necessary for carrying out the law have been developed by the appropriate Government agencies. Other questions will be further clarified as the courts deal with cases brought under the law.

This summary was prepared by the staff of the Commission and is available for distribution as a service under the national clearinghouse function assigned the Commission by the new Civil Rights Act.

Title I

VOTING

The purpose of this section is to provide more effective enforcement of the right to vote in Federal elections (for President, Vice President, presidential electors or members of Congress) without regard to race or color. It also speeds up the procedure by which voting rights suits may be decided.

The Act:

a. requires that the same standards be applied to all individuals seeking to register and vote;

b. forbids denial of the right to vote because of some minor mistake or omission;

c. requires that only literacy tests that are written may be used as a qualification for voting; and that the tests and answers be available on request;

d. establishes that in voting rights law suits the court must presume that anyone who completed the sixth grade is literate, unless the State can prove otherwise.

In any voting suit brought by the Government charging that there is a "pattern or practice" of voting discrimination, either the Attorney General or the defendant may ask that a three-judge Federal court be appointed to hear the case. Appeals from the decisions of such a court may be taken directly to the Supreme Court.

Title II

PUBLIC ACCOMMODATIONS

Discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion or national origin is specifically forbidden in the following places of public accommodation:

a. hotels and motels, restaurants, lunch counters, movie houses, gasoline stations, theaters and stadiums;

b. any other establishment which offers its services to patrons of the covered establishment; for example,

–a barbershop or tavern located in a hotel, or –a department store in which there is a restaurant: so long as the covered facilities either affect interstate commerce in their operations, or are supported in their discriminatory practices by State action.

In addition, discrimination is forbidden in any other place of public accommodation that is required to segregate by State or local laws.

If there are no State or local laws requiring segregation, the Federal law does not cover:

a. barbershops, beauty parlors and other service establishments unless they are located in a hotel and offer these services to hotel guests;

b. retail stores that do not serve food, or places of recreation (except as listed above) which do not serve food;

c. lodging houses, hotels or similar places which take temporary guests if they have fewer than six rooms for rent in a building occupied by the owner.

Places that are actually owned and operated as private clubs are exempted from coverage of this title except to the extent that they offer their facilities to patrons of a covered establishment, such as a country club that customarily allows guests of a hotel to use its golf course.

No person may intimidate, threaten or coerce anyone for the purpose of interfering with the rights created by this title.

The provisions of this title may be enforced in two ways:

1. By individual action in a civil suit filed by the persons discriminated against, or

2. By Government action in a civil suit filed by the Attorney General.

In public accommodations suits filed by individuals:

—the court hearing the suit may appoint a lawyer for the person bringing the complaint and exempt the complainant from the payment of certain costs;

—the court may permit the Attorney General to enter the case;

—if there is a State law or local ordinance that prohibits discrimination, the complaint must first be taken to the State or local authorities, allowing them 30 days to begin a proceeding before suit can be filed in a Federal court;

—once the case is in court, the court can postpone action until the State or local proceeding is completed;

—if there are no State or local anti-discrimination provisions, the court may refer the matter to the Community Relations Service (see Title X) so that it may seek to secure voluntary compliance within no more than 120 days.

The Attorney General may file a public accommodations suit when he believes there is a pattern or practice of resistance. As in Title I voting suits, he may request a three-judge court for this action.

In public accommodations suits brought either by individuals or the Attorney General, the court may issue temporary or permanent injunctions or restraining orders against those found to be violating the law. A person or persons failing to obey such court decrees may be punished by contempt proceedings under the jury trials provision of the law (see Title XI).

Title III

PUBLIC FACILITIES

The Attorney General is authorized to bring a civil suit to compel desegregation of any publicly-owned or operated facility whenever he receives a written complaint of discrimination. He must believe that the complaint merits action and must certify that the individual or individuals making the complaint are themselves unable to take the necessary legal action. State or municipally owned or operated parks, libraries and hospitals are among the facilities covered.

Title IV

PUBLIC EDUCATION

Under this title the U.S. Office of Education is authorized to:

a. conduct a national survey to determine the availability of equal educational opportunity;

b. provide technical assistance, upon request, to help States, political subdivisions or school districts carry out school desegregation plans;

c. arrange training institutes to prepare teachers and other school personnel to deal with desegregation problems;

d. make grants enabling school boards to employ specialists for in-service training programs.

In addition, the Attorney General is authorized to file civil suits seeking to compel desegregation of public schools, including public colleges.

Before filing such a suit the Attorney General must have received a signed complaint from a pupil or parent and must have determined that the complainant, according to standards set forth in the Act, is unable to bring the action. The Attorney General is also required to notify the school board and give it a reasonable period of time to correct the alleged condition before filing suit.

Title V

COMMISSION ON CIVIL RIGHTS

The life of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights is extended until January 31, 1968. Since 1957 the Commission's functions have included investigating denials of the right to vote, studying legal developments and appraising Federal policies relating to equal protection of the laws, and making recommendations for corrective action to the President and the Congress.

Title V gives the Commission added authority to:

a. serve as a national clearinghouse for civil rights information;

b. investigate allegations of vote fraud.

Commission hearing procedures are amended to further protect the rights of individuals who may be affected by Commission proceedings.

As a national clearinghouse, the Commission will provide civil rights information in such areas as voting, housing, education, employment and the use of public facilities to Federal, State and local government agencies and officials, organizations and businesses, and the general public.

Title VI

FEDERALLY ASSISTED PROGRAMS

Under this title every Federal agency which provides financial assistance through grants, loans or contracts is required to eliminate discrimination on the grounds of race, color or national origin in these programs.

For example, this title would require the following:

a. hospitals constructed with Federal funds would have to serve all patients without regard to race, color or national origin;

b. elementary and secondary schools constructed, maintained and operated with Federal funds would have to admit children without regard to race, color or national origin;

c. State employment services financed by Federal funds would have to refer qualified job applicants for employment without discrimination;

d. schools for the deaf and the blind operated with Federal funds would have to serve the deaf and blind of any color;

e. colleges and universities receiving funds for their general operation or for the construction of special facilities, such as research centers, would have to admit students without discrimination;

f. construction contractors receiving funds under Federal public works programs would have to hire employees without discrimination.

Action by a Federal agency to carry out the requirements of this title may include the terminating of programs where discrimination is taking place or refusal to grant assistance to such a program.

Each agency is required to publish rules or regulations to carry out the purposes of the title. These rules and regulations are subject to the approval of the President.

Compliance actions are subject to the following conditions:

a. notice must be given of alleged failure to comply and an opportunity for a hearing must be provided;

b. in the event assistance is to be cut off, a written report must be submitted to Congress 30 days before the cut-off date;

c. compliance action may be appealed to the courts.

Social security and veteran's benefits, and other Federal benefits distributed directly to individuals are not affected by this law.

Federal assistance in the form of insurance or guaranty—for example, FHA insured loans—are not covered by this title (however, the President's Executive Order prohibiting discrimination in Federally aided housing remains in effect).

Title VII

EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY

This title establishes a Federal right to equal opportunity in employment. It creates an Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to assist in implementing this right.

Employers, labor unions and employment agencies are required to treat all persons without regard to their race, color, religion, sex, or national origin. This treatment must be given in all phases of employment, including hiring, promotion, firing, apprenticeship and other training programs, and job assignments.

When this title goes into full effect employers will be subject to its provisions if they have 25 or more regular employees in an industry that affects interstate commerce. Generally speaking, labor unions will be subject to the Act if they either operate a hiring hall for covered employers, or if they have 25 or more members who are employed by a covered employer. Employment agencies are also included if they regularly undertake to supply employees for a covered employer.

(Enforcement of the nondiscrimination requirements for employers and unions is postponed for one year. Employers and unions with 100 or more workers will be covered beginning July 2, 1965 and coverage will be extended each year until July 2, 1968 when employers and unions with 25 workers will be covered.)

Not covered by this title are (1) public employers, (2) bona fide private clubs, (3) educational institutions with regard to employees working in educational activities and all employment in religious educational institutions, (4) employers on or near an Indian reservation with regard to preferential treatment of Indians; and (5) religious corporations, institutions, etc., with regard to employees working in connection with religious activities.

When someone believes he has been discriminated against because of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin in any phase of job placement or employment, he may bring his complaint within 90 days to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission or to the Attorney General.

The Commission will handle his complaint directly, unless the State or locality where the alleged discrimination occurred has fair employment laws. If so, the person complaining must allow the State or local officials no more than 120 days to resolve the matter. If there is no satisfactory conclusion within this time or if the State or locality rejects the complaint before the time is up, the complainant may then go to the Commission, which is authorized to settle valid complaints by conciliation and persuasion. Nothing said during the conciliation proceedings may be made public or used as evidence without the consent of the parties.

If the Commission fails to secure compliance within a period of no more than 60 days, the individual may take his case to a Federal court. This court may appoint an attorney and may exempt the complainant from payment of certain costs. The court, in its discretion, may allow the Attorney General to enter the case.

A worker who thinks he has been discriminated against may take his complaint directly to the Attorney General, who may bring the case before a three-judge court if he believes there is a pattern or practice of resistance to this title.

If the court in either action finds discrimination, it will order the employer, employment agency or union to take corrective action, which may include hiring or reinstating employees with or without back pay.

Title VIII

VOTING STATISTICS

The Secretary of Commerce is required to conduct a survey of persons of voting age by race, color, and national origin and to determine the extent to which such persons have registered and voted in such geographic areas as the Commission on Civil Rights recommends.

A similar survey must also be conducted on a nationwide basis in connection with the 1970 Census. No person questioned during such surveys may be compelled to disclose his race, color, religion or national origin and everyone must be advised of his right to refuse to give this information.

Title IX

INTERVENTION AND REMOVAL IN CIVIL RIGHTS CASES

The Attorney General is authorized to intervene in any Federal court action seeking relief from the denial of equal protection of the laws on account of race, color, religion or national origin. If a Federal court refuses to accept a civil rights case and sends it back to a State court, this action may be reviewed on appeal.

Title X

COMMUNITY RELATIONS SERVICE

A Community Relations Service is established in the Department of Commerce to provide assistance to persons or communities requiring help with civil rights problems where discriminatory practices impair constitutional rights or affect interstate commerce. The Service is authorized to cooperate with both public and private agencies, either on its own initiative or upon request from local officials or interested persons in situations where disputes threaten peaceful relations among the citizens of a community.

In addition, the Service is authorized to seek a voluntary settlement of public accommodation complaints which may be referred to it by a Federal Court. The Act directs that all activities of the Service in providing conciliation assistance shall be conducted in confidence and without publicity.

Title XI

MISCELLANEOUS

This title gives a right to jury trial in criminal contempt cases arising out of Titles II, III, IV, V, VI and VII. Title I retains the more limited jury trial provisions of the 1957 Civil Rights Act.

Appropriations are authorized to carry out the Act, and a separability clause provides that the rest of the Act will be unaffected if any portion is invalidated. Another section preserves existing remedies under Federal law. This title also preserves the rights of the States to legislate in the same areas covered by this Act, so long as such legislation is not inconsistent with the purposes of the Act.

The United States Commission on Civil Rights is a temporary, independent, bipartisan agency established by the Congress in 1957 to:

- Investigate complaints alleging that citizens are being deprived of their right to vote by reason of their race, color, religion, or national origin;
- Study and collect information concerning legal developments constituting a denial of equal protection of the laws under the Constitution;
- Appraise Federal laws and policies with respect to equal protection of the laws;
- Serve as a national clearinghouse for civil rights information;
- Investigate allegations of vote fraud; and
- Submit interim reports and a final and comprehensive report of its activities, findings, and recommendations to the President and the Congress.

LAITY IN MISSION AND THE 1964 ELECTIONS

Assembly of United Church Women
Kansas City, October 7

"The time has come to make the ministry of the laity explicit, visible and active in the world." We believe, as citizens and Christians, that one important way to do this is through the ballot box. We know the importance of each vote. We know, because it has happened before, that only one vote per precinct could decide the next presidential election. We know that 36% of Americans of voting age failed to vote in the last national election. We know that a special responsibility rests upon women who as eligible voters now outnumber men voters by more than four million.

Our responsibility is underscored by the price paid by others for the right to vote. Members of Christian churches have seen their churches bombed because they were centers for voter registration education. Men and women have lost their jobs because they dared register to vote. Many have given their time and some their lives to help fellow citizens to register.

Aware that the 1964 elections will determine the direction our nation will move in its domestic and foreign policies. WE, UNITED CHURCH WOMEN, MEETING IN THE 1964 ASSEMBLE IN KANSAS CITY, OCTOBER 7, THEREFORE, COMMIT OURSELVES, AND URGE ALL CHURCH WOMEN, TO PREPARE FOR AND VOTE IN THE 1964 ELECTIONS AS A PART OF OUR MISSION AS LAITY.

In fulfilling this task we will:

1. Study the issues in the campaign, examining the platforms of both parties;

   comparing the voting records of the candidates;
   learning what groups and interests are supporting each candidate and party and what influence they would have upon the candidate if he were elected.

2. Clarify, as Christians, our positions on the issues.

   Make full use of the years of careful research and thought of fellow Christians as found in Policy Statements and Resolutions of the National Council of Churches, and many denominations. These statements are not attempts to tell the Christian what to think: they are aids to thought.

3. Welcome differences in the search for truth.

4. Resist name-calling, accusation without proof, appeals to prejudice, wild promises that cannot be fulfilled and other demogogic methods often used in political campaigns.

A TEST NOW OF CHRISTIANITY

--The Atlanta Journal
by Eugene Patterson

"...How, in God's name, do you reach them?" Reg Murphy of this newspaper asked that question in anguish. He had just returned from Atlanta's Lakewood Park on Saturday. There to cover the George Wallace-Ross Barnett speechmaking, he had been an eyewitness to the savage beating of two Negroes.

Whites had cornered the Negroes against a fence. They did not strike simply with their fists. They swung metal folding chairs, again and again, with crushing force against the bodies and heads of their human quarry. Murphy saw blood splash and spurt. "Kill 'em," people were screaming.

"I thought I was watching two men being killed," Murphy said. "I was almost physically sick."

* * *

Policemen who braved blows themselves got to the bleeding Negroes in time, took them away from their butchers and sent them to the hospital. Murphy came to the newspaper office and tried to write quietly of the brutality he had seen, and the screams he had heard.

The frustrated, violent men "have lost their way in their search for their kind of government," he wrote.

"Any sort of analysis would have to point out to them that they undercut their own cause--and any other conservative cause--by such conduct."

At this point quiet, analytical words failed Reg Murphy and he concluded his commentary with one shattering question. "But how, in God's name, do you reach them?"

That is a question for the men themselves, for their families, for their ministers--yes, and for the heedless, imported political opportunists who came from out of state to please them cheaply after Georgia's own responsible leadership had been honest with them. There is no alternative but compliance with the law, Sen. Herman Talmadge had said.

* * *

But how do you reach the people who smashed metal chairs against bleeding bodies, or people who cried "Kill 'em" at the sickening sight? There are a few mean men in any society, of course, who can be reached only by the police, and convinced only by the chain gang. Recent outcroppings of violence at places where Georgians are trying to obey the law are a challenge to the professional honor of law enforcement officers, as well as to the honor of the state.

But what of those who are not basically brutal, yet who are swept along, when herd leaders inflame them, until lesser men's passions sway their own humane codes?

Murphy asked, in God's name, how they can be reached. Perhaps the answer can only in in God's name, and through the counsel of those who preach in it, like Atlanta's Pastor Robert E. Lee. He told his flock Sunday that Christ has never been, and cannot be, served with "pistols and ax handles."

DECLARATION OF THE RIGHTS OF A CHILD

Adopted by the General Assembly of the United Nations on November 20, 1959

Whereas the peoples of the United Nations have, in the Charter, reaffirmed their faith in fundamental human rights, and in the dignity and worth of the human person, and have determined to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

Whereas the United Nations has, in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, proclaimed that everyone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms set forth therein, without distinction of any kind, such as race, color, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status,

Whereas the child, by reason of his physical and mental immaturity, needs special safeguards and care, including appropriate legal protection before as well as after birth,

Whereas the need for such special safeguards has been stated in the Geneva Declaration of the Rights of the Child of 1924, and recognized in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and in the statutes of specialized agencies and international organizations concerned with the welfare of children,

Whereas mankind owes to the child the best it has to give,

Now therefore

The General Assembly proclaims this Declaration of the Rights of the Child to the end that he may have a happy childhood and enjoy for his own good and for the good of society the rights and freedoms herein set forth, and calls upon parents, upon men and women as individuals and upon voluntary organizations, local authorities and national governments to recognize and strive for the observance of these rights by legislative and other measures progressively taken in accordance with the following principles:

Principle 1

The child shall enjoy all the rights set forth in this declaration. All children, without any exception whatsoever, shall be entitled to these rights, without distinction or discrimination on account of race, color, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status, whether of himself or of his family.

Principle 2

The child shall enjoy special protection, and shall be given opportunities and facilities, by law and by other means, to enable him to develop physically, mentally, morally, spiritually and socially in a healthy and normal manner and in conditions of freedom and dignity. In the enactment of laws for this purpose the best interests of the child shall be the paramount consideration.

Principle 3

The child shall be entitled from his birth to a name and a nationality.

Principle 4

The child shall enjoy the benefits of social security. He shall be entitled to grow up and develop in health; to this end special care and protection shall be provided both to him and to his mother, including adequate prenatal and post-natal care. The child shall have the right to adequate nutrition, housing, recreation and medical services.

Principle 5

The child who is physically, mentally or socially handicapped shall be given the special treatment, education and care required by his particular condition.

Principle 6

The child, for the full and harmonious development of his personality, needs love and understanding. He shall, wherever possible, grow up in the care and under the responsibility of his parents, and in any case in an atmosphere of affection and of moral and material security; a child of tender years shall not, save in exceptional circumstances, be separated from his mother. Society and the public authorities shall have the duty to extend particular care to children without a family and those without adequate means of support. Payment of state and other assistance toward the maintenance of children of large families is desirable.

Principle 7

The child is entitled to receive education, which shall be free and compulsory at least in the elementary stages. He shall be given an education which will promote his general culture, and enable him on a basis of equal opportunity to develop his abilities, his individual judgment and his sense of moral and social responsibility, and to become a useful member of society.

The best interests of the child shall be the guiding principle of those responsible for his education and upbringing; that responsibility lies in the first place with his parents.

The child shall have full opportunity for play and recreation, which should be directed to the same purposes as education; society and the public authorities shall endeavor to promote the enjoyment of this right.

Principle 8

The child shall in all circumstances be among the first to receive protection and relief.

Principle 9

The child shall be protected against all forms of neglect, cruelty and exploitation. He shall not be the subject of traffic, in any form.

The child shall not be admitted to employment before an appropriate minimum age; he shall in no case be caused or permitted to engage in any occupation or employment which would prejudice his health or education or interfere with his physical, mental or moral development.

Principle 10

The child shall be protected from practices which may foster racial, religious and any other form of discrimination. He shall be brought up in a spirit of understanding, tolerance, friendship among peoples, peace and universal brotherhood and in full consciousness that his energy and talents should be devoted to the service of his fellow men.

WORDS ARE POWERFUL --

They may convey meaning or obstruct it. They may commend or offend. Great care is needed in their use or they may alienate.

The word Negro is pronounced "knee-grow." It is a proper noun, as is Caucasian, Mongolian, Indian and should be written with a capitol "N".

Some examples of misused words --by Dr. James K. Mathews
(A missionary for many years in India)

Citizens of India are often called Hindus, one-fourth of them are not.

A Muslim is pained when called a Mohammedan, or by calling his religion Mohammedanism -- the correct name is Islam.

The correct name of the religion of Japan is Shinto, not Shintoism.

The people of Asia prefer to be called Asians -- not Asiatics or Orientals.

Citizens of Malaya are Malayans not Malaysians. These last names have come to have a connation of inferiority.

We live in a day when words are deliberately misused -- "peace offensive," "cold war" -- somehow, while standing for peace, we impress some "onlookers" that we are for war.

TABOO WORDS --

"Natives" - a perfectly good word "gone wrong" sometimes. Africans and Asians resent its use. It is resented when applied to the inhabitants of certain parts of our country. Learn to say Africans, or Indonesians, or Indians.

"Boy" - as applied to the African male regardless of age or status.

"Vernacular" - for language. It literally means "the language of slaves."

"Dialect" - not complementary, people speak languages.

WORDS CAN SPEAK LOUDER THAN ACTION --

South Americans do not like it when United States citizens refer to themselves as Americans. It would be more courteous and accurate if we referred to ourselves as North Americans.

"CLICHES"--are forever with us-- "grass root" (whoever admitted being a grass root?)

"key person" (who isn't one?)

INTER-FAITH CONFERENCE

- A Confrontation of

"THE EVILS WE DEPLORE"

FEBRUARY 26, 1965 - 10:30 A.M.

THE TEMPLE, 1589 Peachtree St., N.E.

Abou Ben Adhem (may his tribe increase!):
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace,
And saw within the moonlight in his room,
Making it rich, and like a lily in bloom,
An angel writing in a book of gold;
Exceeding peace had made Ben Adhem bold,
And to the presence in the room he said,
"What writest thou?" The vision raised its head,
And with a look made of all sweet accord,
Answered, "The names of those who love the Lord."
"And is mine one?", said Abou. "Nay, not so,"
Replied the Angel. Abou spoke more low,
But cheerily still, and said, "I pray thee, then Write me as one who loves his fellow-men."
The Angel wrote and vanished; the next night
It came again with a great wakening light,
And show'd the names whom love of God hast blest
And lo! Ben Adhem's led all the rest.

"Why Are You Fearful"

Behold, the Lord passed by,
A great strong wind rent the mountains,
and broke in pieces the rocks before the Lord,
but the Lord was not in the wind; and after the wind an earthquake but the Lord was not in the earthquake, and after the earthquake,
a fire, but the Lord was not in the fire; after the fire a still small voice.—I Kings 19:11-12
And in that still voice onward came the Lord.

Fear not them which kill the body
but cannot kill the soul;
but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body.
—Matthew 10:28

I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come,
Nor heights, nor depths, nor any other creature,
shall be able to separate us from the love of God.—Romans 8:38-39

"Fear Not"

O man, greatly beloved, fear not, peace be unto thee, be strong, yea be strong: and when he had spoken unto me I was strengthened and said, Let my Lord speak; for thou hast strengthened me.—Daniel 10:19

Fear ye not the reproach of men, neither be afraid of their reviling.—Isaiah 51:7

Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake.

Rejoice, and be exceedingly glad for great is your reward in heaven, for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you.

—Matthew 5:11-12

Who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good?

But and if ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye, and be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled.

But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear.

Having a good conscience, that, whereas they speak evil of you, as of evil doers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ.

For it is better, if the will of God be so, that you suffer for well doing, than for evil doing.

—I Peter 3:13-17

Fear thou not, for I am with thee;
be not dismayed, for I am thy God.
I will strengthen thee, yea, I will help thee.
I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness.

For I, the Lord, thy God will hold thy right hand, saying to thee, Fear not, I will help thee.
—Isaiah 41:10,13

Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing? and one of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father.

But the very hairs of your head are all numbered.

Fear ye not therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows.—Matthew 10:29-31

Be strong, and of good courage,
dread not, nor be dismayed
—I Chronicles 22:13

Wait on the Lord, be of good courage and he shall strengthen thine heart,
Wait I say on the Lord.—Psalm 27:14

Fear ye not, stand still and see the salvation of the Lord.—Exodus 14:13

Have I not commanded thee?

Be strong and of good courage; be not afrighted, neither be dismayed; for Jehovah thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest.
—Joshua 1:9

I Sought the Lord and He Delivered Me From My Fears

—Psalm 34:4

There is no fear in love, but perfect love
castest out fear.—I John 4:18

What time I am afraid, I will trust in thee.
In God I will praise his word,
in God I have put my trust.
I will not fear what flesh can do to me.
Psalm 56:3-4

The Lord is my light and my salvation;
Whom shall I fear?
The Lord is the strength of my life.
Of whom shall I be afraid?
Though an host should encamp against me,
my heart shall not fear.—Psalm 27:1,3

God is our refuge and strength,
A very present help in trouble,
Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed,
And though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea.—Psalm 46:1-2

We glory in tribulation, knowing that tribulation worketh patience,
And patience experience, and experience hope,
And hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit which is given us.—Romans 5:3-5

He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High
Shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty.
I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress;
My God, in him will I trust.
Surely he shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler,
And from the noisome pestilence.
He shall cover thee with his feathers,
And under his wings shalt thou trust.
His truth shall be thy shield and buckler.
Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night,
Nor for the arrow that flieth by day,
Nor for the pestilence that walketh in darkness,
Nor for the destruction that wastest at noonday,
Because thou hast made the Lord, which is my refuge,
Even the Most High, thy habitation,
There shall no evil befall thee,
Neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling;
For he will give his angels charge over thee,
To keep thee in all thy ways.
They shall bear thee up in their hands,
Lest thou dash thy foot against a stone.
—Psalm 91:1-6, 9-12

I will lift up my eyes unto the hills,
from whence cometh my help.

My help cometh from the Lord,
which made heaven and earth.

He will not suffer thy foot to be moved;
he that keepeth thee will not slumber.
Behold, he that keepeth Israel
shall neither slumber nor sleep.

The Lord is thy keeper;
the Lord is thy shade
upon thy right hand.
The sun shall not smite thee by day,
nor the moon by night.

The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil;
he shall preserve thy soul.
The Lord shall preserve
thy going out and thy coming in from this time forth, and even for evermore.

—Psalm 121

The Eternal God Is Our Refuge and Underneath Are the Everlasting Arms

Deuteronomy 33:27

The Lord thy God in the midst of thee is mighty,
he will rejoice over thee with joy,
he will rest in his love,
he will joy over thee with singing.

—Zephaniah 3:17

Fear not, for I have redeemed thee;
I have called thee by thy name;
thou art mine.
When thou passeth through the waters
I will be with thee
And through the rivers, they shall not overthrow thee.
When thou walkest through the fire thou shalt
not be burned,
Neither shall the flame kindle upon thee.

—Isaiah 43:1-2

Thou will keep him in perfect peace
whose mind is stayed on thee,
because he trusteth in thee.
Trust ye in the Lord forever,
for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength.

—Isaiah 26:3-4

They shall sit every man under his vine and under
his fig tree,
And none shall make them afraid,
For the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it.

—Micah 4:4

We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed;
we are perplexed, but not in despair;
Persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down but not destroyed;
Always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life of Jesus might be made manifest in our body.

—II Corinthians 4:8-10

Yea, though I walk through the valley
of the shadow of death,
I will fear no evil, for thou art with me;
Thy rod and thy staff, they comfort me.

—Psalm 23:4

Watch Ye, Stand Fast in the Lord: Quit Ye Like Men, Be Strong.

—I Corinthians 16:13

"If God be with you, who can be against you."

Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might.—Ephesians 6:10

Be strong and of good courage, fear not nor be afraid, for the Lord thy God he it is that doth go before thee; he will not fail thee nor forsake thee.—Deuteronomy 31:6

FORGET NOT THY MAKER

I, even I, am he that comforteth you.
Who art thou, that thou shouldest be afraid
of man that shall die,
of the son of man which shall be made as grass,
And forgetest the Lord thy maker,
that hath stretched forth the heavens
and laid the foundations of the earth,
and hast feared continually every day
because of the fury of the oppressor,
as if he were ready to destroy?
And where is the fury of the oppressor?

—Isaiah 51:12-13

OVERCOME EVIL WITH GOOD

Let love be without dissimulation. Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good.

Bless them which persecute you; bless and curse not.

If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink.

Be not overcome with evil but overcome evil with good.—Romans 12:9,14,20,21

LOVE NEVER FAILS

Love suffereth long and is kind.
Love envieth not.
Love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up,
Doth not behave itself unseemly,
Seeketh not its own, is not easily provoked,
Thinketh no evil,
Beareth all things, believeth all things,
Hopeth all things, endureth all things.
Love never faileth.—I Corinthians 13:4,5,7

CONTROL THY SELF

Yea, and for this very cause, adding on your part all diligence, in your faith supply virtue, and in your virtue knowledge.

And in your knowledge self control, and in your self control patience, and in your patience godliness.

And in your godliness brotherly kindness, and in your brotherly kindness love.

—II Peter 1:5-8

IN NOTHING BE ANXIOUS

In nothing be anxious but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your request be known unto God.

And the peace of God which passeth all understanding shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.

Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true,
whatsoever things are honest,
whatsoever things are just,
whatsoever things are pure,
whatsoever things are lovely,
whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.

Those things, which ye have both learned and received, and heard, and seen in me, do and the God of peace shall be with you.

—Philippians 4:6-9

THE REWARD

And my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus.

—Philippians 4:19

Fear not, little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom—Luke 2:12

Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.—Matthew 28:20

. . . Most of the reasons offered for segregation are, upon careful examination, flimsy; we see that the dangers against which it is supposed to protect us are for the most part unreal; we see that some of our attitudes in the matter are simply habits, and others a cloak for selfishness, and still others the result of the confusion of life, which is sacred, with segregation, which is only one of its perishing forms; we see, finally, that these old habits stand in the way of certain positive forces within us struggling for expression, chief among them the spirit of love which Jesus expressed and commanded—and yet—and yet—we are afraid it can't be done. We think it ought to be; we really don't want to defend it ourselves; but we're afraid it can't be—at least not now.

Perhaps this vague fear exists in the minds of many Christians. If so, we should name it for what it is. For its proper name may shock us into a deeper awareness of ourselves, and in the fantastic world we have created in the South, that would be all to the good.

It is lack of faith. Faithlessness. No more and no less. If we had more faith in God, we should have less fear. If we were filled with faith, we should have none. (No man attains, except at moments, this peak. Yet it is the peak toward which we climb.)

As we believe in love—which is to say, as we have love—we do not have fear. As we are afraid, then, we lack love, and lack faith in a God of love. Our fearfulness is the mark of our faithlessness, and simply means that the essential fire of Christianity burns but flickeringly upon the altar of our hearts.

How may that flame be steadied? By placing it alongside the original, the brightest of all its expressions, the life of Jesus. Contemplating that shining example, we shall find his spirit growing within us and the fears that now cling to our hearts like miasma along Southern ditches in summer dispersing before the beams of the rising sun.

As we have faith, we shall develop the institutions of a more Christian society. It is not easy to give institutional shape to love; it means transforming it into justice. Regardless of this difficulty, the source of our strength—and of our weakness—is clear: out of the heart proceed the issues of life. As our hearts are sensitive both to God's presence and to human need, as we yield ourselves to his encompassing love, we shall act well, and shall build, in these changing times, a more Christian society.

Collier's Features Mrs. Tilly and Claxton

In the December 30 issue (this past week) of Collier's magazine an interesting article about one of the most dynamic women of the South, Mrs. M. E. Tilly, has the first three paragraphs concerning Claxton. Helena Huntington Smith, author of the article, visited Claxton during the latter part of last August while on a trip accompanying Mrs. Tilly. She picked up the material she used about Claxton at first hand during her visit here.

The immediate object of Mrs. Tilly's visit was to see Mrs. Possie Daniel about some of the work being done jointly by them through the Women's Society of Christian Service.

The article "Mrs. Tilly's Crusade", tells in Miss Smith's words, about "A tiny Georgia lady in her sixties, who wears roses in her bonnet, proves a powerful fighter for human and civil rights in the South. Is a Negro denied his vote? Does a sheriff close his eyes to violence? Then she speeds to the fight—and usually victory."

In the first three paragraphs of the article Miss Smith points to Claxton, (because of this city's successful efforts in opposing the Klu Klux Klan by passing an ordinance by unanimous city council vote and the fact that the Klan has not operated in the city limits since), as an indication of "a bright new wave of the future." The Collier's article states that "the good people of Claxton were not acting alone ,but as part of a network with strands all over the South, a network of decent citizens opposed to violence and discrimination in their own communities."

Mrs. Tilly, a remarkable lady from Atlanta and daughter of a Methodist, has fought violence, intimidation and discrimination wherever it has reared its head in the South. The remarkable thing about her fight is that it is done in a quiet way and almost entirely by soliciting the aid of other women in local communities throughout the south.

Mrs. Tilly has been eminently successful in her work. She has been able to swing legislatures

The remarkable thing about her fight is that it is done in a quiet way and almost entirely by soliciting the aid of other women in local communities throughout the south.

Mrs. Tilly has been eminently successful in her work. She has been able to swing legislatures of various states to her way of thinking, has opposed the violence of public officials from governors to sheriffs to police chiefs and has been the victor in most cases. Miss Smith interprets the success of Mrs. Tilly's work as due to the fact that it is "gradually becoming fashionable to 'do the right thing'. More Southern communities are building good schools for Negroes and raising teachers' pay" . . . "the conscience of the South is its women. In church and out of it, as many a preacher will tell you, when it comes to courage to do the right thing, the women are far ahead of the men.

In addition to her work from 1940-1948 as secretary of Christian Social Relations of the Women's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist Church, southeastern jurisdiction, she now serves among other posts in a policy making capacity for the Georgia Inter-racial Committee, the Urban League of Atlanta, the Georgia Council of Church Women, the Georgia Conference of Social Work and is a national figure in all kinds of labor, social welfare, child welfare and rural welfare circles.

When she came to Claxton she was here as the field representative of the Southern Regional Council but "as a colleague explained to Miss Smith, "Mrs. Tilly goes and does what has to be done, and finds out later whom she did it for."

Mrs. Tilly is another of those important women of the South, like Miss Emily Woodward, who in their quiet, intelligent, dynamic way are leading the mass of people of the South in the direction they want to head, social progress in its finest sense.

At the same time, the following delegates were elected to attend a County convention for the purpose of electing a county committee.

DELEGATES: John L. DeLoach, Claxton; W. E. Sikes, Canoochee; H. L. Sikes, Undine; I. C. Hearn, Bellville; Raymond Burkhalter, Daisy.

Both community and county committeemen will take office by January 1, 1951. These committeemen will administer the 1951 Agricultural Conservation Program which provides assistance to aid farmers in carrying out soil and water conservation practices on their farms. In addition they have responsibilities for price support programs for tobacco, peanuts, acreage allotments and marketing quotas, and Federal Crop Insurance.

Although they are paid only for the few days a year that are actually engaged in the administration of these programs, they are "on call" at all times to assist their neighbors in matters pertaining to PMA programs.

Cotton Committee To Meet in Claxton

By J. P. Newell, Jr.

The Evans County Cotton Improvement Committee will meet at the Court House in Claxton on Monday, January 8th at 3:00 p.m. The purpose of this committee meeting is to make plans to improve the quality of cotton that we grow and also increase the quantity per acre raised. This committee has a very important roll to play during the year 1951. As we all know there is an acute shortage of cotton due to the fact that some has been exported and due to the increased demand for military purposes.

The United States Department of Agriculture is asking the cotton farmers to increase cotton acreage sufficient to produce 16,000,000 bales during the 1951 crop year. As you know the cotton acreage allotment has been lifted for the 1951 year, you must not fail to plant cotton because if and when it becomes necessary to put the cotton acreage allotment law back into effect our acreage might be reduced and given to the states that continued to plant large acreage.

NOTICE

We are offering 50c to the person who brings the first issue of January 12, 1950 of the Claxton Enterprise to this office.

YOUR CHURCH AND RACE

An Action Guide

> "This is the calling of the Church with regard to race, to witness within itself to the Kingship of Christ and the unity of His people, in Him transcending all diversity . . . Their calling requires Christians to witness to the Kingship of Christ and the unity of all mankind, and to strive through social and political action to secure justice, freedom and peace for all . . . From Report of the Section on Intergroup Relations, Second Assembly of the World Council of Churches, Evanston, 1954."

Assignment Race 1961-1964 provides the opportunity for church women across the nation to unite their efforts in helping to achieve full participation for all people without distinction of race in

- the local church and denomination
- the council of church women
- the community, concentrating in the area of greatest racial tension and need.

Each participating denomination is taking responsibility for an action program to be developed within its own communion. United Church Women is assuming special responsibility for the interdenominational action program.

This action guide suggests steps to take in looking at the local church. It has been prepared to help us know where we are in our own local church as a basis for plans to further implement our concern.

Although this guide can be used by any group within the local church, it is prepared primarily for the women's group. It is important to recognize at the outset that an assessment of where we are is only a first step in a study-action process. It is on the basis of such a study that a plan of action which is appropriate to each local church can be developed by a group in that situation.

Knowing Your Local Church

Your Denomination's Policy

What are your denomination's pronouncements and resolutions concerning segregation and discrimination in the church and community?

What is the evidence in your congregation of knowledge of such pronouncements and resolutions?

Your Local Church

A. What are the requirements for membership in your local church?

B. Is more than one racial group represented in the membership of your church?

If so, what percentage of the membership is represented by minority group or groups?

What were the circumstances that led to the church becoming interracial?

If not, why is this so?

C. Does your church serve and include in its membership all people in the neighborhood in which it is located?

If the neighborhood is all or predominantly of one racial group, what consideration has been given to ways of broadening and deepening the fellowship through more inclusive experiences?

D. What is your local church doing in the following areas:

1. Making available information concerning race through
   - the church library?
   - literature distribution?
   - literature displays?
   - audio-visual aids?
   - special reports?
   - speakers?

2. Studying and interpreting the Christian basis and responsibility for achieving an inclusive church fellowship and racial justice in the community by means of
   - regular study?
   - fellowship groups?
   - special study action groups?
   - the pulpit?

3. Providing opportunities for sharing in experiences across racial lines
   - through pulpit and congregation exchanges?
   - by bringing age level groups together for worship, study, action, discussion of mutual concerns, recreation, social occasions, etc.?

4. Being sure that the philosophy of Christian education expressed in the teaching, in the materials used, and in the attitudes of teachers reflects the Christian faith and the denomination's intention?

5. Working in the community through Christian witness to make the moral issue clear by
   - supporting movements and legislation toward racial justice, including housing, employment, education, hospital service, recreation, public accommodations, etc.?
   - encouraging and supporting the laity in their witness and work in the community?

E. What is the pattern of church membership in other churches in the community?

What evidence is there of growth toward the goal of inclusiveness?

F. What is the racial policy and practice in local church related institutions such as schools, hospitals, social welfare agencies?

G. Now a look at ourselves and our church

1. What does the review of our practices indicate to me
   - in relation to my concern and commitment as a Christian?
   - in relation to the need for continuous examination of my attitudes and behavior?
   - in relation to my responsibility to witness in the community?

2. What is required of my church for it to become "in reality a racially inclusive 'community of saints'?"

3. Do we as women have a particular contribution to make to our church in fulfilling its mission in this area? If so, how can this be done with greater power?

   Have we initiated or participated in projects with United Church Women, or if no council, then with women's groups from other churches?

4. What action is suggested as a result of this review?

   What constructive plan do we see being initiated, who would participate, what is the first step?

RESOURCES

Some local resources which can be helpful in carrying out this study-action process are your minister, official governing body of your local church, local council of church women, the local or regional denominational body, the local and state councils of churches and the experience of other local churches

Resources in the way of information, literature and consultation are available from the following national organizations:

1) The Social Education and Action Department of your denomination.

2) United Church Women, National Council of Churches of Christ in the U. S. A., 475 Riverside Drive, New York 27, New York.

3) Department of Racial and Cultural Relations, National Council of Churches of Christ in the U. S. A., 475 Riverside Drive, New York 27, New York.

GRAVE ALWAYS OPEN AT FEDERAL PEN CEMETERY

Prisoners Call Burying Ground "Boot Hill" and Tradition Calls for Open Grave

CEMETERY BEGAN WITH WILD WEST FLAVOR

IN FEDERAL PEN'S BOOT HILL SLEEP
SCORES WHO GOT BACK-DOOR PAROLES

* * * * * * * * * * * *

By Frank Veale, Jr.

The Wild West of Billy the Kid, Jesse James and the Dalton boys had its boot hills -- where those who died with their boots on in blazing gun battles at High Noon were buried.

Atlanta has its own Boot Hill -- it's not on the lone prarie but on it the winds blow free and some men from the West lie in its dark red clay.

Boot Hill is the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary's prison cemetery. Prisoners in the penitentiary never visit Boot Hill -- that is, unless they get a back-door parole. That is their sentence, going out the back door of the penitentiary.

Has Buried fourteen.--The winds blew across the lonesome hill as a reporter and Chaplain H. Park Tucker kicked some oak leaves off the slabs of stone.

"I have buried 14 men on Boot Hill," said the chaplain as he looked sadly at the graves. On the side of Boot Hill in front of the chaplain lay a huge mound of dirt. A grave stood open with a crude ladder leading down its somber sides.

"An open grave on Boot Hill is a tradition at the prison," Chaplain Tucker declared. "When a prisoner is buried here, another grave is dug by the detail and left open."

"No words can describe the horror prisoners have for the prospect of dying in prison," the chaplain added.

Were Homeless.--"You see, the only men buried on Boot Hill are the ones who have no home, no relatives to claim their bodies -- or else their relatives refuse to claim the body and the government buries them," Chaplain Tucker said.

The stillness on Boot Hill suddenly was shattered by rifle fire. Ironically enough, the crackle of gunfire echoes each day over the forgotten graves of those who rest in Boot Hill. The rifle range adjoins the cemetery with only the Southern Railway tracks between.

The prison Boot Hill was started in 1902, the year the Atlanta Penitentiary was built out of Stone Mountain granite. In 1902 inmate No. 5540, born in 1873, died in the prison.

Sixty-Year Old Grave.--In the prison stone shed, prisoners made a headstone for No. 5540, possibly mixing a tear or two of sympathy in with the concrete, and his fellow prisoners buried him on Peckerwood Hill.

Boot Hill was born.

Most of the graves in the old days had the prisoner's name, his number, date of birth, date of death and where he was from carved into the headstone.

Later new headstones were prepared and these had only the name of the prisoner -- no number and no location.

In the center of Boot Hill stands a large monument with an inscription reading: "And in eternal peace thy penance end."

Why the Boot.--How did Boot Hill come by its Wild West name? "Back in the early days," Chaplain Tucker said, "many prisoners were sent to Atlanta from the West. And many of the gravestones were marked originally with I. T. or Indian Territory. It soon became known to the inmates as Boot Hill."

By 1932 Boot Hill had 134 men resting in the hard clay.

"There is only one free man in Boot Hill." Chaplain Tucker said as a train rumbled by on the tracks overhead with a piggyback load of shiny new automobiles.

The chaplain walked over and knocked some leaves off another gravestone. Inscribed on the stone was "Ike Henderson."

He Asked to Stay.--"Isaac Henderson was imprisoned in 1913 and when his time was up he had no place to work, so he asked the warden if he could stay and work at the penitentiary," Chaplain Tucker said. "When he died in 1918 he was buried on Boot Hill -- the only man in 177 who is not an inmate."

Chaplain Tucker, who has served at the Penitentiary for 15 years and has talked to thousands of prisoners in that time, walked slowly back toward the truck.

Recalls 81-Year-Old.--"The man who impressed me the most," the chaplain recalled, was Old Folks. Old Folks never committed a crime until he was 49. After that he spent the rest of his life in penitentiaries off and on and died here at the age of 81."

"No, I'll never forget Old Folks," the chaplain mused as he climbed back into the cab of the truck.

On the way past the rifle range a guard stopped firing and looked our way. "Don't shoot, we're with you," called the chaplain. The guard smiled and waved the truck on.

In 1932 Boot Hill was immortalized in the haunting verse of Capt. John Madden, a guard at the prison:

GOD LOOKED DOWN

They wreathed their graves with flowers of spring --
Those mounds so long, long here;

And God looked down with tender smiles, and placed his blessings there.

Alone, forgotten through the years, each stone a mark of shame,
Their epitaph no word of hope, a number, not a name.

Too long, too long, have we forgot that God alone must judge.
Too long within the human heart, we carry hate and grudge.

How quick we are to ridicule, to score, to quick condemn,
When only by the grace of God we might've been one of them.
They do not sleep on glory's field, nor in the hall of fame,
But some of them in words of gold wrote high and clear his name.

And each man had a mother
  dear (the same as you and I)
And for her sake we lay a wreath, for those who slumber by.

Shine softly on each grave,
  O moon, blow gently,
  Southern breeze,
And sing a requiem soft and sad, as you sigh through the trees;
Then let the dewdrops fall upon the unearthed, rugged sod.

Fellowship of the Concerned

Dear Friend:

Because of the deep concern of all of us about the education of Georgia's children, we feel it is well for "The Fellowship of the Concerned, Georgia Women Concerned about their State," to come together for prayer and study.

The date - February 19th

Place - The Library of the Y.W.C.A.
72 Edgewood Avenue, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia

Sessions - 2 p.m. to 4:30 and 7 p.m. to 9:00

Dr. Claude Thompson of Emory will lead our two worship services as we seek guidance and strength "for the facing of these days."

We will have some legislators with us to interpret the action of this 1959 session. Mrs. Fred Patterson will lead the discussion.

All members of the Board of Directors of the United Church Women of Georgia are invited and urged to attend. They will be already for their workshop the next morning which will be held in the same place - the library of the Y.W.C.A.

To those who do not live in Atlanta, expenses for Hotel accommodations for the night of the 19th, travel and meals will be paid. We are, however, asking that two share a hotel room.

The challenges of the times are great! How God is calling us! How He is trusting us! Not in our might or power but in His spirit and His strength we will not fail.

Sincerely yours,

lec

THE KINGDOM WITHOUT FRONTIERS

ONE GOD:

Before the mountains were brought forth or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, ever from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God. Psalms 90:2

I am the Lord, and there is none else. Isaiah 45:6

ONE WORLD:

The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein. Psalms 24:1

ONE PEOPLE:

Have we not all one Father? Malachi 2:10

"The spirit of liberty is the spirit which is not too sure that it is right ... which seeks to understand the minds of other men and women ... remembers that not even a sparrow falls to earth unheeded ... It is the spirit of Him who ... taught mankind that lesson it has never learned but has never quite forgotten; that there may be a kingdom where the least shall be heard and considered ... with the greatest." -------Judge Learned Hand

ONE GOD

God is the God of every race and nation. No belief in God is adequate unless it is a belief in an all-inclusive God. He is a God of justice, mercy and love. He cannot be a racial or national God. He cannot be a class God. He is a God of all people. --Benjamin Mays, "Seeking to be Christian in Race Relations."

ONE WORLD

Whose world - Does the world belong to some of us more than to the rest of us? To strong nations more than weak ones? To the West or to the East? To man or to God? --From "Whose World" - John S. Wood Wendell Wilkie did not discover one world; God made one world.

Never before has the world's oneness been so apparent, never before has its adversities been so evident and its glaring disparities been so clear.
--W. Richey Hogg, "One World, One Mission"

ONE PEOPLE

There is only one man in the world and his name is ALL MEN.
-- Carl Sanburg, "The Family of Men"

The human family is one, whatever be their nationality, language, religion, color, social standing, culture or political opinions. All members of this family have an equal nobility. -- From Father Dominique Georges Pire's Address at Dedication of the Gandhi International Youth Center in Huy, Belgium

The Glorious Mix-Up on the Day of Pentecost

When the Spirit of God moved the hearts of the listeners as well as those of the apostles, people of sixteen nationalities and three continents were baptized into the Christian Church and made members of the fellowship of the Holy Spirit. Across the diversity of language, color, custom and culture the will of God cut sharply and three thousand new members of the church rejoiced in their experience of real unity.

It was no accident that God chose such a motley crowd on which to bestow His gifts of faith, cleansing and brother love. Pentecost was a mighty demonstration of His purpose ". . . that they may all be one." It was the undoing of Babel which sent the tribes of men stumbling along their separate and quarrelsome ways.
-- Theodore E. Matson, "Edge of the Edge."

The Fellowship of the Concerned

Who? Church women of all faiths and denominations have long furnished valuable moral leadership in the South. Now as never before their active leadership is needed—to help bring our practices in closer accord with the ideals of Christianity and Judaism, to strengthen and broaden democracy, to build a society in which every person can be confident of security and justice. By their determination to see these aims achieved, thousands of Southern church women are joined together in a fellowship that knows no boundaries of race or creed — the Fellowship of the Concerned.

When? In September 1949, 150 leaders of church women's groups came together for a two-day conference on the spiritual approach to social issues. They gathered at the call of the Southern Regional Council, the National Board of the YWCA, and church women's organizations. The conference had as its guests Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Southern authorities on civic and religious life.

Where? The conference took place at the Wesley Memorial Church in Atlanta, Georgia. But the delegates represented every Southern State and dozens of communities. They pledged themselves to report the results of the meeting to, and to enlist the cooperation of, church women in their areas.

Why? There are still serious inequalities in our courts and law enforcement. Negro citizens frequently suffer from the discrimination of judges and juries. The measure of justice to white persons is too often influenced by social or economic status. The most defenseless of our citizens are not always safe from brutality at the hands of police officers, many of whom are poorly chosen, poorly paid, and poorly trained. These failures of our democracy must be remedied if we are to supply the moral leadership demanded of us by our religious convictions and our world position. The remedy lies with us, in our own communities.

What? The conference earnestly examined the problems of our region, weighed our day-to-day practices against our democratic and spiritual ideals. The result? A program around which all conscientious Southern women can rally —a simple, workable plan of action for the Fellowship of the Concerned.

—And You? If you are willing to join with others to translate your religious convictions into everyday realties—

If you are concerned about injustice and inequality—

If you want to play your part in the building of a greater respect for the individual—

The program of action presented here needs your support, your energy, your determination to make it work. The responsibility is ours—yours and mine.

What We Can Do in Our Communities...

About the Law

√ Inform ourselves of the areas in our communities where law is not equally enforced, and work for corrective action.

√ Visit the courts and make our influence felt in the interest of equal justice for all.

√ Encourage better selection and training of policemen.

√ Work for appointment of Negro policemen.

√ Commend public officials when they show courage and integrity.

√ Call to the attention of authorities violations which are known to us.

√ Get in touch with the Southern Regional Council—63 Auburn Avenue, N. E., Atlanta, Georgia—when tension arises, and take all possible local action to prevent violence.

About the Vote

√ Do our part to see that opportunity for registration and voting is legally and actually secure for all.

√ Oppose state re-registration measures that threaten the security of any voters.

√ Uurge our county Democratic executive committees to train all workers in the proper performance of their duties.

√ Offer our services as election managers and clerks.

About Public Opinion

√ Affirm in personal relations and religious and civic work our conviction of the dignity of all human beings and the ideal of equal justice.

√ Support and encourage pastors who offer progressive leadership in the community.

√ Affiliate with other groups working for the same objectives.

√ Discuss problems with our newspaper editors; commend their good works; and urge the adoption of improved practices in the handling of racial news (as outlined in the Southern Regional Council pamphlet Race in the News).

√ Urge local schools to cooperate in using existing materials to build better human relations.

√ Begin, on however small a scale, an institute on race relations.

√ Endorse the Home Town Self-Survey as a means of self-education and constructive action.

Southern Church Women Draft Action Program

I AM concerned that our constitutional freedoms are not shared by all our people; my religion convinces me they must be and gives me courage to study, work, and lead others to the fulfillment of equal justice under the law. I will respond to calls from the Southern Regional Council to serve my faith and my community in the defense of justice.

With this pledge, 150 church women leaders from twelve Southern States concluded a two-day conference in Atlanta on "the spiritual approach to social issues." The delegates met September 8 and 9 at the call of the Southern Regional Council, in cooperation with church women's groups and the National Board of the YWCA. The meeting was inter-faith, inter-denominational, and inter-racial.

Guest speaker and participant in the conference was Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, who is presently serving as the United States delegate on the Human Rights Commission of the United Nations. She took part in the workshops Thursday, September 8, and addressed an audience of some 1,800 in the evening. Her subject was "The Declaration of Human Rights and the Community."

Individual Responsibility

Mrs. Roosevelt stressed the responsibility of the individual to work for a broader democracy at the community level. Citing her experiences as a delegate to the United Nations, she declared that every failure of democracy in the nation weakens us in the eyes of the people of the world.

"The economic and military leadership of the United States," she said, "is unquestioned. But we have not yet succeeded in giving the world the moral and spiritual leadership which it so desperately needs."

During the workshop session, Mrs. Roosevelt strongly endorsed the suggestion of Mrs. M. E. Tilly that church women visit the courts and make their influence felt in the interest of equal justice. "I miss my guess," she said, "if you do not find a lot of things that will surprise you."

The conference opened Thursday morning with a keynote address by Mr. Paul D. Williams, president of the Southern Regional Council.

"It is important," he told the conference, "that we ponder our spiritual heritage, for there are many people in the world and in our own country who think otherwise. . . . In a sense there are no such things as Catholic rights, or Protestant rights, or Jewish rights—or, for that matter, Mongolian rights, or Negro rights, or Caucasian rights. There are only human rights . . ."

Speakers and Workshops

In the course of the morning, the church women heard Dr. W. J. Faulkner, dean of the chapel at Fisk University, on "The Spiritual Beginnings of Law"; Mr. Morris Abram, Atlanta attorney, on "Law and Morals"; and Mr. Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, on "County Government." The afternoon was devoted to workshop discussion of law enforcement, administration of justice, and "building a spirit of brotherhood" through the church, the press, and the schools.

The night meeting, held in the Wesley Memorial Church, was open to members and friends of the co-sponsoring organizations; the main auditorium, which seats 2,000, was filled almost to capacity. Mrs. Arthur J. Moore, of Atlanta, gave the invocation, and Mr. Williams introduced Mrs. Roosevelt. Following her speech, hundreds of the audience filed past to speak brieffly to her.

Friday morning the conferees held their concluding workshop session, at which a program of action for the home community was adopted. (See page 2.) Mrs. Lowry Hunt reported to the group on a self-survey now being carried out in Madison, Georgia, and urged the church women leaders to initiate similar self-studies in their own communities. Mrs. Irving Cohn, executive secretary of the New Orleans Committee on Race Relations, gave an account of the interracial Teachers Institute held annually in that city.

Dr. Hugh Brimm, executive secretary of the Social Service Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention, spoke on "The Church: Her Responsibility and Opportunity." A concluding address, "Courage for the Task," was given by Dr. Faulkner. His words summed up the spirit of the entire conference.

"Today," he declared, "we have seen the vision of a new Southland. But we must remind ourselves that for every bit of progress in human relations a price must be paid. Those of us here today will have to pay that price."

Concern

Bu they are not heart-sick for the ruin of Joseph. Therefore they shall soon go into exile, at the head of the exiles.

Amos 6:6, 7*a*

Conviction

The spirit of the Lord is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captive, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound.

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

63 Auburn Avenue, N. E. Atlanta 3, Georgia

Leaders throughout the state of Georgia have spoken out against the recent ruling of the Georgia Board of Education banning forever any teacher who is a member or is in any way affiliated with the NAACP.

In statements to the Georgia Committee for Interracial Cooperation, six prominent men in the state branded the ruling as wrong. The men include Hamilton Lokey, representative from Fulton County; Dr. George E. Clary, executive secretary of the Southeastern Jurisdictional Council of the Methodist Church; Frank W. Spence, member of the Savannah Board of Education; William C. Turpin, Macon lawyer; T. F. Callaway, former president of the Georgia Baptist Convention; Willis A. Sutton, former superintendent of Atlanta schools; and the Rev. C. DeWitt Matthews, pastor of the Vineville Baptist Church, Macon.

Excerpts from the statements are:

Hamilton Lokey: "The resolution of the State Board of Education barring members of the NAACP from teaching in Georgia 'forever' is both wrong in principle and futile in purpose. But the greatest tragedy of all seems to the fear of thinking people to speak out against the action. The authors of the resolution know it is wrong, both morally and legally. There can never be sufficient justification for an action which would destroy the basic freedoms and liberties upon which this action is wrong, but we all seem to be affaid that we will be branded as 'brainwashed leftists' if we speak up. It is never wrong to speak up for right. It is never wrong to stand for principle, for law and order, for equal justice under law.

Dr. Clary: "Any effort on the part of whites to pass laws that will bypass the action of the Supreme Court is I believe doomed to certain failure. The Negro is not going to remain as a second class citizen in this day of enlightment... If the two groups will face the matter in the spirit of mutual respect and on the basis of what is best for all concerned it can and will be worked out."

Frank Spencer: "(The) recent pronouncements of the State Board of Education ... are indeed a source of danger to the welfare of our citizens.

"America's faith and vision in protecting the rights of its citizens has been acclaimed by people of all nations. Intolerance and other indignities perpetrated upon American citizens regardless of race or creed merit vigorous resistance by men and women of good will and understanding."

William Turpin: "I feel that the actions referred to (the board ruling) will be promptly stricken down by the courts, and I am heartened by the feeling of resentment which these actions have aroused over Georgia... I feel it safe to say that any person who values his civil liberty must be disturbed by any such attempt to limit freedom of thought."

T. F. Callaway: "The recent action of the Georgia Board of Education and the state Attorney General making membership in that organization (NAACP) to mean the forfeiture of the right to teach in our public schools is a clear violation of their constitutional privilege... The proposed plan is unfair, unAmerican, undemocratic and unChristian."

Willis Sutton: "I can't think of anything worse than the recent action of the state board. The state of Georgia is supposed to be a democracy, and our public schools are the essence of democracy."

Rev. Matthews: "It is time ... that thinking people who love liberty of conscience and freedom of expression repudiate the emotional and frantic effort of the State Board of Education and the Attorney General to 'keep Georgians in line' by their unAmerican threat to Georgia Teachers' job security. Americans still cherish freedom of thought and are not ready to surrender this sacred right."

VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION
Under Public Law 565-1954

Vocational rehabilitation is a service provided jointly by the State and Federal Government to conserve the greatest of all assets--the working usefulness of human beings. This service is comparable to Public Education, Public Health and other activities for the Welfare of the people. Employment is always the aim of Vocational Rehabilitation.

SERVICES PROVIDED TO RESTORE WORK ABILITY

Medical, psychological and vocational diagnosis to determine the extent of the applicant's disability, and his mental and vocational limitations.

Counsel and guidance to help the disabled person attain the right job objective.

Physical restoration, medical, surgical, psychiatric and hospital care, and work therapy, to correct to reduce the disability.

Artificial appliances--limbs, braces, hearing aids, and other devices, to increase work ability.

Training, in schools, colleges, on-the-job, by tutors or correspondence, in preparation for the right job.

Transportation and maintenance during treatment or training, in needed.

Tools and equipment, if needed, to give the disabled person a fair start.

Placement in a suitable job, and follow-up to make sure he is safely and satisfactorily employed.

MENTAL AND EMOTIONAL

Studies show mental illness is the most prevalent disability among our people. The cost of care and treatment of the mentally ill is a heavy drain upon public financial resources, and the families of patients.

MENTALLY RETARDED

With financial assistance provided through a Federal grant, a three-year project was undertaken. The primary objectives were: (1) the development of better techniques for evaluating the vocational potential of mentally retarded persons; (2) the development of facilities for training and job preparation; and (3) the provision of necessary Vocational Rehabilitation services to a larger number of mentally retarded persons.

The Division has cooperated with local communities in establishing workshops for training thse clients in Atlanta and Savannah. It also works with local school systems in programs for "exceptional children."

The number of mentally retarded rehabilitated into jobs increased from 37 in 1958-59 to 83 in 1959-60.

EPILEPTICS TRAINING

In providing training for eligible clients, the Division utilizes the services and facilities of public and private institutions: universities, colleges, trade schools, and commercial schools in the communities.

Last year (1959-60) 867 were enrolled in universities and colleges. At the same time, 1,236 were in training in other educational institutions and establishments. Among those rehabilitated, 884 had their major vocational training as follows:

Colleges and Universities	267
Business and other specialized college or school	192
Trade Schools	265
Sheltered workshops	10
On-the-job	75
Other	75
Total	884

OASI DISABILITY DETERMINATIONS

To qualify for disability insurance benefits, a worker must be so seriously disabled that he is "unable to engage in any substantial gainful activity."

In addition, he must have worked under Social Security for at least five years out of the ten years before he became disabled.

YOUR OPPORTUNITY FOR JOB TRAINING

Who can get training?

Unemployed and underemployed persons who can qualify for training and who cannot expect to get full-time employment without training.

Unemployed youth 16 years of age or older.

What kind of training will be given?

Vocational courses in schools
On-the-job training
A combination of vocational and on-the-job training.

Do trainees pay for training courses?

No.

Will trainees receive any money from the government?

Yes, in certain instances, as follows:

1. Unemployed heads of families or heads of households who have had at least 3 years of gainful employment

2. Unemployed youths over 19 but under 22 years of age who do not qualify for regular training allowances--if allowances are necessary to provide occupational training.

3. To continue to receive allowances, trainees must have a satisfactory attendance records and make satisfactory progress

4. An individual may not receive a training allowance for more than 52 weeks.

How much allowance does a trainee eligible for such benefits receive?

In case of an unemployed youth over 19 but under 22 years of age who does not qualify for a regular training allowance, no more than $20 a week.

For trainees to live away from home, subsistence payments not to exceed $5 a day, and transportation, not more than 10 cents a mile.

It is expected that courses will be given in vocational training facilities already established, in public schools and colleges, and in facilities provided by employers, trade associations, labor organizations, and other industrial and community groups cooperating in the on-the-job training program.

EMPLOYMENT SECURITY LAW

Benefit Eligibility Conditions - Section 4

54-609. An unemployed individual shall be eligible to receive benefits with respect to any week only if the Commissioner finds that:

(a) He has registered for work at and thereafter has continued to report at an employment office in accordance with such regulations as the Commissioner may prescribe, except that the Commissioner may, by regulation, waive or alter either or both the requirements of this subsection as to such types of cases or situations with respect to which he finds that compliance with such requirements would be oppresive or would be inconsistent with the purposes of this Act.

(b) He has, while unemployed or while employed less than full-time during a regular work week if his deductibe earnings (any amount over $8) do not equal or exceed his weekly benefit amount, made a claim for benefits in accordance with the provisions of Section 6 (a) of this Act. (This provision as amended, shall be effective Julyl, 1960.)

(c) He is able to work, and is available for work, and has actively and in good faith sought employment, and is actively and in good faith seeking employment, and is bona fide in the labor market...

EDUCATION

"Future Teacher Scholarships - The best and brightest note in the teacher picture in Georgia is that young Georgians with the finest minds and a talent for teaching may now apply for state future teacher scholarships that can go as high as $5,000 and do not have to be repaid -- not a single dime of it -- by those who will teach in Georgia. This program is putting more and more brains in Georgia classrooms, has given students a new respect for the teaching profession. Future Teacher Scholarship holders are often the outstanding students on Georgia campuses, are graduating with honors, are being chosen campus leaders. We need this kind of mind and personality in Georgia classrooms. No money that the state invests is paying richer dividends than this program. We now have 750 bright young Georgians in college on these scholarships, would like to have 1,000, with 250 going in each September, 250 coming out to teach in Georgia classrooms."

— May,1963, Bulletin of the Department of Education

Both Federal and State unite in providing scholarship funds for the study of medicine and nursing.

NOTE: This is a listing of the folders which I have found helpful and necessary to finding things in my approximately year and a half's employment at SRC. I list them in this manner so that anyone who comes in will at least be able to tell what folders are available and, in due course, use them as an initial aid in some sort of standardization of the central office files.

MEMORANDUM January 6, 1959

To: Members of the Board

From: Harold C. Fleming
Executive Director

Re: NEW FINANCIAL SUPPORT FOR SRC AND STATE COUNCILS.

As the New Year begins, I am glad to be able to report a substantial contribution to our work that was as unanticipated as it was generous. An individual donor who prefers to remain anonymous has contributed the following amounts for the purposes indicated:

$25,000 to be distributed among the State Councils on Human Relations associated with SRC. The specified division of these funds is generally proportionate to the allocations of SRC aid approved by the Annual Meeting. This amount, added to that budgeted by SRC from its general funds, totals $60,000 aid to state groups in 1959.

$50,000 toward support of SRC's research and information activities for two years (that is, $25,000 annually for 1959 and 1960).

$20,000 for support of SRC's Consultant Service Program during 1959.

This opportunity arose and had to be acted on very suddenly. However, the staff discussed this request by telephone with the President and other members of the Executive Committee who were immediately available. Also, you will note that each of the activities assisted was a part of our planned program for 1959.

Since the donor is emphatic about the anonymity of this contribution, we are naturally treating the gift and its source as confidential.

All good wishes for the New Year.

Dear Mr. Fleming:

Due to additional responsibilities, your present account executive, Mr. Lamar Wise, has had to relinguish a portion of the accounts he regularly handles. He has asked me to service your account, and with your approval, I shall endeavor to help you in any way you desire.

I shall be looking forward to hearing from you in the near future.

Yours very truly,

SRC'S GENERAL OPERATIONS SUPPORT AND EFFORTS TO BROADEN THAT SUPPORT

Since the mid-fifties the Council has depended on a very small number of foundations for its central and on-going operation. The Field and New World Foundations have the longest record of consistent support and both continue an interest in the Council. In the late fifties Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Currier began contributing support which has been continued through the Taconic Foundation. The Rockefeller Brothers Fund has been a contributor for approximately ten years to projects and a contributor to general support for the pasttwo years. Beginning in 1960 the Rockefeller Foundation made a grant of $50,000 per year for five years. That support after considerable deliberation and concern on the part of the Foundation was renewed this year. The requested amount of $250,000 over a five year period was approved but altered for a six year period with a rather firm indication that such support would not be continued thereafter.

It is important to note here that the overwhelming majority of national foundations have been unwilling to support programs in race relations and civil rights. Most foundations have tended to limit their support related to these interests to Negro education. While there are now some indications of change, this remains essentially the case. The primary reason for a small number of foundations who support SRC is related to this fact and, of course, to the tendency for exclusive interest in projects.

In the past it has been out of the question that SRC could look for substantial support fromwithin the region. We had hoped this year for some change in that. That hope was encourage by a grant made by the Stern Family Fund last November. At that time we asked Stern for a grant of $20,000 for general operations. The Fund responded by making a grant of $10,000 contingent on these funds being matched in grants of $1,000 or more from any source from within the region. We had hoped to use these conditions as a means of encouraging southern foundation support. To date we have approached the three foundations where there was some indication a change of policy might be in the making. Two of these were in Atlanta,=one in North Carolina. The only results of a rather thorough effort has been that one foundation had invited us to become acquainted with their new executive in September with the hope that something might be forthcoming in the future. Since November the Executive Director of the Council has invested a substantial amount of time in attempting to raise these matching funds. His effort has been assisted by that of a Development Committee headed by a very vigorous chairman. The results to date are that we have raised three $1,000 contributions from individuals. (All of them members of the Council.) Approximately $2,000 in smaller contributions have resulted from this effort but do not fit the conditions of the grant. One corporation headquartered in South Carolina has made a contribution of $500 as a result of this. We are at this point very discouraged about the prospects of substantial support from southern sources. If possible, we are even more concerned about the renewed evidence of both the reluctance of southern philanthropy to engage in this sort of work and their interest in influencing policy and determining individuals who make policy.

(A comment should be made here, perhaps, about the possibility of relatively small contributions from a number of individuals. We have worked very hard to avoid getting into the area of individual solicitations. It is, of course, on operations like ours extremely time consuming and an expensive process. More importantly there have been a very limited number of individuals within the region who would or could contribute to this area of interest. We have felt it essential to leave such sources of support to the state Councils on Human Relations and to the predominantly Negro civil rights organizations. In fact, during the past ten years we have worked directly with the councils on Human Relations and indirectly with the other major organizations in increasing their support from these circumstances. This has had an incidental but extremely important benefit for the Council. It has removed us from competition and we feel it is essential that we keep it so.)

During the past six months the new Executive Director has given priority to finding new sources of support. Some of this attention has been directed still to national foundations and as a result of our regional efforts have still not come in. This has been more and more the case. He has found a cordial reception on the part of a number of foundations who have at least a pheripheral interest in our program. Such a foundatinn would be, for instance, the Carnegie Corporation. In each of these instances, we have, however, been generally stymied by the project orientation. In fact, the efforts to raise funds for general support have led to several contributions in the area of approximately $25,000 each for special projects which are welcomed but which still do not relieve the general operations needs. In several other instances we have been invited to return with another application.project oriented and more in keeping with the interests of the foundation concern. There is among the foundations we have approached a particular interest in the field of education, in its traditional sense, and we have had to resist some pressure to go into a more traditional educational area. We have done this because we feel others have an experience of a tradition in those areas and are the logical groups to carry out this work and because we feel the Council has experience and interest that is unique that should be preserved.

The five foundations listed at the beginning of this report are understandably reluctant to continue indefinitely and exclusively to support the Council. They, too, want to place more of their funds with special identifiable projects if they continue to support the Council. We have every sympathy with this and I am certain would be of exactly the same position if we served on the Boards of those foundations. It remains critical, therefore, that we continue to see the interests of national foundations and while we shall continue to invest considerable time in cultivating southern sources we have no reason to be optimistic about the results.

EXPLANATION OF ESTIMATES

II (1) Foundations. (Other than Fund for the Republic) $42,000

$7,000 from the Field Fund is assured for 1955.

The request to the Doris Duke Foundation for $20,000 is unanswered presently. It would seem reasonable to budget on the expectation of $10,000 from this source.

A request has gone to the Ford Foundation for a $10,000 grant to assist in the development of the central office's responsibility for foreign visitors.

It would seem possible with the assistance of the Treasurer and a Finance Committee to secure $15,000 from other Funds ($5,000 each estimated from smaller Foundations).

Thus, of the total of $42,000 from these sources, $35,000 would be regarded as a working objective.

(2) Organizations. $3,000

A. Labor (9-month actual contribution in 1954 - $2,750)

An effort should be made to build on the confidence of groups who have contributed in the past and to increase contributions from these sources by $250. $3,000 from these sources would seem to be a conservative estimate.

(3) Churches. $3,000 (9-month actual contribution in 1954 - $2,139)

See (2) above.

An effort should be made to increase contributions from these sources by $861 making the total objective from church sources $3,000.

(4) Sales of Literature. $9,000

A. New South $6,000

New South subscriptions (9-month actual contribution in 1954 - $434.38)

Although a large increase is estimated here it does not seem unreasonable if state organizations fulfill their obligation to obtain a subscription to New South from each member of state organizations. On an estimated basis of 300 subscriptions from each of ten states, the amount budgeted should be realized. Responsibility for promotion of New South is at present diffused. If promotion becomes the specific responsibility of particular staff it would seem possible to increase circulation of New South beyond this estimated amount. An increase of $6,000 based on a circulation of 3,000 therefore appears conservative. (This estimate is based upon New South in its present form.)

B. Other Literature $3,000 (9-month actual contributions in 1954 - $2,754)

Sales during 1954 have not been completely analyzed, but probably came from Questions and Answers and Answers for Action. The amount from sales of Answers for Action can probably be increased by $246. Sales of other SRC publications will probably add to this estimate. A $3,000 income from this source would seem reasonable, provided staff members of state organizations promote the sale of SRC pamphlets in their program, and if other salable pamphlets are produced.

(5) Individual Contributions. $3,000 (9-month actual contribution in 1954 - $1,490)

This figure does not include SRC memberships which during 1955 would revert to state organizations. It is proposed that the amount from this source be raised as follows:

A. It should be possible to secure a $10 contribution from each member of the corporation -- regular, ex-officio and officers. This would come to $740.

B. It is proposed that a special effort be made to secure $10 contributions from supporters of the SRC now living outside the region and from an especially developed list of "friends of the SRC," who do not become members of state organizations. It is thought that one-third (100) of these potential contributors would come from outside the region and that two-thirds (200) could be found in the Atlanta area, vice versa.

In order for this possibility to be realized it would have to become the designated responsibility of a member of the staff to develop. This effort, and that of promoting circulation of New South needs the particular attention of a staff member with public relations skills, and the assistance of an organized committee.

- - - - - - - - - -

On the basis of the above proposals it seems reasonable to think that the $33,522 which must be raised in order to fulfill the commitment implicit in the grant, can be exceeded by $20,218 (the $7,000 grant from Field is assured), or that it is possible with planning to raise from these sources during 1955, $60,740.

On this basis, it should be possible to proceed with plans for program development, on the basis of an expected income of $104,090. However, the realization of this objective requires an understanding on the part of the members of the Council of their share in the responsibility foreseen; and a definition of staff responsibility particularly as it relates to promotion and sale of New South and other literature produced by the SRC. The development of plans for the cultivation of potential $10 contributors -- both outside and in the region -- is also necessary to produce the indicated amount from this source. Unless plans are made and followed through it would be necessary to limit operational costs to approximately $68,000. This latter figure would need to be reduced, if there is a deficit at the end of 1954, as a result of less than estimated funds being raised during this period.

We further agreed that it would be well if there were at least three Finance Committees, or if the Finance Committee operated in three divisions: Atlanta area; Southwest; upper South.

For an Atlanta area committee we thought that the following would be suitable:

Board Members	Non-Board Members
Morris Abram	Edward M. Vinson (Businessman)
Rufus Clement	1974 Chelsea Circle
Leonard Haas	Atlanta, Georgia
Philip Hammer
B. E. Mays	George E. Goodwin (former newspaper man and civic leader)
L. D. Milton	930 Dean Drive, N. W.
J. M. Richards	Atlanta, Georgia
Morton Weiss
Josephine Wilkins

Morris Abram undertook to ask Ed Vinson to serve as Chairman of an Atlanta area Finance Committee, notwithstanding Vinson's unwillingness to be Treasurer of SRC.

Abram and I thought that the Atlanta area Finance Committee should be asked to meet with some regularity so as to build up an increasing understanding of the need and of the methods of raising funds. I will be responsible for trying to arrange such meetings after you get the membership of the Atlanta area Finance Committee to agree to be members of it.

Morris called Morton Weiss and asked Weiss to serve as Treasurer of SRC and Weiss said he would. In the course of the conversation, Morris indicated that the Treasurer of SRC would not have to be chairman of a Finance Committee, but the Treasurer would write letters in his own name and would assist the money-raising efforts. My recollection is that the choice of a Treasurer is in the hands of the Executive Committee, which is likely to be guided by advice given it by a subcommittee of Morris Abram, Josephine Wilkins, and Philip Hammer. I will be responsible for getting this subcommittee to make a recommendation to the next meeting of the Executive Committee in re Morton Weiss. It would have to be agreed that Morton Weiss could serve as Treasurer retroactive to March 2nd.

I don't know a great deal about Morton Weiss. He is vice-president, I believe, of Montag and Company, which is a large paper manufacturing concern here. He is a charming person and would make us an admirable Treasurer.

As a step toward activating a Southwestern area group, Morris proposed that he converse by phone with both Harry Ashmore and Hodding Carter, and ask each of those gentlemen to undertake to telephone or write to some scores of persons, asking those persons to contribute substantially -- say $100 -- to SRC. Subsequently, Abram talked by phone with Ashmore and with Carter. Each agreed to serve in this way.

As to Ashmore, the commitment is that he, Ashmore, must be supplied with lists of appropriate persons in Arkansas, northern Louisiana, Texas, and Oklahoma, and then he will be in touch with those on the lists. Some he will call and some he will write to. I asked Abram, in his conversation with Ashmore, to make an arrangement under which the telephone calls, if they appeared not to be rewarding, would desist at an early stage. (Ashmore being somewhat famous for originating lengthy long distance calls.)

Hodding Carter said that the situation in Mississippi is so agitated that nothing could be usefully done in that state, but that he, Carter would be happy to be in touch by phone or by letter with persons in Louisiana or in Tennessee.

The Ashmore-Carter enterprise will make us look at a problem we have. How do we relate person to person money-raising efforts of this kind to the efforts that our state people will be making, sometimes currently? I talked by telephone on this matter with Vigo in New Orleans, who adventitiously will be able today to talk personally with Sutherland from Texas. I asked them to confer and advise me tomorrow. My guess is that they will come out with a rule that persons thus asked to contribute will be told that half of what they give will go to their own state group and the other half will come to us centrally. But in any case, I think we cannot reach out over the heads of our state people with their full knowledge and approval. I would greatly value your view on this matter.

You are now, please, to write to each person that Abram and I agreed should be members of the Atlanta area Finance Committee, and ask those persons to serve on that Committee. The addresses of persons to be so invited are as given above.

I owe this morning's work entirely to Morris Abram's energy and warmth. I think you should write him especially.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell

L

SUGGESTED LIST OF PERSONS FOR $100 APPEAL

Here are 31 names off the top of my mind. This list can be expanded indefinitely. We will be gathering names.

Note: In making all calls, it would be wise, because of Harry's being in the newspaper business, to begin with publishers and ask each person in turn for his advice whether there is anyone else in town whom you should call. If certain community leaders, such as Jesse Jones or Bob Smith in Houston, Carter in Ft. Worth, Crossman or Hoblitzelle in Dallas, can be sold and will let their names be used, the local-merchant-type donor will fall in line.

Houston

John T. Jones, Publisher Houston Chronicle Houston, Texas Tel: Preston 2211	The young nephew of Jesse Jones; was in a concentration camp during the war. While he represents a very conservative empire in Houston, I believe he would be a natural for an appeal from the editor of the Arkansas Gazette and would come through. If he does this, you will have your appeal much stronger by mentioning his name to the other business men whom you call.
Jesse Jones	The banker and real estate tycoon of Houston. He has made large gifts to Negro scholarships. (If Uncle Jesse chips in, you only have to mention the fact to fill up the hat.)
R. E. (Bob) Smith Gulf Building Houston, Texas Tel: Capitol - 7258	One of the richest oil men in Texas, a Methodist and a Democrat who voted for Eisenhower. A good, liberal, democratic, individual who has a history of yeoman work in race relations. He sounds belligerent on the telephone but don't pay any attention to that. It means nothing.
Percy S. Strauss, Jr. Bankers Mortgage Building Houston, Texas Tel: Charter 4528	Mr. Strauss is a youngish heir of the Macy fortune in New York. He is a liberal Democrat, Jewish and a somewhat eccentric sportsman and explorer type interested in Houston art museum. He is an Adlai Stevenson man.
John H. Blaffer Commerce Building Houston, Texas Tel: Capitol 9885	A young heir to an oil fortune with an Eastern education and international background.

Mrs. Kenneth D. (Jane) Owen 300 Pinewolde Houston, Texas Tel: Monroe 57838	Jane Owen is the sister of John Blaffer, the victim of the finishing school, European travel and is a vulture for culture but she has a heart of gold and is sympathetic with race relations problem.
W. A. (Bill) Smith San Jacinto Building Houston, Texas Tel: Fairfax 721	He is from some place like Ohio and has made a fortune in construction business in Houston and gives away a lot of money. I don't know how he feels about race relations but he's a good-hearted fellow and it is worth a try.
Bill Williams 6515 Main Street Houston, Texas Tel: Justin 5296	The same type as Bill Smith except he made it in the restaurant business.
Felix Tijerina 904 Westheimer Houston, Texas	The same type as Bill Williams. The owner of a Mexican restaurant, a Mexican himself and with considerable interest in race relations.
Frank and George Frank Commerce Building Houston, Texas Tel: Preston 5234	Oil producers who contributed to liberal Democrats. Talk to both of them.
Bruno Bagnoli European Import Company 910 Preston Houston, Texas Tel: Preston 3191	An Italian importer married to a Syrian. Both of them hard-working. Both interested in race relations and all civic activities in Houston. Talk to Mrs. Bagnoli if you don't get Mr. Bagnoli. Also, tell them as in every other case some of the people in Houston who have contributed, such as Jesse Jones and/or Bob Smith.
George Kelley 910 Texas Houston, Texas Tel: Central 9346	A very wealthy, Greek restaurant owner who speaks broken English but who has a heart of gold. Will give to nearly anything, particularly if others are contributing.
George Strake Gulf Building Houston, Texas Tel: Preston 6294	A very wealthy oilman and a very big Catholic. He understands the importance of race relations. The question is whether he has confidence in the organization asking for money.
Mr. Sakowitz, pres. of Sakowitz Brothers 1111 Main Houston, Texas Tel: Blackstone 6441	A Jewish merchant and civic leader.

Fred or Maurice Lazarus Foley Brothers Houston, Texas Atwood 3652	Same as Sakowitz. Appointed to an Eisenhower Committee on Government Contracts.
Hobart Taylor Houston, Texas	A wealthy Negro owner of a taxicab company and a liberal Democrat.
Martin Burns (or Jim Smith) Steelworkers Union Union National Bank Building Houston, Texas	A burly, labor leader who will probably make the request to the Union.
Herman Brown Brown & Root, Inc. Houston, Texas	A conservative, individualistic construction man who has made a fortune and fights organized labor but gives generously to Negro causes though possibly would balk at social equality.
Will Clayton Houston, Texas	Cotton magnate and former Undersecretary of State. Loyal Democrat.
Mrs. Frankie Randolph Houston, Texas	Loyal Democrat. A power in liberal politics in Texas, and one of the heirs of the Kirby lumber fortune. Freely ask her advice about other persons to call.

Dallas

Jerome Crossman Republic Nat'l Bank Building Dallas, Texas Tel: Riverside 4901	A powerful, wealthy attorney; Eisenhower Democrat; sincere and effective in organizing Dallas "Main Street" behind better race relations. Can open up Dallas for you. You can speak freely with him.
Ross Forney Forney Engineering Company Dallas, Texas Tel: Dixon 9734	A young business leader.
Karl Hoblitzelle Majestic Theatre Building Dallas, Texas Tel: Prospect 8401	Owner of Interstate Theatres; for some unfathomed reason admirer of McCarthy and likewise of Negro people.

Austin

E. W. Jackson, Sr. Steck Company Austin, Texas Tel: 7-4411	President of Steck Publishing Company. Enlightened on race relations.
Fagan Dixon Littlefield Building Austin, Texas Tel: 60653	A liberal Democrat and attorney, married rich.
Mrs. W. St. John Garwood 2213 Windsor Road Austin, Texas Tel: 6-4465	Will Clayton's daughter and wife of an outstanding liberal judge.

Others

Amon Carter, Publisher Fort Worth, Texas Tel: Fortune 3201	Runs Fort Worth, owns Fort Worth Star Telegram, a mighty man of mighty impulses. He will open the door to Fort Worth if he takes a notion. Trouble is he might take a notion to shut it.
Mrs. H. E. Butt HEB Stores Corpus Christi, Texas	A good woman and former English teacher, married to scion of grocery empire. She gives generously to Mexican and other down-trodden. Harry couldn't miss here, if he will quote Wordsworth.
Tom Slick San Antonio, Texas	A young Yale man and Foundation man. Very enlightened; conservative politically. Has concentrated on philanthropy to science.
Dudley Dougherty Beeville, Texas	A young heir of oil fortune. A former legislator, candidate for Senate - not very liberal nor sane, they say, but enlightened in some respects. I'm not sure how he feels about race relations.

Prepared for Finance Committee Meeting,
May 3, 1955

TWELVE MONTHS FROM OCTOBER 1, 1955
THROUGH SEPTEMBER 30, 1956

Central Office Only

We currently spend about $7,000 per month Twelve months @ $7,000	$84,000
Allowance for special programs, Fellowship of the Concerned, Annual Meeting, etc.	4,000
TOTAL NEEDED, 12 MONTHS	$88,000
Toward raising this, we may conservatively expect to get from normal, non-foundation sources (see note 1 below)	$23,000
From foundations which frequently help us or may quite probably help us (note 2 below)	20,000
From Fund for the Republic (conditional upon our raising at least $55,000)	24,000
TOTAL	$67,000
Subtract this expectation from $88,000, and the shortfall is, which sum should be the goal of the Finance Committee	$21,000

Note 1. expectation from SNC normal sources

Individuals	$1,000
Board Members	3,000
Labor organizations	4,000
Churches	3,500
Associates' dues	750
New South	6,000
Sale of Literature	3,500
Honoraria	1,500
TOTAL	$23,350 or 23,000

Note 2.

Marshall Field	$5,000
Doris Duke	5,000
Ford Foundation	5,000
Small Family Fndtns	1,200
~~Wm. C.~~ Whitney Fndtn	1,500
Phelps-Stokes	2,000
TOTAL	$19,700 or 20,000

Parenthesis on Commitment to Fund for the Republic

They will pay 24,000 if we raise $55,000
Toward this $55,000 we can expect

Normal SHC	$23,000
Foundations	20,000
	$ 43,000

So that merely to meet the Fund for the Republic's condition, this committee must raise $12,000

And to keep SHC going much as is, a total of $21,000.

Mr. George Mitchell, Executive Director
Southern Regional Council, Inc.

Dear George:

I am sorry I could not get free to meet this afternoon with you, Mort Weiss and the others. I am afraid, however, I would have had to tell you that I do not quite see how I can serve as a member of the council's finance committee at this time. Despite the fact that I should be paying strict attention to learning what banking is all about, I have recently taken on a responsibility for the Chamber of Commerce that is going to take a lot of time and thought.

Perhaps during the campaign I can be of informal value. If so, I will surely try to help when I can.

Sincerely yours,

Geo

Dear Mr. Mitchell:

In response to your inquiry regarding the Seventh Edition of AMERICAN FOUNDATIONS AND THEIR FIELDS, may we say that an unprecedented number of responses from the foundations has caused the book to be delayed.

A small number of foundations have requested that we omit them. To them we have had to explain that we are omitting no information we obtained during our nationwide research.

But hundreds of foundations have sent information in addition to that which resulted from our study. For your benefit all these valuable facts are being incorporated into the foundation descriptions, even when the reply is so late as to necessitate a change in galley proof.

I hope you will bear with us in this paradoxical situation of rejoicing over the great increase in cooperation from foundations, and at the same time regretting the delay which results.

Sincerely yours,

Wilmer Shields Rich

P.S. we are enclosing a leaflet which describes the book and an order card indicating prepublication discounts still available.

I would point out to you an interesting item:

Irene Osborne's travel allotment is $4,000 — This is a special "one shot" service.

The travel allotment for the Assist. Dir for State Organization — a "regular" service is, as I remember $2,500 —

Yet the necessity of the latter service is paramount.

I wonder whether we have give sufficient consideration to what is important in Council work

Dear Mr. Freeman:

This is the request from the Southern Regional Council for renewal of aid from the Fund for the Republic for the fiscal year beginning October 1, 1955.

The letter of grant dated April 2, 1954, in referring to periods after the first eighteen months, reads:

> "The Fund will give consideration to requests for a grant in 1955-56 of not to exceed $150,000 and a grant in 1956-57 of not to exceed $110,000. There is no commitment or intention on the part of the Fund to support the program of the Council after September 30, 1957.

Our letter of March 15, 1954 envisioned a total sum available from the Fund for the Republic for the twelve months October 1, 1955-September 30, 1956 of $22,847.50 for the central office of SRC and $125,433 for aid to the state programs. We would hope that these figures, particularly the $22,847.50, will be rounded upward.

As to the financing of the state programs, we are content with the amount just set out. For the typical state, that means aid from the second year's grant of about $10,500 with about $3,500 to be raised by each state organization. The longer organized state groups should be able to raise the needed amount without too great strain. The newer ones, staffed within the last few months, will find it harder, but the Fund for the Republic has materially eased the task for them by the terms of your letter of May 25, 1955, enabling the carry-over to the state programs, under given restrictions, of some of the 1954-55 allocations for state programs unused (by reason of late starts with staff) in the current fiscal period. We feel satisfied that the twelve state organizations we have going will be able to continue as planned in the fiscal year 1955-56.

On the central office, we foresee problems, and ask for some further help, over and above that forecast in the original letter of grant.

The Southern Regional Council originally requested help from the Ford Foundation in May, 1951, after, of course, many months of careful preparation of the proposal. There seemed then to be time enough before any crisis-period would be upon the South to organize in advance twelve state movements, and get them in condition to carry corrective program when the anticipated strain of desegregation, in various forms, would be upon the South. Generous as was the grant from the Fund for the Republic, its actual date was April 1954, and the crucial decision of the U.S. Supreme Court on the matter of the public schools came in the next month. The grant perforce had to be trimmed to what seemed the smallest possible amount for getting state organizations going. Specifically, in an effort to flow into the states the maximum of funds for their needs, we agreed to a minimal central office, deemed by us, and I suppose by your own staff, but barely enough to let us go out and organize twelve state movements and give them safe administrative supervision from a central office in Atlanta. Proceeding in the terms of the 1951 request, we were hoping that such a minimal supervisory office would be enough.

In actual fact, history has telescoped the need for supervision of field organization and the need for rapid training of the field staffs in program looking toward desegregation. The two needs have run concurrently, and will do so for the second grant period, and to some degree probably for the third. Yet we in the central office have only sufficient funds for a routine administrative program, and cannot, under present circumstances, pay for the leadership, detailed insturction, and implementing guidance which the state orgaizations urgently need.

An obvious answer would be "if you need more, go out and raise it". We are committed already to raising by our own efforts, independent of the Fund for the Republic, $55,000 in the second grant period and that is quite as much as we can realistically undertake.

Dear Mr. Freeman,

JULIUS ROSENWALD FUND APPROPRIATION: 1946

Regular Account

February 22, 1946

Miss Dorothy A. Elvidge
Julius Rosenwald Fund
4901 Ellis Avenue
Chicago 15, Illinois

Dear Miss Elvidge:

Enclosed herewith is a copy of the audit of our regular account for the year 1945. You will note that a bank balance of $9,476.53 was brought forward on January 1, 1946. This was made possible because of the legacy of $9,375.46 which we received from the Estate of Esther Morton Smith during the year 1945 but held in reserve for 1946. Following the custom established by the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, on the basis of long experience, the Council has endeavored to carry over sufficient funds to cover expenses for the first month or two of the year, inasmuch as payments on appropriations usually are not received until later.

I am enclosing, also, a copy of the financial statement on our regular account for the month of January, showing a bank balance of $4,863.15 on February 1. This will take care of our needs for February, but there will be a very small balance at the close of the month. We shall greatly appreciate it, therefore, it we may have a payment on the Fund's appropriation toward our regular expenses for the current year.

Sincerely yours,

Emily H. Clay

Dear Miss Elvidge:

When I finally got around to looking up the old records, in order to prepare a statement showing the expenditures made from the balance held by the Commission on Interracial Cooperation on December 31, 1943, I discovered that we did not send you a copy of the final audit of that account for the period from January 1 to July 21, 1944. I am, therefore, enclosing a copy now. As stated in the letter from the auditor, all remaining assets and liabilities were transferred to the Southern Regional Council by a resolution passed at the last meeting of the Commission on February 16, 1944. In the audit you will find a detailed report of the expenditures.

I am very sorry that a copy of the audit was not mailed to you as soon as it was completed, and I regret, also, that there has been so much delay in replying to your letter requesting a statement of the expenditures.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Miss Clay: Sometime when you have a spare minute, I would appreciate it if you would mail me a brief statement showing the expenditures made from the balance held by the old Commission on Interracial Cooperation on December 31, 1943. The audit report as of that date showed various cash and accounts receivable on hand amounting to $2,284.88. I assume that the furniture and fixtures, valued in this report at $1,640.70, were turned over to the Southern Regional Council.

Dr. Edwin R. Embree, President
Julius Rosenwald Fund
4901 Ellis Avenue
Chicago 15, Illinois

Dear Dr. Embree:

This letter is a brief report on the activities and plans of the Southern Regional Council and a request for the renewal of the Julius Rosenwald Fund's appropriation to the Council.

Under separate cover I am sending some publications of the Council. I shall refer to some of these in the succeeding paragraphs.

At our Charter Meeting in February, 1944, the Council absorbed the Commission on Interracial Cooperation and set out to promote a broader and more vigorous program in behalf of human progress in the South. On account of the war, suitable personnel was exceedingly hard to find. Our small staff faced numerous demands on its services and was greatly overworked throughout the year. We inherited certain activities and good will from the Commission on Interracial Cooperation and we felt obliged to carry on as far as possible the worthwhile activities which we inherited. However, in spite of our various difficulties, we made considerable progress during 1944. For details of our activities during that year, let me refer you to Report of The Executive Directors 1944.

In the summer of 1945 our personnel situation began to improve considerably. A grant from the Julius Rosenwald Fund enabled us to employ Dr. George S. Mitchell to direct a special project in behalf of Negro veterans. We were also able to secure a very capable public relations man, Mr. Ray Warwick, who had had considerable experience in editorial and publicity work. Furthermore, we added two research assistants, one white and one colored, two field representatives on a part-time basis, and an office manager. We had felt increasingly the need of a full-time Associate Executive Director. Dr. Ira De A. Reid, who had given splendid service on a part-time basis since the formation of the Council, was unable to come with us full-time and suggested that we find a full-time person for this position. We finally obtained Dr. H. L. Trigg, who was President of Elizabeth City Teachers College in North Carolina. He began his duties as Associate Executive Director on January 1, 1946.

During 1945 our activities expanded considerably in spite of the small staff which we had during the first half of the year. Briefly, the major Council projects were as follows:

(1) Revitalizing the state interracial groups in the South. Ten of our thirteen states have interracial councils or committees. We felt that they had a function to perform, particularly as we approached the postwar period, and we have given them as much assistance as possible in conferences, advice and literature. Most of these groups have adopted formal affiliation agreements with SRC and some of them are in process of merging with SRC to become state divisions. This process will help tremendously in bringing our program down to state and local levels.

(2) Cooperation with numerous agencies working in the South. A detailed list of these agencies would be quite extensive. It includes, in addition to state and local interracial committees, such organizations as the Women's Division of the Methodist Church, the Urban League, the Y.W.C.A., the Y.M.C.A., the Boy Scouts of America, the U.S.O., the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, the American Association of University Women, etc. Let me add that when the Governor of Kentucky established a Commission for the Study of Negro Affairs, we were asked by the Chairman to advise the Commission in setting up its work. The Commission made its report several months ago, and its recommendations represent a new departure for Commissions of this sort in the South. Here let me refer you to the tear sheet from the Louisville Courier-Journal, summarizing the report of the Governor's Commission. The Chairman of the Governor's Commission is Chairman of our affiliate, the Kentucky Council on Interracial Cooperation, and he is vigorously pushing the legislative program recommended by the Governor's Commission.

(3) Conference on the South's Postwar Economy. The Council sponsored this conference in Atlanta on April 11-12, 1945. A group of experts presented various phases of the South's postwar problems and prospects. We feel that the conference helped to focus the attention of the South upon its postwar outlook. In this connection, please see our publication, The South - America's Opportunity Number One.

(4) Survey of Reconversion Problems. This brief survey was based on a sampling of families in twenty southern communities, including large cities, small cities, and rural areas. It covered such topics as migration, employment, acquisition of new skills, changes in the family situation, and plans of the interviewees for the reconversion period. The processing of the statistical data has been slow due to inadequate funds, but the results of the study will shortly be ready for release.

(5) Survey of Segregated Transportation in Atlanta. During the summer and fall of 1945 the Council made a spot study of transportation in Atlanta under the direction of Dr. Ira De A. Reid. The study included an examination of the laws and ordinances relating to separation in transportation and through observations on facilities, services and practices with respect to railways, railway terminals, interurban busses, street cars, city busses, taxicabs, and the municipal airport. Some very significant material was developed. The report has recently been completed and we are now at the point of attempting to get remedial action on the basis of the findings.

(6) Promotion of the use of Negro police in southern cities. We have continued this project which was begun by the Commission on Interracial Cooperation. We have had numerous occasions to advise officials and private citizens who are interested in extending the use of Negro police. We are making special efforts to promote the idea in Atlanta. In recent months, Norfolk, Virginia, Tampa, Florida, and Asheville, North Carolina, have instituted the use of Negro police. In every instance the informational material which we had circulated was a helpful factor.

(7) Veterans Service Project. Since Dr. George S. Mitchell has recently sent you a brief summary of this work, I shall not attempt to say anything further about it here except to say that it is a splendid project which is already making itself felt in the administration of veteran's services with respect to Negroes. It is, of course, being financed by a special grant, and, therefore, is not a part of the general budget of SRC.

(8) Informational services. Requests for information have reached such proportions that we really need a full-time person to handle them. Although the majority of the requests relate to factual information about the Negro or race relations, many of them deal with other matters. Apparently we are gradually becoming a clearing house for all sorts of informational material concerning the South.

(9) Publications. In response to popular demand, we have continued such Commission pamphlets as America's Tenth Man and Understanding our Neighbors. We have also printed or reprinted timely articles and leaflets for taking care of the numerous requests which we get for free material, particularly on the subject of race relations. The Southern Frontier has been replaced by New South, which is being published monthly. Once each quarter New South will be enlarged to give a larger coverage on some special problem. At the annual meeting of the Council in November, 1945, the Council adopted the policy of placing more emphasis upon literature suitable for mass distribution and broadening the coverage beyond the problem of race relations. For a brief report on the actions taken at the 1945 annual meeting of SRC, please see the December 1945 issue of The Southern Frontier.

During the present year we are continuing the above activities with the exception of (3), (4), and (5). In addition, our program includes the following projects:

(1) Survey of the Negro Community in Jacksonville, Florida. Several months ago a bi-racial committee at Jacksonville invited us to plan and supervise a survey there. During the past two months we have given considerable time to this work because we feel it has great possibilities for setting a pattern of self-examination by other communities. The Jacksonville Community Chest is financing the survey and most of the work is being done by local people under our supervision. The survey has the backing of prominent citizens of both races, including some of the City and County officials. Our recommendations will be very forthright and we have every reason to believe that the City and County will make an honest effort to act upon them. If this project is successful, as we believe it will be, we expect to be asked to repeat it in other communities. This means that we shall need more staff and more funds than we have had in the past.

(2) Expansion of SRC membership. We are committed to the development of a mass membership in the Council. At present, we have 1,000 members. We have just launched a promotional campaign which we hope will bring in some 3,000 to 5,000 members by the end of the year. This will not only give us more effectiveness in promoting our program, but will mean that members and contributors assume an increasing share in the financial support of the Council.

(3) Establishment of State Divisions of SRC. Two State Interracial Councils, Florida and Mississippi, have already voted to merge with SRC. State units will also be established during 1946 in Louisiana, Arkansas and Tennessee, and perhaps one or two other states. More and more these state groups are seeing the advantage of being an integral part of SRC, and it goes without saying that such an arrangement will enable us to promote our work more effectively on the state and local levels.

(4) Police administration. As soon as possible we want to get a qualified person to make a brief survey of police systems in selected southern cities with particular reference to the quality of police personnel and its relation to the treatment of Negroes. This is a vital work which we would have undertaken long ago if we had had the personnel and money to support it.

(5) Work with public officials. This is closely related to Number (4). Here, however, we had in mind the establishment of closer working contacts with the Conference of Southern Governors, the various Associations of Peace Officers, and with individual public officials such as Mayors and Police Chiefs. The general idea is to try to bring these people to a better understanding of the causes of racial tension and to help them work out techniques for preventing tensions and for handling outbreaks in the wisest possible way. In this connection, let me add that we have already made an investigation of the riot at Columbia, Tennessee, and we are exploring ways of bringing certain lessons from that experience to the attention of public officials in the South.

We have now reached the point where we see more clearly than ever the great opportunity for the Council in education, coordination and stimulation of progressive action in the South. We believe that we can take pride in the beginning that we have made in the past two years, but we are by no means satisfied with what we have done. We have reached the crucial point where we either stand still more or less or expand our activities in such a way as to exploit the opportunity which faces us. Our greatest need now is for additional funds which will enable us to employ the personnel which we need so badly. We can anticipate a substantial increase perhaps as much as $10,000 to $15,000 in the amount given by members and contributors during 1946, provided we can put a suitable man in the field to build up our financial support in the South. We are negotiating with a man who qualifies splendidly, but we shall not be able to employ him unless our general budget situation has first improved, therefore, we must rely for a while yet upon foundation support so that we can not only carry on what we have begun, but expand it to the point that the South itself is convinced that it should support the work of the Council.

To this end, I want to request that the Julius Rosenwald Fund grant to the Southern Regional Council at least $32,500, which is the amount contributed by the Fund during 1945, and that the Fund increase this amount if possible to a total of $50,000. The larger appropriation, together with the anticipated increase in income from our members will enable us to do some of the new things that we feel must be done. I am sure that this request has enthusiastic support of our President, Mr. Paul D. Williams, our past President, Dr. Howard W. Odum, our Finance Committee Chairman, Dr. Will W. Alexander, and our Executive Committee Chairman, Dr. Charles S. Johnson.

Miss Clay is sending Miss Elvidge the finance statement which she requested. As you will see from the financial statement, the Council will need approximately $50,000 from new funds in order to carry on the activities projected for 1946.

With appreciation for the assistance of the Julius Rosenwald Fund and for your continuing personal interest in our work, I am

Cordially yours,

Dear Miss Elvidge:

In accordance with your letter of February 25 and our telephone conversation of the following day, I am sending you herewith a statement showing (1) our anticipated income for 1946, (2) our operating expenses on the basis of the present staff, and (3) the estimated needs for the enlarged program for the year 1946. As you will see, it will be necessary for us to find approximately $30,000 in new funds if we are to carry out the program which has been planned for this year.

By this same mail Dr. Guy Johnson is sending to Mr. Embree a letter in which he is reviewing past activities of the Council and outlining plans for 1946.

We hope that our request for continued support from the Julius Rosenwald Fund will receive early and favorable action.

Cordially yours,

Dear Miss Clay: Thank you for your letter of February 22 to which was attached a copy of the audit report of the Southern Regional Council for the calendar year 1945.

I note your request for a first payment for 1946. No funds have been approved by our Trustees for this calendar year. All of the appropriations made to the general budget of the Southern Regional Council have been paid in full. As you know, Mr. Embree has been away on the West Coast all of the past month and I have not had an opportunity to discuss with him the various appropriation requests which will be included in our docket for the Spring meeting of our Board of Trustees. If the Southern Regional Council will be one of them, it might be well for you to send me promptly a statement of your estimated expenditures for 1946 and what funds have been received or pledged toward these expenses.

Dear Dr. Will:

Thank you for your letter of November 6, containing your advice concerning our financial situation. We appreciate your suggestions very much.

I am terribly sorry that your engagement at Grand Rapids, Michigan, prevented your being with us on the occasion of our annual meeting. The meeting was by far the best we have ever had and I am sure it would have done your heart good. Still better perhaps was the two-day conference of Council Fellows. They are a swell bunch of Fellows and all of us profited a great deal by this opportunity to get together and discuss our problems. It would be a shame not to repeat the conference next year, so we are hoping that the General Education Board will be willing to renew the special grant which made this conference possible.

Aren't you coming to Atlanta sometime soon on business? If so, why not spend a day with us here at the Council? Our Finance Committee needs some new blood and needs to have a good meeting. Paul Williams was authorized to get the committee going again so it may be that we could hold a special meeting the next time you are here.

It does not seem the same here without Miss Clay. Friday was her last day and we sent her off with a little surprise party here at headquarters. I envy her the peaceful life she is going to have in Florida but it is going to be hard to get used to doing without her here at the Council.

Greetings and best wishes from all of us.

My dear Guy: I held your letter of October 28 until I could have a chance to think about it. I think it would be inadvisable to ask the Rosenwald Fund Trustees to make up a deficit. They have already given generously to the budget for the year and have been the major support of the Council. I have the following suggestions:

(1) Cut your expenses to the end of the year to the bone.

(2) Raise everything you can raise from new sources and

(3) Ask the General Education Board to advance what you require to meet your deficit between now and the first of the year. Make that request when you know what the deficit will be.

I do not think it would be wise to approach the Carnegie Corporation to help with the deficit. I am sure they would not do it.

With best wishes,

Sincerely yours,

W. W. A.

Dear Dr. Will:

Thank you for your letter which arrived day before yesterday. I am terribly sorry that an apparent uncertainty concerning the future leadership here has caused certain complications.

Here is the picture in a nutshell -- a rather large nutshell, perhaps. When Dr. Odum asked me late in August if I could return to the University of North Carolina on January 1, I told him that I was ready to say that I wanted to return but that January 1 was not suitable to me because I had just leased my house again in Chapel Hill for another year. We discussed the matter again a little later. I preferred September, but he was pressing me, for various reasons, to come earlier than that. On November 8 I told him that I would try to come in the spring term if I could work out the matter of housing. I was trying to get my new renter to say that he would release my house before his lease expired in August, but he delayed in replying. With the annual meeting only a few days off, I was in a real quandary. Remembering the inconveniences to me and my family in 1944 when it took eight months for me to obtain a house in Atlanta, I did not want to get into a similar situation on returning to Chapel Hill. At the same time, I realized that various rumors were afloat concerning my impending departure from the Council, so it seemed only fair that I lay the matter before the Executive Committee. On November 11 I told the administrative staff about it, and they agreed that it would be wise to tell the Executive Committee about the status of my plans. This I did on the following day. I told the Committee that I knew that I would not leave before the first of March and that I was trying to work out a later date with the University for personal reasons. They could take this as a resignation, with the effective date to be given shortly, or as notice that a resignation would be submitted as soon as my plans were completed. The Committee voted to receive it as information which would be passed on to the Board and to the members and to recommend my reelection as Executive Director, with the understanding that my resignation would be received later.

Shortly afterward I learned from my new lessee that he was not willing to give up my house until next August. I have recently talked further with Dr. Odum and with Dr. Gordon Blackwell, Director of the Institute for Research in Social Science at the University of North Carolina, and early this week it was agreed that I would return to the University in September. A formal exchange of letters will take place between Chancellor House and myself within a few days, and I shall shortly notify the President and Executive Committee of SRC of my formal resignation, effective as of September 1, 1947.

Thus, while there has been a bit of uncertainty, due to my desire to avoid getting myself into a housing difficulty at Chapel Hill, it has now been cleared up. Furthermore, the Council is fully cognizant of the situation and has approved the recommendations of the Executive Committee. In other words, I have been reelected as Executive Director and will serve until my resignation becomes effective in September. I hope that this clears up the questions that were in your mind.

Needless to say, I shall carry on without any let-up until the day I leave the Council. With plenty of time in which to consider the matter of my successor, the Executive Committee should be able to find a Director who will be suitable in every way. Under the Council by-laws, the Executive Committee is empowered to select the Director, on recommendation of a special committee appointed to study the matter.

With highest regards and with best wishes for a happy and restful Christmas season,

Dear Mr. Johnson: I have your letters of December 12 and 16. I can understand the considerations that lead to your return to the University of North Carolina. I assume that you will continue your active interest in the Southern Regional Council. The University of North Carolina is so strong a center that you will doubtless find yourself continuing many of the same interests you have had on the Council, even though your daily activities may be more concerned with research and teaching than with the action phases of the program.

In view of the pending changes in the administration of the Council, I imagine the Fund and other potential donors may wish to delay action on their further gifts until this is determined. At any rate, you can count on our continued deep interest. I presume Dr. Alexander and Dr. Johnson will be in immediate touch with developments and they, in turn, can keep us informed.

My best wishes to you whatever the base of your work and my greetings at this Christmas Season.

Dear Dr. Embree:

In my letter the other day I neglected to tell you that I am planning to give up my position with the Southern Regional Council. At the meetings of our Board of Directors and of our members on November 12-13 I made the following announcement, in substance:

> I have decided that I shall return to the University of North Carolina sometime during 1947. The final decision is so recent that certain details remain to be worked out, but I have discussed this matter with our Executive Committee and they agree that it is only fair that you know about it now. As soon as the details are arranged, I shall submit a formal resignation.
> I realize that it may take some time to line up another Executive Director and I shall try to arrange with the University of North Carolina a certain amount of flexibility in the time of my leaving the Council, so that there will be no lack of continuity in the executive work.

Our Executive Committee will shortly take up the matter of choosing my successor. I am sure that a suitable person will be found and that the work of the Council will go on with renewed vigor and without serious interruption on account of the change.

My dear Guy: In a recent talk with Odum, he indicated that he expected you to return to Chapel Hill in January. My last talk with him was during the Thanksgiving holidays.

Soon after this, I saw Paul Williams and concluded from my talk with him that as far as he knew, the matter was still in a state of indecision. He said that there was a prospect of your going back to Chapel Hill at some time but did not seem clear as to when.

As you know, the appropriation of the Rosenwald Fund for the Southern Regional Council covered a three-year period which expires at the end of this month. It would not be wise for me to go to the Trustees for an appropriation covering an additional period of years with the leadership of the Council in a state of uncertainty. Nor would it be possible to ask them to make an appropriation covering a short period, or an indefinite period, pending the final settlement of the future leadership of the Council. I am, therefore, not taking up with the Trustees the matter of further appropriations and shall not do so until the question indicated above is settled. I am sure that under the circumstances our Trustees would not act favorably. I thought you and the others ought to know this. I am sending a copy of this letter to both Mr. Williams and Doctor Odum. I shall be glad to have word when definite decisions have been reached.

Sincerely,

Will W. Alexander

Dear Dr. Embree:

The Southern Regional Council is closing another successful year of operation. The meetings of our Board of Directors, our members, and our Honorary Fellows, which were held on November 12, 13, 14 and 15, were characterized by unity and enthusiasm. Reports on the year's work are being published in the December issue of New South, which will be off the press in about two weeks. Shortly after January 1 we shall send you a financial report for the calendar year 1946.

During the present year we have expanded our work as much as our resources could permit. Our total expenditures for the year, exclusive of the veterans project, will be about $62,000. We shall have a deficit of $1,000 to $1,200. Dr. Will Alexander, Chairman of our Finance Committee, will be in Atlanta next week and will go over our financial situation with us. We shall probably borrow the amount needed to take care of our December 31 payroll.

We trust that the Julius Rosenwald Fund will continue its appropriation to the Council in 1947 and we hope that a portion of the grant can be made available early in January.

In order to expand our program for 1947, with special emphasis on the improvement of police methods and the prevention of lynching in the South, we have set up a proposed budget of $92,000, which is an increase of $30,000 over the 1946 budget. We believe that we can count on an increase of $10,000 in our income from members and other non-foundation sources, and we are hopeful that the Rosenwald Fund and the General Education Board will be willing to increase their grants sufficiently to make up the remainder of our expanded budget.

I am glad to record that the amount of our income from non-foundation sources has steadily increased. In 1944 such income was about 5% of the total. This year it is more than 25% of the total.

With deep appreciation for the support of the Julius Rosenwald Fund which has helped to make our work possible, and with all good wishes,

Cordially yours,

Dear Dr. Embree:

Thank you for your letter of December 18. I trust that you have had as restful and peaceful a Christmas Season as I have.

As I wrote Dr. Alexander last week, the University of North Carolina has agreed to a date for my return which I preferred all along, namely, September 1, 1947. Consequently I shall be here as Executive Director for the better part of 1947 and our Executive Committee will have ample time to choose a suitable person to succeed me. The Committee will go into this matter next month. If by any chance the right person is not available by September 1, I shall ask the University to release me and shall stay here until satisfactory arrangements have been made.

I hope that this will clear up any uncertainty concerning the administrative leadership of the Council for the coming year, at least. I should hate terribly to see the financial support of the Council jeopardized.

The decision to return to Chapel Hill was a tough one for me. I love the Council, and I am proud to have had a part in developing it into an effective and respected organization, but I have always felt that someone else could be found who could do the job so much better that it would not be fair for me to hold on here indefinitely. On the selfish side, I think I'll live longer at Chapel Hill and perhaps make a better contribution through teaching and research. Wherever I am, the work of the Council will lie close to my heart and will always have my cooperation.

I am enclosing a copy of our proposed budget for 1947 and a copy of an audit which was made on October 31, 1946. In January I shall send a copy of our auditor's report for the entire year, 1946.

February 19, 1947

MEMORANDUM TO: Mrs. Inez B. Tillison

FROM : George S. Mitchell

I received today check number 806 on the Citizens Trust Company from the Atlanta University School of Social Work in the sum of $200.00 as payment for teaching done by me at Atlanta University during the period October 30-January 22, 1946-47.

All of this teaching was done within the office day of SRC.

I paid $80.00 to Joseph Shabsees who taught the class for me four times. I paid $20.00 to Charles Mathias who taught it for me once. My own expenses in getting to and from classes were approximately $2.25. From the balance of $100.00 after payment of Shabses and Mathias, I deducted my expense leaving the sum of $97.75.

This I consider as due the Council, Veterans Services Division. Herewith, check in that amount.

Dear Miss Elvidge:

Thank you very much for your letter of May 27th informing us of the action of the Julius Rosenwald Fund in appropriating the sum of $50,000 to the Southern Regional Council toward its budget for the calendar years 1848 and 1949.

We are deeply grateful for the continuing interest and support of the Julius Rosenwald Fund.

Dear Doctor Mitchell: I take pleasure in reporting that, at a meeting of the Trustees of the Julius Rosenwald Fund held May 24, 1947, the following resolution was approved:

RESOLVED That the sum of Fifty thousand dollars ($50,000) be and it is hereby appropriated to the Southern Regional Council, it being understood that $25,000 shall be paid for each of the calendar years, 1948 and 1949.

It is customary for us to make payment on appropriations of this kind in quarterly installments, and I shall see that the first quarterly payment for 1948 is mailed early in January.

Very truly yours,

Dorothy A. Elvidge

Dear Mrs. McKoy: I am sorry that what may be my final letter to the Southern Regional Council has to start off with an apology. In my letter of April 14, I said that we had sent you a payment of $3,500 for the veterans service division in February. Unfortunately, I looked at the wrong place on the voucher. It was an appropriation of $3,500, but the payment on it was $1,500. I am sorry I put you to the trouble of checking through your records for a mythical $2,000.

Thanks so much for forwarding the copy of your audit report for December 31, 1947. Since our files will be stored away soon after the first of July, this will be the last report which we shall need from you.

Very truly yours,

Dear Miss Elvidge:

We are very happy, at long last, to be able to forward to you for your files a copy of our official 1947 audit. This audit is as complete as we, and the auditor, knew how to make it, reflecting every aspect of the Council's fiscal operations and its actual financial condition at the close of the year.

In regard to the question in your letter of April 14th about the extra $2,000 for the Veteran's Service Division, we are all greatly puzzled over this and have made a diligent search of our books and other records to see if we can clear it up. For whatever light they may throw, I am listing below all receipts from the Julius Rosenwald Fund for both the Southern Regional Council and the Veteran's Service Division as they appear in our daily cash book through May 1947.

Southern Regional Council:

March 4,	$ 1,000	(Special Fund-Josephine Wilkins, Treasurer)
March 10	$17,500	($12,500 on regular $25,000 appropriation; $5,000 on special $10,000 appropriation)
April 7	$ 1,000	(Special Fund- Josephine Wilkins, Treasurer)
May 29	$ 1,000	(Special Fund-Josephine Wilkins, Treasurer)

Veterans Service Division:

January 27,	$ 2,000
February 17	$ 1,500

Since we can find no extra payemnt of $2,000 to the Veteran's Service Division in 1947, we are wondering whether the March 4th and April 7th payments of $1,000 each to the Special Fund, of which Josephine Wilkins was treasurer, may not be the ones you had in mind? This possibility would seem to be borne out by your letter of February 17th, 1947, addressed to Dr. Mitchell, in which you say: "The enclosed check for $1,500 represents final payment on our appropriation of $3,500 for work in connection with returning veterans."

Please let us hear from you further if the information I have given does not clear this matter up. We shall be glad to send you copies of correspondence, bank deposit slips, or anything else you may need, if they will help.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. Mitchell: I have before me your letter of March 12 to which was attached statements for 1947 which will be replaced later when minor changes have been made in this audit report. I have one question to raise in connection with the figures as submitted. The schedule of receipts and disbursements of the Veterans Service Division for the period from January 1 to May 9, 1947 shows contributions from this Fund of $3,500. According to our records, we sent you a total of $5,500 during that period, $2,000 in January and $3,500 in February. Would you check with your auditor to see what has happened to that first $2,000 payment.

Dear Miss Elvidge:

We had battened down the hatches and were preparing to get along as best we could until maybe July 14, when your large check would be expected.

You helped us greatly by sending it thus early.

I suppose we will tie up the greater part of it in building and loan associations covered by FDIC.

The end of the Fund has been so unusual an occasion, with no one allowed to be sorry. All the same, I am. I do hope that, in whatever the next incarnations of both of us are, we can still work together.

Dear Mrs. Crate:

Attached hereto is a tentative draft of a release which has been prepared in response to your recommendations for a new, popularized statement covering the origin, aims, and activities of the Southern Regional Council.

Please read it over carefully and then tell us whether you feel it meets the needs for which you proposed it; tell us, too, of any ways in which you think it could be improved, whether by extension, clarifaction, or deletion. Your comments will receive our most careful consideration in making up the final draft.

An early reply will be appreciated. Meanwhile, with all good wishes, I remain

I have just received your letter and the copy of the material for the pamphlet on the SRC. I have read it throughly very carefully and think it is quite good. In fact I do not believe that I have a suggestion to improve it.

I trust that it will be possible to have a goodly number of these printed for distribution. I can use several hundred.

I would like to inquire about the text of the police manual that Dr. Johnson referred to during the June meeting. I would like to have some copies just as soon as it is ready for use. I could use a memo copy now if you have one.

Dear Dr. Johnson:

The state representatives at their recent conference requested that we furnish them a new account of the Council's origin and purpose, to be used for the cultivation of members and other similar purposes.

The enclosed manuscript represents the first step in our effort to prepare a pamphlet that will meet this need. It is largely made up of excerpts from what has already been written about the Council, with such new material as is necessary to bring the account up to date.

We should greatly appreciate your looking over this manuscript and sending us any corrections or comments that may occur to you. We hope to make the new publication an accurate statement of the Council's meaning, and any suggestions based on your intimate knowledge of the Council will be of much help to us.

Dear Mrs. McKoy:

I have read over the tentative draft for a revised popularized statement on the Council. The statement is direct and factual and, as such, quite satisfactory. However, since your letter indicates that the revision attempts to popularize somewhat the statement of the aims, origins, and activities, it seems to me that it is still too formal for a popularized statement. It could carry more intimate instances and description of activities in a range that the average person not only could understand, but feel. This is not always the easiest thing to do, but I have observed that some of the most successful statements about the work of organizations achieve this end and become quite effective.

With best wishes,

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mrs. McKoy:

I have yours of September 12, inclosing a copy of the proposed draft of the aims of the Southern Regional Council, inviting comment and suggestions.

Generally it is a good statement, and I have no serious quarrel with it. I think that the statement will be improved and will be brought closer to logic and fact, if you delete the first sentence under Section II on Page 2 entirely. The Southern Regional Council was not in existence 25 years ago, and really what is being said is that the Commission on Interracial Cooperation began back there, and that the Southern Regional Council is a combination of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation and the Durham Conference impetus. So if you delete the first sentence and go on with the story, it will both make better sense and be more accurate.

Then somewhere toward the end of Section II, I think the statement should be made that the Southern Regional Council is therefore an embodiment of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, the Durham Conference, and such independent and added thinking as the members of the Bi-Racial Committee injected into the program at the time of the merger and the organization of the Southern Regional Council.

I have always been conscious of the fact that our Council at present does not do much on the action side of our program. Therefore, I think that in Section IV the beginning statement should be modified to say that presently the Council's functions may be summarized as primarily the following.

Then at the end of that first paragraph I think there should be inserted that as fast as the job of educating and coordinating thinking and understanding takes place, the emphasis on action will be increased.

One of the criticisms of our Council has been that it was not an action group, to do anything about the problems, but merely a research group to write about them. We have threshed this problem out in our organization and decided that the best thing to do is what we have done, but I think that we ought to keep in our own minds, as well as in the minds of the people, that the action will come as our organization is united and ready for action, and as we feel that action is appropriate and will be effective in our total gain in the South.

These are just thoughts that occur to me with a view to trying to strengthen our statement, and I offer them for the consideration of the committee which has the matter in charge. The offer is made in the same spirit as the invitation.

With every good wish, I am

Very truly yours,

Carter Wesley

December 22, 1948

You remember that at the membership meeting and the Board meeting in November, many people asked for a new promotion pamphlet.

The sentiment seemed to be that this new one should be simple, short, and spacious, with appealing art work.

Mr. Fleming has turned out a tentative text. We can't get the illustrating done until we know roughly what sort of text will be liked. So I send you possible text. Please criticize, correct, amend, delete, or rewrite.

Before the pamphlet is printed, we will send you proof with the pictures, for criticism again.

This letter is going to only some fifteen members. Please, therefore, don't treat it perfunctorily. We earnestly want your careful personal criticism.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell

December 4, 1947

Dear SRC Member:

Those of you who attended the annual meeting know that the Council is faced with a deficit of approximately $5,000 for the close of the year. This was nobly faced at the meeting when Dr. Will Alexander called upon the assembled membership to clear the deficit before the end of the year and promised that he, himself, would accept responsibility for raising $1,000 of it if other members would make pledges to obtain the rest.

In immediate response to Dr. Alexander's appeal the following pledges were made:

Mr. Leonard Haas, Atlanta	$200.00
Dr. Gordon B. Hancock, Richmond	100.00
Dr. Guy B. Johnson, Chapel Hill	100.00
Msgr. T. James McNamara, Savannah	100.00
Rt. Rev. V. J. O'Connell, New Orleans	50.00
Mr. G. D. Rogers, For Fla. Division	500.00
Mr. J. M. Tydings, Kentucky Division	100.00
Dr. Forrester B. Washington, Atlanta	100.00
Mr. Paul D. Williams, Richmond	200.00
Dr. R. L. Russell, Georgia Committee	200.00
Other Anticipated Income	250.00
	$1,900.00

In the critical days that lie ahead the need for the Council is felt to be greater than ever. Mr. Rogers, in making his pledge, stated his belief that the Council means more to the South than any other organization with which he had ever worked.

The Council belongs to you, its members. Will you not, each of you, undertake to secure such donations as lie within your power to meet this need? Money so given is deductible from personal income tax. No gift, however, is too small, whether of dimes or of dollars, and the aggregate will, I feel sure, enable us to begin 1948 with a clear slate and to face the work that lies ahead of us with confidence and effectiveness. May we not hear from you?

Sincerely yours,

Agnes McKoy

January 10, 1948

Colonel Alfred C. Oliver, Jr.
Apartment 311
2801 Adams Mill Road, NW
Washington 9, D. C.

Dear Colonel Oliver:

I should like to put before you in further detail the proposal which, in company with Dr. George Mitchell, Executive Director of the Council, I laid before you shortly before Christmas in Washington.

In 1945, 1946 and 1947, the Southern Regional Council conducted an extensive program of inquiry into services to veterans in the Southern states. The work was done by some ten veterans of World War II who traveled extensively in all but one or two of the Southern states and, in interviews and at meetings, paved the way for a more effective working relationship between local veterans servicing agencies and the veterans. The improvements urged affected particularly the Negro veterans, whose access to information and action on their needs theretofore had been unfamiliar and frequently difficult.

I am attaching to this letter a set of the reports, state by state, which resulted from this travel, and other publications on the theme of vocational training for veterans.

Out of that direct contact with the needs of veterans in the South the Council reached the conclusion that the South has neglected one of the greatest opportunities for its own advance which has ever come its way. These young men, numbering over 3,000,000, have returned to the South possessed of scholarships entitling them to upwards of three years each of educational training. For the ten or twelve percent of them who are of college level, the colleges of the South have provided them well. For the rest, relatively little is available in the way of training. Some scores of thousands are getting on-the-job training. In most of the Southern states somewhere between two and ten thousand are receiving full-time institutional on-the-farm training. Only a few thousands receive apprenticeship training. As everywhere, very few have entered regular high school courses.

The full subsistence and tuition payments are available for secondary educational work. The difficulty is that the South has few schools where the kind of training the veterans want can be had. The men have growing responsibilities. They gave up that period of their lives when regular high school work might have held their attention, and for great numbers of them the only kind of schooling that has an appeal is technical and vocational training. Most Southern schools have little to offer of this kind. Vocational courses in high schools, assisted by Smith-Hughes funds, are scattered about. In each state, three, four or five entirely vocational schools, secondary in character, can be found. These are now over-crowded and under-equipped. The present facilities are still not under the strain which it is reasonable to anticipate with the first breath of serious unemployment. Should the demand for vocational training in the South grow sharply within the next four years (the time remaining for entrance on training under the G.I. Bill), the South would have a distressingly inadequate network of trade training schools.

It so happens that this opportunity to expand trade training coincides with a pressing need for expansion arising from the thrust of industrialization into the South at the very time when increasing mechanization of agriculture makes it clear that from a million and a half to two million untrained men now on the land will be turned into the cities. It is obviously the part of statesmanship, as well as of service to the veterans, to equip the South in its industrial and also in its agricultural areas, with a network of trade and vocational training schools, which will enable industry to find the schools it needs and will ease, for the rural areas, the transition from hoe-hand to mechanized agriculture.

The Southern states have not entirely neglected this opportunity. North Carolina now has thirty or more localities in which institutional trade training for veterans is offered. In all the states new courses of this kind have been opened. This development is subject to the criticism that it is unsystematic and altogether inadequate. Doubtless, also, the scattered courses now being offered should be coordinated into technical schools, spaced by appropriate areas, within each state. Such a structure of technical education is the proper equipment of the kind of commercial and industrial society that the South is becoming.

As you, of course, understand, it is fundamentally the responsibility of local communities and of the states, through their educational systems, to set up the needed facilities. The state or the local school system must find the buildings, get in the equipment, and engage the teachers. From that point on, for some years to come, the tuition payments for veteran students will very largely carry the load. It is to be held in mind that after the veterans have exhausted their entitlement, most of the schools will remain as being indispensable to an industrial South.

The present opportunity arises from the fact that a comparatively small effort on the part of local citizens can prise loose a very sizable amount of Federal assistance, thus providing facilities which the veterans wish are are entitled to have and which will be of great and lasting benefit to the communities and states which show the effort required.

The Southern Regional Council requests the aid of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in providing a stimulus to local action which will get more and better-planned and better-run trade training schools in the Council's area.

Our experience has shown that a trained person, independent of the school systems but informed about organizations whose voices can be effective, can greatly increase the speed with which educational opportunities can be provided for the veterans and can do quite a lot to make these opportunities systematic and of good quality. At the present time we see no one in the field who is an effective intermediate between the several state Departments of Education, the Veterans Administration, the various veterans' organizations, the unorganized veterans and public opinion in general. What we should like to do is to engage a competent person experienced in trade educational work and having acquaintance with state and federal educational officials, as well as with the Army and the Navy, and with the sources of public opinion. He should be provided with not less than two full-time traveling assistants, and, of course, with secretarial help. Such a unit of three professional persons could, in a couple of years' time, add enormously to the technical educational opportunities provided for the veterans and, therefore, for the people of the South.

No special mention has been made above of the particular needs of the Negro veteran. Those who are equipped for college work are eagerly taking advantage of college training. Enrollment of veterans in Negro colleges the country over (and practically all of them are in the South) grew 44.6% in 1947 as against 1946, while enrollment of veterans in all colleges for the same period grew less than five percent. But for the Negro veterans as a whole college is even less the answer than for the white ones. Most of the Negro veterans in the South left school at fourth, fifth or sixth grade levels. Where technical teaching is open to them they have taken advantage of it. But the number who have been able to get on-the-job training or apprenticeship training in the South is minute. They need specially adapted technical schools. Extremely little provision has been made for their needs. Something like two-thirds of the Negro population of the South is still in rural areas. They will bear the brunt of the changes in agriculture. If it is the part of wisdom to provide training for white veterans in the South, it is doubly the part of wisdom to provide it for Negro veterans.

Emphasis should be given to the opportunity open for training in what is called "industrial arts." Vocational education people are familiar now with a type of instruction which does not attempt to give finished skills. For a year or for two years young persons are taught the use of a variety of woodworking and metal-working tools, neatness and cleanliness in work, materials, the fundamentals of electricity, motive power, and familiarity with big, noisy and complicated machinery. Persons who have had training of this kind are picked up by factory and commercial employers, who train them further in the particular skills needed in their lines of business. That background training makes the difference between a lifetime of work at common labor and one spent at semi-skilled or skilled levels. The difference in earnings will make the difference between well-kept homes and children who get to high school, and slums and a new generation of children the product of slums.

The Southern Regional Council is an organization which works for the well-being of all of the people of the South, white and Negro. It has members of both races on its staff and on its governing bodies. It understands, from long experience, how to get things done in a way to advantage both races in the South.

It would like to have the means to get ahead with the job outlined in this letter. It applies to the Veterans of Foreign Wars for such a measure of aid as will enable this job to be done. We think it would take about twenty thousand dollars a year for each of two years to do it.

The Council would be most happy to supply you or any persons you may suggest, with further information about itself, its programs or its membership.

Sincerely,

Paul D. Williams
President

Dear Mr. Williams:

I have given a great deal of thought to the correspondence you have sent from time to time on the progress of the Southern Regional Council with special emphasis on police administration in the South.

I am certain that this program has the highest merit and deserves all the support that can be rallied. I cannot see, however, that it is the role of a public corporation to underwrite the work; that is, it is not in the interest of the stockholders to bear the entire burden. I think it might be possible, if the total fund is raised by general subscription, for this company or some other one to underwrite the annual award of $1,000. If the project should reach such point of fruition I will endeavor to secure such funds from this company.

Current news articles on police administration here in the city regarding the Negro population are indicative of the deficiencies you have pointed out. We are having a mayoralty election this November and if it comes out in favor of the incumbent I may be able to be of some assistance in the program here in Louisville; otherwise, I am none too optimistic.

Very truly yours,

Vice-President

Mr. Fred Willkie

Dear Mr. Willkie:

At the request of Mr. Paul Williams, the President of the Council, I take great pleasure in sending you a selection of the more recent publications of the Southern Regional Council.

The Council is built on the belief that no more important contribution to interracial understanding in the South can be made than the upbuilding of all of the people of the South. With this in mind, our publications have over the last four years set out the main facts about the condition of the people of the South.

On top of the stack is Rupert Vance's "Wanted: The South's Future for the Nation." This reviews the population figures and lays out our main problems in broadening opportunity in agriculture, industry and commerce.

Then comes Dorothy Dickins' study on health.

The next is "Machines in the Cotton Fields," which tells the changes under way in Southern agriculture.

"Wanted: An Educated South" gives the disparities in the school program of the South as against the rest of the country, and in the South for Negroes as against whites.

"Housing in the South" compares the standing of various Southern states in this field.

"By The People" tells the method and the first remarkable results of a community self-survey which Jacksonville, Florida, did, with technical advice from the Council.

"To Secure These Rights" compresses the Report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights. We thought it important to put before the South for study the exact recommendations.

"The Condition of Our Rights" accompanies the digest and gives the main facts about the shortcomings in civil rights in the South.

The last one, called "Race and Suffrage in the South Since 1940," tells about the growth of the Negro vote and describes its contribution to our political well-being.

In the stack is also a leaflet telling generally about the Council, and four or five back issues of our monthly magazine, New South.

All of the pamphlets have had quite good circulation in the South and are in steady demand from schools, colleges, libraries and local discussion groups.

We do not expect you to read all of these, but we want you to know the general tendency of the Council's work.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell
Executive Director

Dear Mark:

I am grateful to you for all you did in our behalf with Mr. Willkie. I had a good meeting with him last Wednesday when I was in Louisville and had a chance to talk with him in some detail regarding the work and strategy of the Southern Regional Council. Mr. Willkie seemed to be impressed and I am writing him today giving him additional information which he desires before making a decision in the matter. It is possible that he will confer with you again and if he does I hope you will "go to bat for us."

I called your office when I was in Louisville but you were not in. When I called again you had left for the day and as I left by plane early in the morning I had to forego the pleasure of dropping by to say hello.

Thank you again for your confidence in the work of the Southern Regional Council.

With every best wish, I remain

Dear Mark:

Thank you so much for your letter of May 10. I am most grateful to you for useing you good offices to intercede for us with Mr. Willkie. The last part of his letter seems to leave the door open for further discussion. I would be still further indebted to you if you would phone or write Mr. Willkie indicating that in your estimation you think the work of the Southern Regional Council extremely important for the progress of the South and that you wish he would reconsider its support. You might mention that I plan to be in Louisville the week of June 7 and would be grateful for a chance to discuss certain phases of the program with him. If you feel that you can do this I will consider it a very great favor. Please drop me a line after you write again to Mr. Willkie.

I discussed Mr. Willkie's prospect of helping the SRC through your influence when I spoke with Virginius Dabney today and he seemed delighted. Indeed, he said he would write you about it. As you know, Mr. Dabney is on the Board of Directors of the SRC and I depend greatly on his advice in all matters pertaining to the affairs of our Council. We are delighted that Mr. Dabney received one of the Pulitzer prizes.

Dear Mr. Tydings:

Thank you for your letter of October 11.

I have agreed to go to the Chicago meeting November 18, 19, and 20. I will do my best to represent the Kentucky and all other divisions and committees. But if you are free, it would be fine if you could go.

I have written Paul Williams and asked him to write to Barry Bingham. Thank you much for your visits.

I need to do some more work on a plan for handling police matters. I send you a copy of what we batted around for a year as our "police project". Most of it is still valid. I am satisfied we need to get first one or two lay persons who know the inside of police administration in the South but can be free to tell much of what they know to the general public. With such information we can build public support for improved police administration.

I send you also the whole of Myrdal's speech last May at the Rosenwald Fund celebration. It is our only copy, so I wish you would be good enough to send it back. Observe his remarks on police and a police academy toward the end of the paper.

The whole thing has moved on some since we got up the police project. Maybe something could be worked out with the new Regional Council for Education. That, you see, has support from the state governors, and it will end up as their business to operate a real police school in the South. I haven't explored this, but will soon with John Ivey, who runs that Council.

I still think the main contribution the Council could make would be to have two men who between them know the whole story on police administration in the South. That would take about $25,000 to get the story and get it in print. From then on public pressure would mount.

I have got to recast the Council's whole notion on what to do about police but have not yet done it. All I can do is to send you these materials and hope that you can find enough material in it to persuade the Schmidtlapp Foundation.

If this is too scrappy, tell me so posthaste and I will drop other things and go after that.

Sincerely,

Dear Dr. Mitchell:

I have an invitation to attend the 12nd Annual Conference of the National Association of Intergroup Relations Officials to be held on November 18, 19, 20.

Last year I attended this conference and requested that all work in the South be cleared through S. R. C. and it was agreed that such was a sound policy.

Therefore I am writing to suggest that you appoint a representative of S, R. C., or better, attend the Conference yourself.

I would like to be excused from attending the Conference if such an idea comes to your mind.

I have had two very satisfactory conferences with Mr. Barry Brigham which might be followed up at this time with a letter from you or Paul Williams.

Last Friday I had a talk with Mr. Wm A. Stark, Chairman ofthe Jacob Schmidtlapp Foundation in Cincinnati. He was very interested in the Police School Project and would like more details as to plans and the cost. Please let me have your ideas along these lines as soon as possible. I promised to write him a prospectus of the whole project.

A Council to attain, through research and action, the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South.

December 6, 1948

Dear Member:

Do we who have accepted membership in the Council really believe in the Council's objectives? If so, we should be willing to make the sacrifices necessary to sustain these objectives. Because of the decline in Foundation support, the Council must in the future find most of its means from people in the South who believe in its work.

It has not in the past asked much of its membership. Dues have been low, and for them the Council has sent out a good stream of printed things. We know that you are interested, and count on you to work in your own community for the positive gains that the Council stands for.

At the recent annual membership meeting, those in attendance by vote urged that each member send in at least $10.00 besides dues. It can be raised from your friends or it can be paid straight from you. It is only right, after all, that we in the South who will get the good of a richer and fairer South should strain ourselves to pay for the organized effort to get such a South.

There are 3,000 of us. Ten dollars extra from each member will give us our minimum budget.

Yours and ours is a deeply felt intent. Please mail the Council (by February 15, 1949 if you can) the evidence of your faith and encouragement.

Dear George:

That was most kind of you to talk with Hiden Ramsey and get us the list of people who could help.

Paul Williams' present plan is to convene the Board members and, I hope, also the Fellows, state by state, and with a committee arrange for those persons in the state who could contribute to the Council to be interviewed. I hope all that will unroll in the next two months.

Incidentally, I have talked with Mr. Spaulding, Dr. Odum has already written unsuccessfully to George Watts Hill, and eighteen months or so ago I talked with Mr. James A. Gray in Winston-Salem, before he went to the War Department. We will bring up all of the names at the North Carolina meeting when it is set.

Dr. Odum's article is just fine. I would very much like to get it into the hands of each of our 3,000 members. If that is agreeable, how could it best be done? I could buy an extra run of 3,000 copies of the January Packet, on the assumption that the bill would not be over a hundred dollars. Or, we could buy from you 3,000 reprints of the article. I should think it would be better for the article to be in its full Packet dress, as that would add a little renoun--and maybe a few subscriptions--to the Packet.

It does seem to me that there should be a box on the front page that would tell a little about Odum's statement. I don't think it could be summarized, but you could place Odum and show the importance of his statement.

Anyway, I am good for a hundred dollars, or if necessary a little more, to get 3,000 copies, if that is feasible from your point of view.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell
Executive Director

Dear George:

On receiving your letter of December 16 I asked Hiden Ramsey if he would write down some suggestions for substantial donations to your 1949 operating fund. You will find them noted on the back of your letter which is enclosed.

As you know, there has been for years a North Carolina Inter-Racial Commission. This has been supported by moderate sized donations from a fairly large group. Through Dr. Odom I think you might get permission to ask the help of the man who has raised this money each year. His name is Guerney P. Hood. He is North Carolina Banking Commissioner with offices at Raleigh. Meanwhile I shall try to raise a little money in Asheville.

Dr. Odom has just sent us a wonderful and thorough manuscript on "Today's National and Southern Racial Situation," for publication in the January Packet. Enclosed you will find the Galley proofs. Look them over and give me any critical suggestions on presenting this to the public in a way it will be read. Some sort of summary or striking quotation will have to be used, as there is little chance of many people reading 5000 words. If I guess correctly it may be quoted fairly widely just as Harry Ashmore was. I am especially anxious for the mature judgment of Dr. Odom to count for all possible in the questions the country is trying to settle today.

Cordially,

Dear George:

We have been so snowed under with the work involved in catching up with the meeting that I am thus regrettably late in thanking you for your most generous gifts totaling $51.10 for the Council. They help us very greatly.

If you do make up a small list of other people in the state who might be willing to help, we would appreciate that too. The present plan is to convene the Board members, state by state, in their own states, and with a subcommittee of them, parcel out the names of people whom they would approach for sums that would match Dr. Odum's gift of $250, contingent on 99 other persons doing likewise.

We have had no word from your friend the publisher in Atlanta.

N. C. FUND RAISING January, 1949

From George M. Stephens' letter of 1/8/49:

"When I go down the state during the next month, perhaps I may dig out some more help for your Council's fund raising in North Carolina. For the record, I believe you may want to recall that Mr. James A. Gray is not the man who went to Washington, but is a much older and prominent man in State affairs, being an official of R. J. Reynolds and Trustee of the University of North Carolina. Gordon is about 40 and the owner of the newspapers in Winston-Salem, also assistant secretary for the Army."

Dear Mr. Parrish:

As you know, the Kentucky Division of the Southern Regional Council has its annual meeting February 12 in Louisville. The meeting convenes at noon. Mr. Tydings is calling a small gathering in connection with the meeting at 10 o'clock, at which I hope you can be present. The meeting will be made up principally of our Board members and Fellows.

One purpose will be to make a plan by which we can reach successfully twelve or fifteen people in Kentucky who would join Dr. Howard Odum of the University of North Carolina in his generous offer of $250 as a contribution to the Council's budget, provided 99 other southern people can be found who will put up the same amount. We shan't be asking you for money, but we shall be asking for advice as to whom to reach and how to reach them.

I do hope you can write me that you can be present at that time.

Dear Mr. Williams:

Here is the letter that I spent so much money calling you about on Saturday! A similar one has gone (under your signature) to all North Carolina Board members and Fellows, inviting them to the February 9 meeting. It will be held in the Directors' Room of the Mechanics and Farmers Bank in Durham (116 West Parrish Street). We are hoping that Mr. Spaulding will preside. The time is three p.m.

We are counting on you to be there.

Dr. Charlotte H. Brown
Palmer Memorial Institute
Sedalia, North Carolina

Dear Dr. Brown:

In following up the broad plans laid at the November 1948 meeting for helping the Southern Regional Council to meet its budget, a special meeting is being held of the Board members and Fellows in each state.

The meeting will draw up a list of names of persons who might contribute to the Council and will, presumably, appoint a committee to follow through and get in touch with the various people who could contribute.

The general idea is to find in the whole South a hundred people who will join Dr. Howard Odum in his generous offer of $250 toward the Council's budget if a total of a hundred such people can be found. We have seven or eight already.

I am, therefore, calling a meeting of North Carolina Board members and Fellows, on Wednesday, February 9, at 3:00 P.M. The meeting will be held in the Directors' Room of the Mechanics and Farmers Bank, 116 West Parrish Street, Durham.

We will not be begging those who come to the meeting for money. The object is to plan to get a small campaign which would net, perhaps, fifteen or twenty $250 contributions from over North Carolina.

I do hope that you can come. Will you let me know?

My dear Mr. Williams:

It is with real regret that I tell you I cannot possibly attend the meeting you are calling for 9th February in Durham. I have been out of the state for the past two months and my obligations and commitments in the work of the Conference have piled up on me to such an extent that I cannot attend any conferences within the next four months other than those already scheduled for me.

The SRC is taking a step which I urged on the Director and Executive Committee at the time of the organization of this body. There was every sign that we could not depend much longer on Foundation handouts and that while there was this income, we should develop southern support to take over when no more support from Foundations would be forthcoming. This refusal to face financial facts has given me great concern. I hope that the SRC will be successful in raising the needed funds.

Possibly the next time you call on me I shall be in a position to do something.

Dear Mrs. Spearman:

Thank you for the letter of February 4.

As to a meeting in South Carolina. It would be a mighty effort for you to organize such a meeting at so near a date as February 19. I suggest, therefore, that we put it off.

Just now I am free for any date in March except the 14th, 15th, and 16th, and March 28. I am to be in South Carolina, in any case, on Thursday, March 24, to talk to the meeting of the South Carolina Teachers Association (10:00 A.M.). Mr. Potts has never let me know where that meeting will be, but I assume it will be in Columbia. It would suit my convenience, naturally, if a South Carolina meeting could be held March 24, 25, or 26, but if an earlier date is better for South Carolina's purposes, that will be all right with me.

I am delighted that the South Carolina Division is going after $5,000 for itself. It should have it. I know it will be a strain to be approaching our very limited group of friends for such a sum as $250 amounts. But we shan't be asking for more than a very few such gifts from South Carolina. In any case, I would come to a South Carolina meeting with the experience of similar meetings in Virginia, North Carolina, Kentucky, and Alabama behind me. So I ask that the South Carolina Division arrange a March meeting of the Council's Board members in the state and the Fellows, and any other persons (such as board and committee members of the South Carolina Division) as it might be thought wise to get to come.

Here is a list of the South Carolina Fellows, with tick marks as to those of the recommended ones who have agreed to serve as Fellows.

I am told that Howard Kester now lives at Black Mountain, North Carolina.

Mr. Marion Wright said he would try to get to the North Carolina meeting February 9, but reminded us that his main links are still with South Carolina. If he does not get to the North Carolina meeting, we can hope to get him to the South Carolina meeting. In any case, he should be asked, I think.

The boiled-down pamphlet is getting its art work added and has not gone printer. Even after it goes to the printer, we could still make changes in proof. Please send us your comment and suggestions. They would be helpful.

On the December '47-January '48 New South. I am sorry to tell you that we have literally only two copies left. I send you one of those, but 'tis a loan, and I beg you to mail it back to us with your comments on the new pamphlet.

When the March meeting comes off, do please invite Mr. Guthrie at Spartanburg.

When you decide on a date, will you send out invitations for people to come? If the Division wants it, this office would be willing to send out the letters. But it seems to me better for it to come from South Carolina.

I don't know Paul Williams' calendar, but he is trying very hard to get to each of the state meetings, and I could tentatively promise that he would be present for the South Carolina one.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell

Southern Regional Council

Dear Dr. Mitchell:

Much to my regret my hosband's health and a combination of conditions are such that at the present I am a poor bet, when it comes to you or anyone else getting anything accomplished thru me, especially on schedule! I'm sorry.

There are many things about which I have been wanting to write you, and I will yet, if possible. Otherwise, I hope we may have some time to do so when you are here.

I wish I might be more encouraging about Mr. Dabbs and my helping you on the matter of raising funds to match Dr. Odum's gift. I am sorry that Dr. J.H. Stuart whose term expired this year might not have been succeeded on the Board by one of our outstanding Negroes from this state. Will you have a list of the Fellows sent me? I shall appreciate it, as I did not get one at the annual mtg., and have been intending to ask for one. I talked with Rosamonde W. Boyd in Columbia last month about her work with SRC and she was not encouraging. I'd rather not quote her as I'd prefer that you hear her ideas directly from her. However, my impression was that she does not think there is a unique place for SRC what with the many recent developments, and definitely said she preferred contributing to more urgently needed work. Quite confidentially, she has married the Chr. of the Dem. Party of Spthg. Co., and she is upset on the subject of civil rights. We have never been able to get John Potts to any meeting when his school is in session. Buck Kester is no longer at Penn School, I believe, and I don't seem to know who the other Fellows are. However, I do not doubt that they are like Mr. Dabbs said he has observed of most liberals, they know people all right, but seldom the right ones when it comes to raising money.

Now, I do not mean to be entirely discouraging, and am willing to try to do all I can. All other things being equal, Cola. is usually the best place for a meeting. Since we are as scattered as we are, I wish there were some way to assign us to make the desired contacts without having to have a meeting. If a number of the Fellows are school people, and you do decide upon a meeting, might not Sat. the 19th be the best time. I will not make any appointments for this period which I cannot break until I hear from you. I think it might be worthwhile sending notices of the meeting to our S.C. Division Board members, for I believe a few would want and be able to attend. C.L. Guthrie, Rt 5, Spartanburg S.C. , who is past president of the SPTBG Central Labor Union said he would like to do so when we mentioned the possibility of such a meeting at our last Board meeting.

Our Board and Advisory Committee has set a goal for $5,000 for this year for a full time travelling secretary, and I believe most S.Carolinians will prefer to give to that as the need is so great on the local level, and there are so many urgent crucial issues at stake in the state just now. However, we are indebted to the regional work, xxxx want it to continue, and will work to that end!

I have some definite ideas about the new promotion pamphlet which I have begun setting down several times, only to be interrupted. Shall I make a desperate effort to complete this the first of the week when I should have a little free time, or is it too late to be of help?

My general criticism is that what was submitted is logical, but not psychologically arresting. The iron is hot at many points just now, and I hope we may play up these points as attention getters, and then give a minimum of background, etc. If there's time, I'd like to develop these ideas more fully and specifically. Let me hear.

Hastily,

Calvin N. Spearman

Dear Mrs. Spearman:

Paul Williams' plan on raising the $250 sums to match Dr. Odum's gift is to convene a meeting of the Board members, and I think also the Fellows, in each state. That group would draw up a list of people who would put up $250, and parcel out the job of going to see the people. Of course the job needs to be done in the closest coordination with the state division or state committee concerned.

Incidentally, Paul agrees that it would be a good idea to offer to the treasury of each state division concerned twenty-five cents out of every dollar so raised.

Could you please be busy at picking a date for such a meeting in South Carolina? I will hold open for South Carolina the whole period of Thursday, February 17, through Monday, February 21.

Please think hard about when and where, and let me know just as quickly as you can.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell
Executive Director

Dear SRC Member:

You will be interested in the results of the "ten dollar" campaign.

Here is the number of these contributors, by States:

States	Number of Households	Number of Contributors	% Households Contributing	Amount Contributed
Mississippi	125	41	32.8	$328.00
Tennessee	116	27	23	258.00
Georgia	230	46	20	327.00
Alabama	134	23	17	201.00
Louisiana	77	12	15.5	111.00
Texas	93	14	15	114.00
Kentucky	102	15	14.7	121.00
South Carolina	239	34	14.2	283.00
Assoc. (Outside of South)	148	21	14	196.50
Virginia	180	21	11.7	181.00
Arkansas	17	2	11	15.00
North Carolina	195	20	10.2	193.50
Oklahoma	11	1	9	9.00
Florida	552	27	5	232.00
TOTALS	2,219	304	13.7	$2,570.00

The total amount received thus far is $2,570. Average contribution was $8.45. Of the 2,219 households in our membership of 3,200, 13.7 percent contributed. We are pleased with these results, and the Council has been greatly helped by that addition to its threateningly low funds.

Books close June 30. If any one wishes still to help, we would be very grateful.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Ewbank:

This is one of our rare appeals to you as a Fellow for a special bit of service.

We are going pretty seriously into a major fund-raising campaign this fall. We have engaged an able person named Thomas F. Byrd, of Burnsville, North Carolina, who will head up the campaign for several months on a salary basis.

He has asked me to get for him a list of the three or four leading ministers for each state, one for each of the three or four major denominations.

It isn't necessary that they be persons who have shown much interest in the Council's sort of work; we want people who are influential in their denominations.

No one is going to ask them for money, but Byrd would go and see them and ask them to tell him where he might usefully address his efforts to find persons who could give substantially.

Would you ponder a bit and write me the names and addresses of three or four such persons? I assume one would be a Baptist, one a Methodist, and one a Presbyterian. For the Episcopal and Catholic Churches we wou d depend on the bishops.

Kind of you if you can help us in that way.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell

I am out of State for the Summer but make the following suggestions.

1. Pastor of Immanuel Baptist Church Little Rock, Rev. W. D. Vaught.

2. Doctor C. M. Reeves, Methodist, First Church, Conway, Ark.,

3. Presbyterian:— Pastor of the (I believe) Second Presbyterian Church Located on third Street, Near the Post Office, Little Rock, Ark.,
(I cannot recall his name.)

These three persons are influential, well known, Respected and, I believe, will be Sympathetic to our Cause.

Mr. C. J. McLanahan

Detroit 26, Michigan

Dear Mr. McLanahan:

Our president, Paul Williams, and I were in New York about three weeks ago and we went by to see the Welch Grape Juice people. Mr. Kaplan, I assume, was too busy to see us and sent out Mr. Neaman, his assistant. Mr. Neaman was solicitude and alert understanding itself, but said that they had flocks of appeals for money. We told him ours was a settled organization with thirty years of rootedness in southern needs behind it and that therefore we should be helped. In effect, he said that that was interesting, because more lately Mr. Kaplan had been helping only brand new organizations just getting started!

Nevertheless we left our materials and oral petitions with Mr. Neaman, who promised to bring the matter up to Mr. Kaplan. We went away feeling no great hopes. If you have private channels for strengthening our possibilities, we would be very grateful.

We are in tough shape financially, but are sure of good support in the future, and need now only a few thousand dollars to get us through this year.

Mr. Neaman made it clear that we wouldn't improve our cause by submitting reams of projects and documents. Wherefore I don't present any to you.

Nevertheless, for your own interest, and to show the sort of thing we do, I send now a recent letter to the southern governors which caused something of a splash and will mark the beginning of a new period.

Thank you, anyhow, for letting us know about the possibility.

Dr. Mitchell:

I notice that on checking this list that Dr. Trigg has marked only the Methodist Ministers, which, of course, will not be sufficient for Mr. Byrd's needs. Since Mr. Byrd does not know these people giving him the complete list without information will not help him a great deal! It just happens that I know some of these ministers that are well know and have influence in North Carolina.

Dr. J. A. Jones, Charlotte, has one of the wealthiest churches in the state. It is Myers Park Presbyterian, I believe.

Dr. J. A. Redhead, Greensboro, was in Charlotte for years before going to Greensboro, is a powerful preacher and has influence not only among Presbyterians but in other Protestant denominations as well.

Rev. J. C. Plexico, Asheville, is quite well known and much liked in the Presbyterian Church.

Dr. John R. Cunningham at Davidson is well thought of and greatly respected.

Dr. W. M. Boyce and Dr. E. N. Orr are both leaders among the A.R.P's. Dr. Boyce has some wealthy church members too I believe. Dr. Orr. was for years President of Mecklenburg County Ministerial Association and may still be.
Dr. Boyce is at First A.R.P. Church, Charlotte
Dr. E. N. Orr at Tabernacle A.R.P. Church, Charlotte

Dr. Herbert Spaugh, Charlotte, writes a daily column in either The Charlotte Observer or the Charlotte News(can't remember which) His church is called "The Little Church on the Lane" or something to that effect.

Mr. George M. Ivey, Charlotte, owns chain of Ivey Department Stores in N. C. He belongs to First Methodist Church in Charlotte and has given a great deal of money to that denomination and to other worthy causes. I remember once the Interdenominational Council of Christian Young People in Charlotte had an interracial meeting and he showed us a movie (His own) on Negro Housing in Mecklenburg County.

Dr. William Harrison Williams, Pritchard Memorial Baptist Church, Charlotte, is well known among Baptists and highly respected.

All these people except Dr. Redhead and Dr. Cunningham are in Charlotte. I notice Dr. and Mrs. Clyde Milner of Guilford College are also listed but are not checked. Some notation should be made that they are Council Members for Mr. Byrd's sake. Do you think it worthwhile to make the above information available to Mr. Byrd?

The Executive Committee of the Southern Regional Council, meeting in Atlanta, August 31, directed that the following be sent your Convention.

The period immediately ahead is one in which major decisions by all the people of the South, with the Nation, must be taken toward resolving the conflicts of today. Substantial achievement is in sight and the Southern Regional Council must have additional emergency support in order to play its uniquely effective part. Either the Christian groups accept this challenge or injurious forces will prevail. We appeal to your great Baptist Body to play its part in this effort and to align itself with other religious groups by voting one thousand dollars to the Council.

Miss Gundlach made the following suggestion which I thought you would be interested in:

"It occurred to me as I read the enclosed sheet, "Southern Liberals On the Move" that the statement ought to be in the hands of each member of our faculty with an appeal for them to support the Southern Regional Council. Do you think there is value in the suggestion that you prepare a letter for college teachers who are not now members of the Council, and enclose a copy of the sheet? If these could be sent to a Council member on each campus who would undertake to see that they are distributed, it might not be too expensive a way to make the appeal for others to help."

Dear George:

You'll find enclosed a copy of a letter I have written to Harry Daniel, Amalthea, Bristol, Virginia, the young liberal manufacturer I spoke to you about.

Last Friday I sent off to the text editor of LIFE a brief synopsis titled, "Mr. Calm and Gradual," which was, of course, a suggestion that I do a piece for them about you, weaving into it the work of the Council, and with the purpose of proving that there is something Southerners can do to solve their own problems, with you and the Council as prototypes.

You know that any dealings with LIFE are highly speculative, but in case they should be interested will you send me the five-page document you wrote for Mr. Oursler and which you mentioned during our talks? In return, I'll let you know immediately what LIFE says.

I went on to Chattanooga with Popham and had a good and fruitful talk with him. The next day hit Knoxville and the TVA crowd where I got some fine bibliographies and maps. In Asheville I saw Stephens very briefly to find him willing to help and a charming person. In Greenville, S.C., at the end of my trip, I found your fine hand again, in the community survey they've just done.

As a matter of fact, I made that survey the main point in a second synopsis I sent to LIFE: "The Town That Found Its Conscience."

Thanks again very much for all your fine help and hospitality which put me doubly in your debt by the spirit in which you gave it.

Cordially,

George

Dear Harry:

I'm enclosing a clip which describes the work of The Southern Regional Council, an organization which deserves your interest and support. Up until now it has been getting money from the Rosenwald Foundation but, as you probably know, the Rosenwald money is all gone now. The Council is seeking memberships, and I believe hopes to get a certain number of $10 folk. I think you ought to be one of them.

All goes well with the McMillans. My Marine book got reviews which went far beyond my expectations, and at the end of April I found my name among those who were awarded Guggenheim Fellowships for the coming year. I'm to write: "A Social History of the South, 1930-48," a monumental and bewildering mission which will probably at some time or other bring me to Bristol.

All the McMillans, including Virginia, Kit and Sander (who has just been accepted to enter Harvard next fall) are going to England this summer. I'm attending as one of 100 students from 23 countries a seminar at the University of London, sponsored by the British government, "The Arts in Britain Today," a discriminating survey of contemporary British culture. We got to the ballet, the theatre, etc.

We're returning about mid-September and wish the hell we could have a reunion with the Daniels then. Can't you come see us in September-October for a weekend?

Virginia joins me in sending best to you and Julia.

NOTES ON THE CONVERSATION WITH BYRD, JUNE 1, 1949 GSM

He would only do the job on condition that he be assured of the active personal participation in fundraising of many members of the Board of Directors, as well ad the participation of the staff.

If after three or four months he does not feel encouraged as to the prospects of raising a substantial sum, the arrangement would be terminated.

He wants from us during the summer a list of well-to-do southern persons, being approximately 25 per state. As to each person such information as is available should be supplied.

He wants also a list of persons high in each of the leading religious denominations in each state who could assist in making contact with prospective donors. This would not exceed 3, 4, or 5 per state.

He will propose to begin work between September 1 and 15. I urged him to start on it as early as possible, in order that the literature he wants printed may be printed.

He has his own printer that he likes and has trained to deliver on time. We will need to supply him with a careful budget of what we would do with the money to be raised -- that is, what projects and what amounts.

He contemplates putting in about six months in the job: one or two more if necessary.

RE: FUND-RAISING

I have just gone over progress of fund-raising in the states. These perhaps should have some follow-up now:

ALABAMA:
GSM went to Montgomery March 4. Marmion to get Norton to sign letter; Shores to get Gaston to sign. We have heard nothing on this that I know of.

NORTH CAROLINA:
GSM talked to Mr. Wheeler over 'phone March 15. He was to go to Greensboro to see Mr. Hanes about signing the letter. WE HAVE NOT HEARD.
Spaulding reprints mailed on 3/29 and 3/30 to persons on list, with promise that they would be receiving letter from Mr. Spaulding soon.

VIRGINIA:
GSM wrote Paul Williams February 18, sending cards to be perfected. PW to get Young and Dabney to sign the letter. NO WRITTEN REPORT since that I know of.

FLORIDA:
Wrote Mrs. Havens on March 3. Mr. Daniel to peffect letter he and Mr. Rogers to send out.
CAN GSM SPEED THIS WHEN HE IS IN FLORIDA?

In these states, no follow-up is necessary now, looks like:

KENTUCKY:
GSM talked to Mr. Tydings by 'phone March 30. He agreed to refer to correspondence and take action.

SOUTH CAROLINA:
Dabbs written March 30 about what needs to be done.

TENNESSEE:
We have correspondended with Mrs. Havens, most recently on March 29. Meeting to be set up in connection with May Tennessee annual meeting.

TEXAS:
Carter Wesley wrote on March 28 that now isn't the time to go ahead in Texas; too much competition from United Negro College Fund.

No meetings set up in: Arkansas, Louisiana, Georgia, Oklahoma, Mississippi.

SRC Fund Raising

Bishop Robert M. Brooks
631 Baronne Street
New Orleans, La.

My dear Bishop Brooks:

In the Council's grave financial need, I took occasion the other day to ask President Dent to name for me two or three people in New Orleans who might be able to find $250.00 for the Council. You will see from the enclosed that Dr. Howard Odum of the University of North Carolina has given us $250.00, conditioned upon our finding nine-nine other southerners who would give us a like amount. We are satisfied that with greatly increased help from within the South, we can again get substantial contributions from certain of the foundations.

I send you a memorandum that will tell you more at length about the Council. I know that the Methodist Churches in various branches have already assisted the Council considerably, and I know also that there are many many calls upon such resources as you can muster. Nevertheless, I hope, earnestly, that it will be possible for you to undertake the responsibility for a contribution to the Council's work.

I am sorry that in a visit to your office the other day I did not have the good fortune to catch you there. I enjoyed, however, a fine conversation with Mr. Taylor of the Advocate.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell
Executive Director

901 North Claiborne Street
New Orleans, La.

Dear Mr. Lewis:

I greatly appreciated your kindness the other day in giving me an opportunity to talk with you about the Southern Regional Council.

Here is a long memorandum that will tell you--if you have the time to look through it--of the sort of things the Council does.

Mr. Dent At Dillard will speak warmly of us I am sure. Your own New Orleans Committee is now a close affiliate of the Council.

The newspaper account from the New York Times will explain to you Dr. Odum's $250.00 campaign to aid the Council. It is of the very greatest of importance to us to bring up the number of contributors of that amount. We are satisfied that in that way we can show substantial additional southern support and will be able to get large sums again from various of the Foundations as a result.

We do earnestly request your kindness in sending us a check that will add another to the growing number of southern persons concerned for interracial progress in the South and who are willing to help in that way.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell
Executive Director

Dear Dr. Dent:

I had a most pleasant visit with Mr. Lewis and felt honored to have made his acquaintance. He said he would consider our request.

We need his help desperately, and I do hope he will give it. Enclosed is a copy of my letter to him.

I missed Bishop Brooks though I talked with people in his office. I have written him as enclosed.

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

3320 GLOUCESTER ROAD RICHMOND 22, VIRGINIA

A Council to attain, through research and action, the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South.

February 20, 1950

TO MEMBERS OF THE BOARD:

This is to report to you following the meeting of the Executive Committee held pursuant to the directive given by the Board at its last meeting, November 8, 1949, which was: "The Board upon motion directed that the present staff be given assurance through January 31, 1950, the Executive Committee to meet as early as practicable in January and determine on behalf of the Board what further steps should be taken."

You will recall that we began last year with a deficit of around $12,000. Review by the Executive Committee of the audit for the year, ending December 31, showed:

$53,033.71	- income
46,318.38	- expenditures
$ 6,715.33	- income over expense
269.99	- cash on hand
3,549.39	- accounts payable ($2,189.42 of which due printer)

Other obligations outstanding at the close of the year:

$ 2,600.00	- commitment to continue for a second year the two-year project for home town self-surveys
1,500.00	- loan from Executive Director
3,500.00	- accrued salary to Thomas F. Byrd

It should be pointed out that in an effort to raise sizable funds for the Council, Mr. Byrd is giving his services to us through the middle of April on an accrual salary basis. With that in mind, you will see we closed 1949 with current accounts payable and other obligations totalling $11,149.39.

Since reduction of its staff in October, the Council has been operating on approximately $3,000 a month, as against $4,500 previously. The Executive Director considers that staff is now at the minimum for the Council to continue in its present form. Therefore, to carry on at our present level of operation for the current year would require $36,000. To this would be added the foregoing obligations carried over from last year, together with salary for Mr. Byrd through April 15.

After hearing from Mr. Byrd and from members of the Committee on progress made toward raising funds for the Council, it seemed reasonable to assume that in the coming few months the Council should receive around $19,000 from foundations, religious denominations, and individuals; and over the remainder of the year not less than $8,000 from dues, sales, and customary annual donations. The Committee took note also of a reasonable anticipation that quite a large sum would be available to the Council at a later date not known.

Under these circumstances, the Executive Committee, acting for you, authorized the continuance of the Council at its present level of expenditures through April 30. The Committee is to meet again on March 31 and will report to you its review of the situation at that time. The Committee has directed, if the situation has not greatly improved, a meeting of the full Board be called for Saturday, April 22.

Please reserve that date for the contingency that the Board may be called to meet at that time.

While the Executive Committee did not say so, I may be pardoned as president in adding a plea that you, as a Board member, take every possible step toward increasing the Council's income between now and March 31.

Sincerely,

Paul D. Williams
President

Mrs. Cornoria D. Johnson
Urban League
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

Dear Mrs. Johnson:

I suppose that you are acquainted with the work of the Southern Regional Council in respect to its efforts to promote better interracial understanding. I do not know if the officers of this organization have contacted you at any time or not. However, as a member of its board of directors representing Oklahoma, I try to find various leads and trace them down to their roots.

You probably know that the Southern Regional Council is the successor to the Interracial Commission which was set up many years ago. Putting these two groups together chronologically, we can say that the Council has a rather long and active history in an attempt to bring about interracial cooperation. It never has been an organization "lousy" with money and at the present time its situation is precarious, although not hopeless. The fact is that it had to absorb a deficit partially in 1949 and began the current year somewhat in the red.

You know, too, that numerous organizations, including some of the endowed universities, have felt the pinch of rising costs and lowered interest rates. High income taxes have impaired the philanthropic proclivities of people who were once supporters of the Council and similar agencies. Our contributors have not been exclusively the wealthier people but have been numbered among people of small means to a large extent. It has been a sacrifice for many of them to give anything.

Since you have had extensive experience in procuring funds for the Urban League, I wonder if you have any suggestions of names of persons whom we could induce to make $10 and $25 contributions, who have not gone their limits already. The Council has decided to try to push as far as possible its efforts to procure a great increase in the number of $10 memberships. If you have such suggestions, we shall be grateful to you for them.

I know that you have your hands full, as do the rest of us. It is always busy people who do things. There are some people, too, who take advantage of small doubtful disputations as reasons for not helping us when otherwise they could. Particularly, we have been criticized by prominent southern people for taking an evolutionary in place of a revolutionary point of attack. We believe in the educational approach, and we think that we have done much to check the practive of lynching, and probably in stemming the rise of terrorism, such as followed the Civil War and World War I through education. We know that others have helped too. Yet some people criticize us, and probably consider us a menace, for having gone as far as we have. That is to be expected.

Any moral or material support you can muster for the Council will be appreciated.

Sincerely yours,

O. D. Duncan, Head
Department of Sociology and Rural Life

What Kind of South Do You Want
Both Herald Tribune stories
Memorandum

October 5, 1950

American Unitarian Association
45 Beacon Street
Boston 8, Massachusetts

Dear The Unitarians:

Here is a useful Southern organization much in need. I know it will take some time to unravel all that would be required to get some financial help from the Church, but I would like to put in this letter to ask for us to be thought about.

I could send you reams about the Council. For convenience, here is a leaflet, What Kind of South Do You Want, with a little, and a couple of good newspaper stories with more, and a fresh memorandum with a lot.

We had a backlog of support for many years from the Julius Rosenwald Fund. Ordinarily it was about $25,000.00 a year. That is gone, as you know. We have always had an important amount reaching us from some of the national Church bodies. The Methodists put in nearly $3,000.00 a year. The Southern Presbyterians and the Southern part of the Episcopal Church give us small but welcome amounts. We have had substantial personal support from two leading Catholic dignitaries. This year the American Friends Service Committee has unprecedentedly helped this non-Quaker organization.

We are at work at many of the things which the Unitarians in their slender Southern membership are also at work upon.

I would be grateful for reference of this letter to whatever Board would be appropriate and for word from them as to when and how I should get our case before you.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell

Mr. Paul D. Williams
President
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
63 Auburn Avenue, N. E.
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Williams:

Your description of the work of the Council was very interesting. As Mr. Walton indicated to you we feel obliged to limit the company's contributions to a very few national philanthropies such as the Red Cross and a carefully screened list of projects centering in our plant towns. As you are very likely aware most publicly owned companies make contributions only by vote of their boards and boards usually feel the necessity of some policy to guide their actions in this regard.

The thoughts that were expressed to you on your visit continue to prevail and we find ourselves unable to make the donation that you request. We were pleased to see you here and regret that we cannot satisfy the purpose of your visit.

Yours very truly,

Mr. Dameron Black, Secretary
The Emily and Ernest Woodruff Foundation
Trust Company of Georgia Building
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Black:

As President of the Southern Regional Council, I wish to appeal to the Emily and Ernest Woodruff Foundation for a grant of $5,000.00 to the Council.

I attach a memorandum which sets out in considerable detail the organization and work of the Council. The personnel of its Board of Directors and officers you will find listed in the leaflet called "What Kind of South do You Want". I am having the Atlanta office deliver the various publications to accompany this letter.

In addition, you will find a copy of the audit for last year and of the U. S. Treasury's letter establishing tax exemption.

Our Council tries to deal soberly and constructively in areas of Southern life where agitation is great. It is not easy to get support for the middle course which the Council pursues. I appeal therefore the more earnestly to your Board for the invaluable aid they can give to a statesmanlike cause.

Sincerely,

Paul D. Williams

Mr. Paul D. Williams
3320 Gloucester Road
Richmond 20, Virginia

Dear Paul:

I have done the best I could about the letters to Dameron Black. I just forgot to get it moving before I went to New York. Then there was nobody in the office (all gone to the Florida meeting) and I had to delegate to John Griffin. As soon as I got back, I jumped on it myself.

Bishop Moore. He has a request before the same meeting for the Woodruff Foundation to assist Young Harris College in North Georgia, a Methodist college. That makes it difficult for him to write on our behalf at this time. But he is almost every day in conversation with Dameron Black. The Bishop promised John Griffin several days ago, and me today, that he would within the course of this week talk with Dameron Black on our behalf, and talk urgently.

Patterson at Tuskegee. He is abroad, but the Institute is being run in his absence by Mr. Gomillion, who promised us by telephone several days ago that he would write forthwith strongly on our behalf to Dameron Black.

Ralph McGill. Promised me in person ten minutes ago that he would at once write a strong letter.

Goodrich White. John Griffin has been working on it and finally got to him this morning. White has a large request before them for Emory and has besought them on behalf of two or three non-Emory causes lately, so is most skittish. John will talk to White again tomorrow and try to get something done, but it is difficult for John, sometime White's Executive Assistant, to move John's boss, and, John having done what he can, it is likewise most difficult for me to intervene. I doubt that we will end up with a letter from Goodrich White.

So we deliver two and a half out of four.

I have heard from Brooks Hays that he has written Governor McMath.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell

Nov. 18, 1950

Dear George,

Delighted at the good news from Marshall Field. This will help our printing bill for next year.

I got off the material to the Woodruff people today. Tomorrow I'll get Spaulding's letter off after dictating a personal letter to him. I think you assembled the stuff admirably and I hope your material plus my visit with Spaulding pays off. I have a friend in N. Y. who knows Spaulding quite intimately and he has promised to write an urgent letter.

It is urgent that we get fervent letters endorsing our request for help from the Woodruff Foundation from the people Spaulding recommended, namely, Bp. Moore, Ralph McGill, and the Pres. of Emory. Please implore all of them to write urgent letters. I will drop a note myself to Ralph McGill. If you can see these people personally I am sure it will help. You can tell them that Spaulding told me our chances would be enhanced if I could get their recommendations. Time is of the essence so the letters must be mailed pronto. Please tell me how you fare with them. I have a feeling, I hope I'm right, that Spaulding will support our request.

Heard Card. Spellman would be in Washington last week so I went up hoping to see him. I succeeded and I feel hopeful that he will give us the same contribution, $1000, again next year. If it comes, it should come in January. On the strength of Card. Spellman's contribution I believe Card Stritch will also come across, but, probably not until later in the year.

Please send the material I requested concerning Chas. Johnson of Fisk. I'll be home all this week, until Nov. 26.

I had a good talk with Wheeler during our meeting and begged him to get busy on Independent Aid. Glad something

Thanks for yours of November 20 with the enclosures. I have read them and the job is well done. Perhaps your application has been received too late for immediate consideration. The endorsements that it receives from the persons I mentioned to you and the sincerity of their endorsements or, should I say, the strength of their endorsements will have quite a bearing on the matter.

I return the clipping from the Columbia State.

Personal wishes.

Dear Mr. Henninger:

My friend, Frank Fager, tells me you are a good and understanding person and are about to put a new enterprise in Mississippi.

He would like for you to know about the point of view and work of the Southern Regional Council. To that end, I send you a small bundle of things which you may possibly find time to look through.

The Council has a substantial membership in Mississippi, organized as the Mississippi Division of the Southern Regional Council. The Chairman is Mr. John Long, who is president of an excellent school for Negro boys some distance outside Jackson. I am sure that Mr. Long and any of the other members of the Mississippi Division would be happy to be of any possible service to you.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell

Dear George:

There is a member of my Board by the name of Lawrence Henninger, who is president of Strutwear, Inc., which is a manufacturer of hosiery and lingerie.

I understand Strutwear is opening a plant in Mississippi. Among other things, I thought you might like to do would be to send Mr. Henninger some copies of the "New South". I think he would be willing to subscribe after you send him a few teasers. If you have the occasion to meet him, I know you will find a very forthright and cooperative person with whom to work.

Yours very sincerely,

Dear Mr. Seibels:

I suppose that the Southern Regional Council, like the Red Cross or any other good cause, will be forever passing the hat among its friends, in which number you are conspicuous for sustained interest and generosity.

The Council barely keeps its head above water and travels from day to day largely upon faith in the devotion which intelligent men have to its principles.

I am to attend a meeting in Atlanta on December 16, at which stock will be taken of the situation and work for the ensuing year planned. Would it be possible for you to help again? Of course you know such contributions are deductible for income tax purposes.

As a purely personal note, I should like for you to know how thankful the alumni are that you continue to serve on the University's Board of Trustees.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Mr. Schaeffer:

You will remember that I wrote to Mr. Harold C. Letts to ask about some help to the Council from the Lutheran Church as a whole. He was kind enough to send me a list of head people in the various synods and to review a draft of a letter which I have subsequently sent to the President and the Chairman of the Social Missions Committee in each of the synods in the South.

Mr. Harold A. Wolff has very kindly replied under date of December 8 from Laurel. He was doubtful that his synod could do anything immediately, but was interested in recommending a contribution. He said he would be in touch with you for further information about the Council.

I know that you know we will all be grateful for whatever it may be possible for you to do.

Though 50 for '51 has been disappointing so far, I hope that the first report sent you the other day will stimulate others. How sweet a thing for Mississippi to be at the head of the list. And so far ahead. Yet still, the goal, you remember, was $50,000.00 from 50 for '51.

Mr. George S. Mitchell
Executive Director,
Southern Regional Council, Inc.;
Atalanta, Georgia.

Dear Mr. Mitchell,

Yours of the 30th of November received, and wish to state that I shall bring the matter before the Executive Committee of the Mississippi Synod of the United Lutheran Church, when it meets on January 17, 1951.

I doubt very seriously that we shall be able to do anything in a tangible way to bring forth immediate results in the form of a contribution, but will have to make a recommendation to the Synod, for such. We have such a limited budget to operate on, and have no provisions for such work, important and beneficial as they maybe.

You can rest assured that I will do all in my power to make some kind of contribution to the work that is being done so effectively by the Southern Regional Council, and you will know of the progress made along that line, before the end of the month of January 1951.

Thanks for the literature, and I shall confer with Mississippi's representative, the Rev. Dr. H.B. Schaeffer about this matter, to be better prepared for presentation to the Executive Committee and others that might be available for a contribution in some way and form, to the Council.

With best wishes for success,

I am,

Yours truly,

FUND RAISING SUGGESTIONS MADE AT THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING, 3/3/51.

Mr. Williams proposed that at some time when a large pamphlet is to be issued, Mr. Palmer, of the Kingsport Press, should be asked to print it for the Council free of charge, or at least at cost; he has done that for other organizations in lieu of making contributions. Mr. Williams further offered to write Mr. Palmer about it when the time came. Mr. Christopher said he was sure that Lucy Mason, who knows Mr. Palmer well, would be glad to call or write him.

Mr. Christopher suggested approaching the Industry-Union Councils, whose director is Allen Heywood. He thought that individual Councils would give small donations to SRC. He suggested that Dr. Mitchell see Jack Kroll, who could get him in to see Heywood. The proper procedure would be for Heywood to send letters to all the offices of the Councils saying that SRC is on the list of approved organizations; an appeal by letter should then be sent from SRC to all Councils. When the time came to write the letters, Mr. Christopher offered to help, and also promised to write a personal note to all the Councils.

Mr. Christopher suggested appealing for contributions to the Ford local at Memphis, Firestone at Memphis, International Harvester, and the Alcoa local at Maryville (Tenn.). Some of them, he said, have as much as $50,000 in the treasury.

Dr. Charles Johnson inquired whether the Council had any approach to college community funds. Dr. Mitchell told of the success of the Emory University Community Chest in raising money for the Council. He thought that Mr. Gardner, who had headed the Emory campaign, might write to other colleges if the Council would type the letters for him.

Dr. Charles Johnson suggested an approach to the Marshall Field Fund on the basis of their "causelessness" since the closing do n of the ACRR.

Dr. Clement mentioned the existence of a Rosenwald Family Fund in Philadelphia, headed by Lessing Rosenwald, which recently gave $10,000 to the NAACP. Mr. Lessing Rosenwald has been working with the Displaced Person program.

Dr. Clement mentioned Mr. Thomas Morgan, of Sperry Gyroscope.

Dr. Charles Johnson spoke of the effectiveness of dinner meetings as fund-raising devices, particularly in New York. He thought it would be possible, with the right kind of backing, to raise a considerable sum by this method; he offered to help plan such a meeting.

The consensus of the Committee favored exploring the possibility of such a meeting, perhaps for Southerners living in New York. It was thought that Marshall Field would be willing to sponsor it, either in Chicago or New York, or at least to cooperate. Dr. Clement suggested getting two or three noted people to make the after-dinner speeches.

Mr. Will ams proposed, in addition, that prominent people who have their roots in the South be asked to call a smaller meeting of Southern-born New Yorkers to hear about the Council's work. The name of Stark Young was suggested by Chas. Johnson as a possible sponsor.

Mr. Haas suggested approaching Mr. Albert Lasker for a contribution. He is a Texan, the son of Morris Lasker, whom Mr. Haas knew before his death.

Mr. Haas also agreed to write Mr. Alfred May, of Ford, telling him of his acquaintance with the Council.

Mr. Wright inquired whether the Southern Society of New York, and similar groups in other cities, might be approached on the possibility of inviting Dr. Mitchell to address them on the Council. Dr. Mitchell undertook to follow up this suggestion.

Dr. Guy Johnson said that there was available at Chapel Hill a list of Southerners in Who's Who. It was thought that they might be approached for contributions.

It was suggested that International Harvester be approached for a grant. Dr. Charles Johnson said that Sara Southall (4901 Ellis Avenue, Chicago) would be able to get Dr. Mitchell in to see Fowler McCormick, who he thought would be well disposed toward the Council.

Dr. Charles Johnson mentioned that a vice-president of Intl. Harvester, named Archer, was a friend of Mr. Palmer of the Kingsport Press. Mr. Archer is probably closer than anyone else at Intl. Harv. to the development of Southern plants. He thought that he would be a good person to reach, along with Fowler McCormick.

Mr. Haas mentioned the Alfred Sloan Foundation.

Mr. Wright mentioned Mr. ---------- (the man in N. C. who had been thought to be dying.)

Mr. Williams mentioned General Mills. Dr. Mitchell said that the Council had had some contact with them, but had not succeeded in getting any money from the Atlanta office.

Dr. Charles Johnson suggested that in Chicago Mr. Williams see General Wood, of Sears Roebuck, who controls a fund given through Sears Roebuck stores in various communities.

Another person recommended by Dr. Charles Johnson was Mr. Sloan, president of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

Mr. Williams suggested the name of Charles Taylor, the new president of the Metropolitan Insurance Company, who is the brother of Mr. Williams' next door neighbor.

Dr. Clement said that the NAM has a committee of industrialists and educators to examine what can be done to aid private education.

Mr. Williams said that his own company maintains a fund of $200 a year. For the past five years the grant has gone to Mercy Hospital in Chicago. This year, on his recommendation, the fund was transferred to the Council.

Mr. Christopher mentioned an official of Allis-Chalmers (name not specified) as a University of Alabama graduate.

Dr. Charles Johnson said that the new president of the Chrysler Corporation is a Texan. Mr. Kelly, of Chrysler, who brought him to the company, is a member of the Fisk Board of Directors. Dr. Johnson promised to find his name.

People Mr. Wms. was to see in New York:

ILGWU - to see them about the grant SRC has applied for.

Mr. Christopher said that Jacob Potofsky would be in Atlanta shortly, and promised to see him in Knoxville about the Council.

Mr. Williams thought the NCCJ would be willing to let the $500, originally granted for the Rock Hill Survey, be applied to a survey in another community, and promised to talk with NCCJ people about it.

Dr. Clement suggested writing Mr. John Fox, a Southerner living in New York, who he thought would give the Council $500. Mr. Wms. promised to see Mr. Fox if GSM woild write him. Dr. Clement also suggested Mrs. Lillian Manger, a Kentuckian, who owns the Vanderbilt Hotel, and Mr. Wms. undertook to see her.

Mr. Wright suggested that Mr. Wms. see Archer M. Huntington in New York (owner of the Newpoert News Shipbuilding Company). He has done much for the Negro people in his neighborhood. He is the son of Collis P. Huntington, who was a great friend of Hampton and other Negro colleges.

Dear Mrs. Smith:

I am sure that you must be familiar in a general way with the work of the Southern Regional Council. It was created some ten years ago; its membership is composed of Negro and white citizens of the South; it has never practiced segregation in its meetings or office personnel, and it has consistently and successfully striven to create a public opinion in the South which would provide a sure base upon which the equal rights of all citizens may rest.

Since the liquidation of the Rosenwald Fund, which had given the organization a considerable part of the funds which made its work possible, it has had to rely upon individual contributions from liberal friends of the cause of legal and political equality of all citizens.

Even enemies and critics of the organization, of which there are many in high Southern political circles, give it credit for having greatly aided in securing employment of Negro policemen and firemen throughout the South; bringing about repeal of the poll tax; having the Democratic primary thrown open to Negro voters; accomplishing the appointment of Negroes to important policy-making boards and commissions; eradicating lynching; improving conditions of employment and housing and, generally, bringing the status of the Negro more nearly to the level of the white citizen.

It is a matter of some pride to me that I have been for some time a member of its board of directors and, consequently, am familiar with its financial needs. Indeed, my embarrassing non-attendance on board meetings of the Penn School has been largely due to my feeling that the work of the Southern Regional Council was of such importance that it should occupy a primary position in my loyalties.

I hope that the program of the Council, as well as its necessities, may appeal to you as justifying as large a contribution as you feel in position to make. Contributions have been ruled to be deductible for income tax purposes. If such is your feeling, your check may be made payable to Southern Regional Council, Inc., and forwarded either to me or to the Atlanta office, which is located at 63 Auburn Avenue, N. E.

With appreciation in advance for any contribution which you may feel in position to make, I am,

Dear Dr. Kelly:

I remember with a great deal of pride what fine work you did last year in raising funds for the Southern Regional Council, as well as in making your and Mrs. Kelly's own personal contribution.

The Council, like the Red Cross, Tuberculosis Association and churches, must be supported by voluntary contributions from those who believe in the things for which it stands. I know only too well that you are included in that number.

On December 16 I am to attend a meeting in Atlanta, at which the situation will be canvassed and the work of the Council mapped for the ensuing year. It would be heartening to all of us if you and your friends could repeat your splendid contributions of last year.

It must be obvious to any intelligent observer that there have been substantial accomplishments in all of the enterprises in which the Council has been engaged. The appointment of Negro policemen at Conway was a rather bold step when it was taken by Dr. Busbee and city council. Now you will note that it is being done as a matter of course throughout the South. Accomplishments elsewhere, while not so concrete, may be directly traceable to the influence of this group.

You no doubt know that such contributions are deductible for income tax purposes.

Yours sincerely,

Mr. E. C. Wall

Dear Mr. Wall:

I press upon you again the claims of the Southern Regional Council, contributions to which are, by the way, deductible for income tax purposes.

Surely no salesmanship is required. If you have been an ordinarily consistent reader of the daily papers (particularly The New York Times or such magazines as Time, Newsweek or The New South), you have had borne in upon you the sane and constructive work which the Council is doing in the most delicate of all fields - that of race relations in the South. Its voice and influence have done much to dissipate the impression created by the Klan and Southern demagogues.

I think, largely because of your mother's influence, and unlike so many of your colleagues in the timber industry, you were able to admire Mr. Roosevelt because you realized that, by keeping to the left of center, he gave us a peaceful revolution instead of one which might have been accompanied by violence. The Council, as I view its work, has contributed to securing the same result in the field in which it operates, recognizing that change must come and trying to make the change a relatively painless process. Appointment of Negro policemen, members of school boards and the like are now made naturally by Southern cities and towns, whereas a few years ago such a course struck terror to official hearts.

The Council is always up against it for funds. It has no large benefactors and must depend upon enlightened Southerners of means to see that its work does not lag.

I am to attend a meeting in Atlanta on December 16 and hope to be able to report at that time contributions, yours included, which will enable it to plan its work for the ensuing year.

With my thanks in advance for whatever you may feel able to do, and with kind personal regards, I am,

Yours sincerely,

A possible aid—Mrs. Luke Wilson, daughter of Woodward, of Woodward & Lothrop. Extremely rich, home in Bethesda. Unfortunately, a great Wallaceite.

Maybe Milton Starr, brother of Alfred Starr, would be a proper sponsor. What does George Stoney say?

3—Memo on Washington Meeting

At AAUW, Flemmie Kittrell arranged for me to consult Dr. Helen Bragdon, who is executive director. 1634 Eye St., NW. Bragdon shooed me to Mrs. Edith H. Sherrard, queen lady of their Social Studies. The Lady Edith thought my plans wise, and had not much advice.

Confirm early with Flemmie Kittrell the date tentatively put down on her book as Friday, November 14.

An active and liberal-spirited Jewish lady—Mrs. Wabnig. Worked with WILPF. Flemmie Kittrell.

A top lady to arrange meeting—Mrs. Lester Newman—a Jewess, praised by Flemmie Kittrell.

Mrs. Dorothy Robinson, from the eastern shore of Maryland, and therefore faintly Southern. Influential with wealthy people. Husband pastor of a progressive Methodist Church. Flemmie Kittrell agreed that Mrs. Robinson is so identified with particular causes, as, for instance, peace, that she would not be the most useful one to summon. A longtime resident of Washington.

The Unitarians have an excellent Meeting House.

Dear George M.,
This silence, on Nick's and mypart, does not imply non activity on behalf of the Southern Regional Council. But fitting that in, with the other things, has caused us to postpone writing a letter. Also, we wanted to have more to report. I felt too, that we ought to wait until close to the first of November to send the invitations, which we have done. We are not through yet, but to date we have nabbed Albert Deutsch who we will bring to dinner with us, and have asked Carroll Kilpatrick, who is now editorial writer for the Washington Post, to attend the dinner. He is to let Nick know tomorrow whether he can come. Otherwise, our guestslist is for the meeting only, and includes a motly crew of liberals, Southerners, newspaper and radio people. Nick asked Martin Agronsky and Alfred Friendly, and we will add Marquis Childs and Alan Barth and M.L. Wilson--doing a telephone call and an invitation on each. People ought to know more about the work you are doing. Of course, asking them doesn't mean they will get there, but it's worth a try, we think, since one or the other of us knows each of them.I think your timing for it is excellent, in that with the election out of the way, the load of meetings will be lessened, and people ought to be ready to get back to things that have to go on whether the Republicans or the Democrats win. Darn this paper. I had to buy it from a little neighborhood boy who was solicit-ting orders in order to save for a bike. Speaking of children, ours are fine. It seems to me that Nash, especially, gets more responsible and responsive every day. He is out in front now sweeping the walks and porch as part of his household assignment, and for a whole month now , he has done all of the things he is supposed to do like make his bed and pick up the bathroom etc. without complaint. Little did I think, a few years ago, that I would ever regard such performance as a major victory. I do now, believe me. Which brings me to another household matter that I have long wanted to write to Alice about. The Osnaburg (if that's the way you spell it) arrived, and is simply excellent for the purpose. I shrunk it and ironed it, and just yesterday got to the point of cutting the pieces off for curtains. I expect to finish one pair today. I am glad I bought so much. A friend in Garr ett Park and another in New York are using the rest. Please tell Alice how very much I appreciate her efforts, and apologize for my delay in writing. I am sorry. I keep thinking that eventually, I will learn how to do all of these household things more efficiently, and that there will be more time. I hate to wait until the children are 18 before reading another book! Herblock (who I shall also ask to your meeting) gave me a copy of his wonderful new one, and so far I am on page 22! I start to read it at night in bed and can never stay awake beyond 3 or 4 pages! We will report all of our final information on your meeting to Mary Stoney, who is compiling the full list of guests. I will bring this letter to a close, and we all look forward to seeing you the 13-14. Please give my very best wishes to Alice, and to the girls,

We all have the warmest gratitude to you both for kind arrangings and much help in connection with the Washington meeting. It was a delight to see so many friends, new and old. Seventy-seven was a whopping audience. And the $450-odd the meeting raised was a tremendous contribution to our work.

Truly nice to have the dinner and the rest of the evening with you. I only wish there could have been more time for real visiting.

Hi! What a tough business to take you away at the last minute. I hope you got along all right.

We thought the meeting was pretty good. Some 77 people came (though, Washington-wise, half were late), and they chipped in $1.50 or so. I think some more will come later. I poured the usual speech on them, and they all had a good time chatting together afterwards.

Dear H. L.:

John Rust came by on Friday, December 12, on his way down to Pine Bluff. I was in Raleigh for a meeting of our North Carolina people, but our secretary-treasurer, Katherine Stoney (George's sister) had a good, long talk with John Rust and, I am sure, gave him a clear idea of the Council. My acquaintance with Rust goes eighteen years back, and I haven't seen him since, but I remember him as a mighty good guy.

I do hope he will help us. According to Katherine Stoney, he seemed well disposed, but, as you said, he's got immediate legal problems that hold him up.

I will try to plan things so that I get to see him in the next two or three weeks.

I don't see my way to putting before the Robert Marshall Civil Liberties Trust a project that would have much chance of arousing their interest. This is really race relations, and I can't warp a considerable part of it around to fit what they would almost certainly want. But I thank you greatly for talking to Pat and for making the suggestion.

Do stop when you are down this way. There are so many things we could helpfully talk about.

Dr. George S. Mitchell, Executive Director
Southern Regional Council
63 Auburn Ave. N.E., Room 432
Atlanta 3, Ga.

Dear George:

I hope that John Rust got by Atlanta to see you. He did indicate that he was fearful of making any sort of grant that might be considered controversial until after a case in court is decided in Pine Bluff early in January. However, maybe you can work out something that will provide some money for your work. If he fails to get by Atlanta, I would suggest that you see him some time soon.

I happened to mention to Pat Jackson that I was trying to get Rust to make a grant to the Southern Regional Council and he said that if you had a project that was concerned with civil liberties, it might be possible for the Robert Marshall Civil Liberties Trust to make you a grant for that purpose. However, they have a narrow interpretation of civil liberties so such a proposal would have to be directed solely on that angle. So far they have refused to make grants to underwrite economic action leading to defense of civil rights.

While I do not know enough about your program to suggest a project, perhaps an expansion of the work the church women do in prevention of lynchings, etc., if fully described, might be considered. Of course there may be other angles you could work out. At least if the Trust made a grant, the results would be what counted as far as they are concerned, not just how you spent the money.

Pat says the Trustees are to meet between the 15th. and 31st. of December. The address of the Marshall Civil Liberties Trust is 150 Broadway, New York, Mr. James Marshall, Chairman. They require 5 copies of an application. Gardner Jackson (Pat) is a Trustee and if he gets an advance copy he will support your request. His home address is - 1410 29th. St. N.W., Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Deer:

Back in 1949 Brooks Hays told me that a friend of his in Little Rock, Mr. David Grundfest, might possibly be brought around to sufficient interest in the Southern Regional Council to make a money contribution to it. I wrote Mr. Grundfest a couple of times; but though my letters were courteously treated, the correspondence did not end in a contribution. I have conferred once or twice with Brooks Hays about the matter, and Brooks told me finally that the effort had not been wasted and that if we would continue to cultivate Mr. Grundfest, we might in the end be helped by him.

Now that we have a going Arkansas Division, I thought I would turn this matter over to you. It may be that by careful cultivation you could get Mr. Grundfest to make some contribution to the Arkansas Division.

I am disappointed, of course, but this has not been wasted time. When you are in Little Rock I want you to call on Mr. Grundfest, because this is a contact you should cultivate, and I think will lead to substantial assistance.

When will you be coming up to Washington.

Neither am I able to obtain any information about a publication called the NEGRO EDUCATIONAL DIGEST. It is unknown to the secretary of the association for Negro teachers in this State and is unknown to the reference librarian of Atlanta University, who consulted the 1950 volume of Aldrich's List of Periodicals. Chapel Hill, N. C.

Dear Dr. Will:

Warmest thanks for your letter of April 21 and all your most helpful planning. We would greatly like for Dr. Lawless and the A.M.A. to work the matter out.

You remember you asked two specific questions: (1)"Could this same group of women who propose to work on the ballot matter also, if necessary, work to help meet the result of a Supreme Court decision which might throw the whole school situation into great confusion?"

The answer is, yes, almost certainly. Mrs. Tilly would be greatly disposed toward doing that in any case. She did more than a year ago, at the expense of the Fellowship of the Concerned, journey herself, in company with three or four other key Southern white church women, to Charleston to sit in the court which heard the Clarendon County Case, and she and the other church women reported fully on it to their groups.

It must be stated, however, that, for the moment, the listed concerns of the Fellowship of the Concerned do not include the matter of the schools. And therefore it will be needful to summon within a few months' time (probably quite soon, in order to get ahead of the summer doldrums) another Southwide meeting of the Fellowship of the Concerned, in order that this interest can be officially added to the other interests of the body. In any case, what will need to be done is related to law enforcement anyway, and Mrs. Tilly anticipates no difficulty in picking up a subject which will be of pressing interest naturally.

(2) Does the Fellowship of the Concerned include Protestant, Jewish, and Catholic women?

The Fellowship of the Concerned has had only two Southwide meetings. At both we were all at the greatest of pains to be sure that a wide variety of denominational groups was represented. Several women unofficially representing the Catholic Women of the Diocese of Savannah-Atlanta were present at the first meeting, and I believe at the second. Both meetings had substantial representation from among Jewish women. Both meetings had wide representation from all the leading Protestant denominations. Thus, the organization centrally has always been inclusive of Catholic and Jewish women.

It must be said in all fairness that in small back communities in the South, where much of the work of the Fellowship of the Concerned is done, they use the women who are available and are interested. In many such communities there are very few Catholic or Jewish women, and in such communities those who have been asked to take action have been Methodists or Baptists or Presbyterians or members of some other Protestant group. Increasingly, however, the Fellowship of the Concerned, in all its local actions, springs into a wider circle of religiously inclined women, and it wishes centrally to be fully inclusive in all its local action.

I might say in passing that the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith has long worked in frequent consultation with Mrs. Tilly and the Fellowship of the Concerned, and the Council and Mrs. Tilly have for years worked closely also with the Catholic Committee of the South. I myself received only last Friday the 1953 award of the Catholic Committee of the South for helpfulness to good causes.

We are all delighted to have received over the last week a grant of $1,500 from the John Hay Whitney Foundation for Mrs. Tilly's work. That is a single grant whose expenditure in rapid order Mrs. Tilly has planned already, and if this wider program is to go through, she will need just about the four-year program of $4,000 a year which you and I discussed.

For other news, I report with pleasure also that the Field Foundation has renewed for 1953 its grant of $2,500 to underpin the publication of NEW SOUTH.

I am satisfied that Mrs. Tilly and her friends represent a great potential energy of helpfulness in the transition that is on us just now.

Sincerely,

Atlanta 3, Ga.

Dear George,

I passed through Atlanta yesterday en route from New Orleans and attempted to reach you by phone before I left New Orleans with the hope that we might have a little talk at the airport.

Several weeks ago you sent me some material about the work of Mrs. Tilley. I had a preliminary talk with the Sterns about this and they seemed doubtful about their undertaking it. I think I could have persuaded them, but I decided to follow another course.

I was in New Orleans over the weekend attending a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Dillard University. We have, on that Board, Dr. T. K. Lawless and Dr. Widenhouse, the Secretary of the American Missionary Association. I showed this material to each of these men. Dr. Lawless promptly agreed to put up $1000 for the travel item in the budget. Dr. Widenhouse said that this was a matter in which he and his Board was very much interested. He expressed a willingness to present to his Board a recommendation that they put up an additional $4000 to match Dr. Lawless's $1000 to cover this budget. Lawless is a member of that Board. Dent, who has great influence with them, urged the matter, and I fully expect that the Board will act favorably on it at an early meeting. Unfortunately, I did not find out the date when it will be officially possible for the Board to consider this.

In the meantime I wish you would send to me some additional clarifying information. 1. Could this same group of women who propose to work on the ballot matter also, if necessary, work to help meet the ~~confusion~~ result of a Supreme Court decision which might throw the whole school situation into great confusion. 2. You letter did not make it sharply clear that this group of women included protestant, Jewish, and Catholic. It would help if Dr. Widenhouse had information on these two points.

Of course I can't guarantee the additional $4000, but I have a basis for a very firm conviction that it will be forthcoming. If it does, I think this will be a much better way to have financed it than from the Edgar Stern Family Fund. I made it clear to each that it was for a four year period.

Greetings and best wishes,

Sincerely,
W. W. A.
Will W. Alexander

March 13, 1953

Dr. Will W. Alexander
RFD 3
Chapel Hill, N. C.

Dear Dr. Will:

There is a real opportunity to do something about spreading the use of the franchise in the Southern States. We were all impressed with the interest shown in the Council's January issue of NEW SOUTH on Negro voting. Here is a photostat carrying merely such clippings as happened to reach us. Now what follow-up in the next few years?

There are two problems: collecting the facts and getting action in local areas. We've got a plan for meeting both. I do wish you would see whether means can be found to get them under way.

For actual work at the problem out in the counties, I propose that we rely mainly on the church women. You are fully familiar with what the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching accomplished. That impulse continues today, organized as the Fellowship of the Concerned. Shortly after the report to President Truman on civil rights was made, we convened church leaders from all over the Southern States to talk about the import of that document. The following year at a similar meeting (at which Mrs. Roosevelt was the principal speaker) the women established the Fellowship of the Concerned to implement their interest in this field. It's a queer organization, without officers, with scarcely a treasury, but with remarkable interest and allegiance by the women. One of its programs has been to get women to sit in the local courts. They make their presence known to the judge, take notes if they wish, and do what they can to increase the dignity and even-handedness of local justice. A good many thousands of local church women have signed undertakings to do this, and many reports of members have come in of improvements resulting from so simple a practice.

The other more recent activity has been in connection with the Council's pamphlet RACE AND LAW ENFORCEMENT. The Woman's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist Church, for both the Southeastern and Southcentral Jurisdictions, somewhat over a year ago made it an official part of their program to have local committees of women carry RACE AND LAW ENFORCEMENT to sheriffs and police chiefs and discuss it with them. We have had written reports from 143 such visits, widely scattered in Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas. You get the flavor of the visits when I report what came in from three ladies from Claiborne County in South Mississippi: "Dear Mrs. Tilly. We took the little blue book to our sheriff. He said everything is all right. He is nice to colored, and all his deputies are nice to colored. But, Mrs. Tilly, could you send us one more copy of that little blue book to give to the night watchman at the jail?"

Recently, at the Conference of the Woman's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist Church (Southeastern Jurisdiction, Jackson Mississippi, February, 1953) the recommendations for Christian Social Relations in local church activity included the following:

IN THE COMMUNITY

It is recommended that:

1. Methodist women work unceasingly to eradicate prejudice and intolerance based on race, color, or religion which leads to humiliation to the individual and injustice to the group to which he belongs.

2. Local groups work to insure protection and justice for all peoples in their communities by:
   a. Supporting the principle of adequate training for law-enforcement officials.
   b. Becoming cognizant of court practices and procedures, particularly as they affect minority races and dependents.

IN THE NATION

It is recommended that:

1. We restudy and restate our beliefs concerning the basic foundations necessary to secure civil rights and civil liberties for all peoples. Conference and local secretaries may then plan the approach most applicable to their own situation.

These recommendations were adopted by the jurisdictional meeting. This program has its counterpart in that of the Fellowship of the Concerned, as will be seen in the attached leaflet. Under the heading "What We Can Do in Our Communities about the Vote" are listed:

1. Do our part to see that opportunity for registration and voting is legally and actually secure for all.

2. Oppose State re-registration measures that threaten the security of any voters.

Thus, there is both official and unofficial sanction among Methodists and those other church women reached by the Fellowship of the Concerned for direct local activity in increasing the use of the franchise.

This most useful and effective form of local implementing activity can be called into vigorous life at the expense of some travel and of numerous local conferences of the officers of the women's groups concerned. We propose that modest funds be provided to enable such travel by Mrs. M. E. Tilly of our staff and, at her discretion, the calling of such area and district conferences as would be best calculated to move the program ahead in selected parts of the South. Such a program would bring out quite widespread local effort. The women would make it their business to visit their boards of registrars and to influence them otherwise in extending the franchise to all groups within their counties. Nobody claims that efforts of this kind would show up in a matter of months. But carried forward during several years, it would have remarkable effect. No outsider coming into the counties with thin franchises could possibly produce the changes in local opinion and action that these locally resident women could make. And the effect in training local leadership would be not the less remarkable and valuable. This, then, gives a field force already rooted in local communities and willing to go to work in a most resultful way.

Willingness to go to work needs to be backed with facts. It would be the function of the Southern Regional Council to supply the facts. The late Dr. Luther Jackson, in Virginia, over a long period published annually an exact account of Negro voting, county by county, in that State. Professor Pierce, at Alabama State College at Montgomery, is compiling a similar record, county by county, for Alabama. We think that a reasonable amount of travel and diligence could obtain a similar county breakdown as to the extent of the franchise for most, if not all, of the Southern States. These figures, put on a map and shown to a district conference of church women, would start corrective programs in the areas most in need. The Council has the staff which could collect these facts and needs only some contribution toward sustaining the modest research and travel involved.

These two things could be done together for the following annual budget:

Travel for Mrs. M.E. Tilly, on behalf of the Fellowship of the Concerned	$1,000.00
Expenses of area conferences	1,500.00
Expenses of SRC in compiling the needed facts	2,500.00
Total	$5,000.00

We would like to be able to follow through on such a program for four years. The total cost, therefore, would be $20,000. We would be perfectly happy to have each year's renewal of such a grant be conditioned upon review of accomplishments and plans.

I enclose as exhibit material the photostat referred to above, some leaflets about the Fellowship of the Concerned, and various issues of NEW SOUTH which have, from time to time, touched upon related problems.

One further word. Various university groups are engaged upon long-range research in the field of Southern governmental reform. It would be our purpose to be periodically in touch with this work and to make possible such modifications in the program of the church women as would, from time to time, accord with the findings of the research study.

I do hope you will inquire about and see whether this proposal could be financed. Whatever else may be needed from the Council we would be glad to supply.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell
Executive Director

MEMO TO GSM RE FLORIDA FUND RAISING May 12, 1953

Gilbert McLemore, in charge of the housing office from Emory, called me while in Jamie Mackay's office and described two individuals in Florida who could be helpful:

1. Kendrick Guernsey was once asked to serve the Council in some way and is interested in our purposes. Executive Vice-President of Gulf Life Insurance Co. Past international president of Rotary. Chairman of the governors' committee on higher education a few years ago. (GSM thinks this was the group Mrs. Havens, and somewhat the Council, worked with.) Was one of the three directors of the State Highway Commission and is generally regarded as one of the most powerful men in the State. In 1947 called the first interracial meeting ever held in Jacksonville, relating to USO volunteer leadership. Has integrity and power. McLemore saw him December, '52, and Guernsey helped McLemore in a matter relating to the Protestant radio station. McLemore is a friend of the Methodist Bishop John Brancombe, who is attentive to McLemore's wishes. Bishop Juhan and Bishop Louthit both respect him. Lives in Orlando. Louthit knows him well.

2. Judge John Murphree, aged about 50. Lives at Gainesville. Says SRC was in touch with him in 1947. Was circuit judge for Northern Florida. His father was Chancellor Murphree, distinguished in Florida juridical history. Episcopalian, weighty man. Believed considerate on racial matters.

3. Bailey Odham of Sanford. 36 years old, young businessman and past State commander V. F. W. Ran against McCarth for governor and gave McCarty a very hard race indeed. Bailey Odham had the reputation of being fair on matters racial.

Dr. Will has an old association with Dr. Lawless of Chicago, young Negro Doctor, whose father, Rev. Lawless, worked for AMA for many years in the South. The young man has a rare intellect. New Orleans man. It was through the father that Dr. Alexander got his early contact with the Congregationalists. The son graduated in medicine at Northwestern, went to Vienna, and then to the faculty at Northwestern. Young Dr. Alfred Lawless has become Chicago's outstanding dermatologist. Earns $150,000 or $200,000 a year. General Leonard Wood's family are his patients. Very generous, and to miscellaneous causes. Young Dr. Lawless purchased for Dillard an adjoining piece of land, on which he helped finance a housing project that greatly helps the Dillard faculty. My Congregationalist friend could assist in an approach to Lawless. The young doctor is on Dillard's Board. GSM to write Dr. Will a high-lights letter, and Dr. Will will write Lawless and ask for a thousand dollars for SRC.

GSM should tell Theobald about the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen. Young Phil Stern could give HCF five hundred. Has a million. At 26, is director of research for Democratic National Committee. GSM should have young Phil Stern have lunch at the Cosmos Club.

MEMORANDUM October 28, 1957

FUND-RAISING ASPECTS OF NEW YORK TRIP
October 20-25, 1957

I. The Field Foundation

Talked with Max Hahn. He was both discouraged about the South and about the internal affairs of the Foundation. He said he literally didn't know whether they would have any funds for grants of any kind in the near future. However, he said that he was scheduling a board meeting very soon and that an application from SRC would be considered along with everything else. He is much concerned with projects that will influence the power structure without creating any controversy. I spent some time trying to interpret to him how some of SRC's activities do just this, but I'm not sure how much of it really registered. In any case, we should get a request in as soon as possible. Several of my advisers thought that it would be a great mistake to ask for less than $20,000 or $25,000, even though the prospect of getting such a grant at this time is practically non-existant. One suggestion was that we should ask for such an amount and state in the application that we realize that it may not be possible for the Foundation to give that much now; but, even though a much smaller grant would be all that is possible now, we would hope that the Foundation would consider the larger amount as soon as its circumstances permit.

II. The New York Foundation

Talked by telephone with David M. Heyman, who is a member of the family that established the Foundation, he is a trustee, and serves as an un-paid executive for the Foundation. Heyman was most friendly and encouraging. He is a good friend of Ken Clark's and knew that Ken is doing a research job in Little Rock for us. He suggested that I talk to Clark, but I was unable to reach him before I left New York. After some discussion of SRC's activities, Heyman suggested that we submit an application for general support. The application should be in duplicate, with two copies of our budget, showing expense and income for the last year and some of our foundation contributors. We should also send a copy of our tax exemption letter. The Board meets monthly, so that our request would receive early consideration. No amount was discussed. However, the Foundation is relatively well endowed, and we might realistically ask for $10,000 or $15,000. My guess is that, assuming favorable action, $10,000 is what we would get.

III. The Ittleson Family Foundation

I talked by telephone with Dr. Nina Ridenour, the executive secretary. She was polite but firm in her refusal to see me. She said that I should write her what SRC had in mind and she would then advise me whether there was any likelihood of a request from SRC being considered. She said that she was doubtful that our work would fall within the scope of the Ittleson Foundation. Altogether, pretty discouraging.

IV. West Coast Foundation Known to Hugh Moore of the AFSC.

In a talk with Alphonse Miller, fund-raiser for the AFSC, he mentioned a West Coast foundation that likes to give to controversial efforts. The idea seems to be that this foundation is really action-minded. He said that we would have to get the name of the foundation from another AFSC fund-raiser, Hugh Moore, who has handled negotiations with it. Frank Loescher said that he would undertake to get this information for us.

V. Katharine Taylor has two friends who are close to foundations with which we are dealing. One is Miss Helen Ross, a lay analyst of prominence in the psychiatric field, and a member of the Field Foundation board. The other is Paul McGhee, Dean of NYU General Education Division, 1 Washington Square North. He serves as a consultant to the New York Foundation and, according to Katharine Taylor, is in general an extremely likeable and sympathic person. Katharine can be expected to say a good word for us to both of these friends when she sees them.

VI. The Chace Fund

This is the Anna M. and Elizabeth H. Chace Fund, 1515 Cherry Street, Philadelphia. Harold Evans is chairman and Frank Loescher is on the board. This foundation is very close to the AFSC and most or all of its board members are Quakers. It gave $3,000 to Penn Community Services recently. Marion Wright is friendly with Harold Evans. Frank Loescher cannot play any active or initiating role, though of course he would support our request when it came before the board of the Fund. He suggests that the request might be signed by Marion Wright and sent by him to Harold Evans. Our request should stress that we work closely and cooperatively with the Southern office of AFSC, giving such illustrations as our cooperation on the North Carolina school project, that we exemplify reason and good will in our approach, that we are close to the Penn Community Center, and that we serve the religious groups in the South as coordinator, information center, supplying consultants, planning joint educational efforts by the various agencies, and so on. We might consider asking Tartt Bell to write a supporting letter. The next meeting of this foundation is on November 14th, which would require a request in by November 6th. The next meeting after that is January 9th, for which the request should be in no later than December 31st. The request should be submitted in 8 copies.

VII. The McGregor Fund, 2486 National Bank Building, Detroit 6, Michigan
William J. Norton, President (Beach, Consultant)

This foundation gave $20,000 to NAIRO for the internship project. They are apparently interested in professionalization of the human relations field. Frank Loescher thinks that perhaps they might be willing to consider an application for support of our interagency coordinating efforts. What is called for is an exploratory letter inquiring about the suitability of our submitting an application.

VIII. The Ella Lyman Cabot Trust

Dr. Gordon Allport of the psychology department, Harvard University, is the secretary. This trust gives to individuals rather than to groups or organizations. Some years ago, Emory Via received a fellowship from them to do labor education in the Atlanta area. Frank feels that they might entertain a request that was geared to the work of some individual, notably Mrs. Tilly. Richard Hocking of Emory University is close to this fund. We should discuss this with Emory. Loescher also stressed the desirability of our developing closer ties generally with Allport.

IX. The Richardson Foundation

This is the Richardson connected with the Vick Chemical Company. There seems to be no immediate proppect of our getting any help from the Foundation, since the Richardson who runs it is very conservative and has conservative Southern ties in North Carolina. However, Frank talked with a Mr. Frank R. Barnett, the director of research, who was personally sympathetic and suggested that at some later time the Foundation, under new leadership might help. Frank suggests that I write Barnett, send him background on SRC, and say I would like to see him the next time I am in New York. The address is: 122 East 42nd Street, Room 1708, New York 17, New York.

X. The Aaron Norman Family Foundation

David Freeman is serving as consultant to this foundation, the object being for him to systematize their giving. One of the things he is trying to do is to develop for them a comprehensive program in the field of human relations. He was to see last Friday members of the Norman family who live in Atlanta. I am personally acquainted with two of them - Mr. and Mrs. DeJongh Franklin. Several years ago, when the SRC was in dire shape, Franklin arranged for the Foundation to make a small emergency grant to SRC. Freeman will advise us of the possibilities here and of what we should do and when.

XI. The Benjamin Rosenthal Foundation

At Frank Loescher's suggestion, I got an appointment with Edmund A. Rosenthal, President of the Foundation, 600 Fifth Avenue, New York. Frank had talked with Rosenthal about another matter and had mentioned SRC to him. The Foundation gave $10,000 toward the support of the AFSC's North Carolina school project. Rosenthal was friendly and listened well, but expressed himself as doubtful of the importance of any voluntary activity in so big and complex a problem as segregation in the South. I gave him all our arguments. In the end, he agreed that I should write him what we have in mind and send him full particulars about SRC. He would consider the matter and advise as to whether a full blown application would be considered.

XII. The William C. Whitney Foundation

Mike Straight called just before I went to New York to ask whether we intended to request renewal of their present grant. He suggested that this be submitted within the next month or so and cautioned me that Roger Baldwin feels that the Fund for the Republic's grant to us makes it unnecessary for the Whitney Foundation to give further aid. Therefore, we should stress the needs of our organization.

XIII. The Fund for the Republic

I paid a courtesy call to the Fund and talked to Ed Reid, Ping Ferry, Frank Kelly, and Hallock Hoffman. Henseforth, Hoffman will be our liaison man at the Fund; he should receive all regular reports, correspondence pertaining to our grantee status, and so on. I discussed with Hoffman the question of the Arkansas emergency grant. There is a thousand dollars remaining which can be claimed for Arkansas, having been approved by the Fund's board for special work with the Western Arkansas counties. Hoffman said that it would be possible to obtain the additional thousand for other work in Arkansas, namely in Little Rock. But I must write (or call) Hoffman to this effect by November 1st. (Their board is meeting shortly thereafter.)

XIV. The Farfield Foundation

I had an interview with John Thompson, the executive secretary.

He expressed doubt that the Foundation would regard SRC's work as within its scope. However, the Foundation is interested in international matters and I talked at some length of our work with foreign visitors and the need for support of that function. Thompson suggested that I write him what we would do with additional funds, as well as what we have been doing in this area. He also suggested that I send a list of foreign visitors we have served for the last year or some such period. While he was not too hopeful, he said he would explore the matter with board members and see if their interest could be aroused. The Farfield Foundation is at 37 West 57th Street, New York.

XV. The Jacob R. Schiff Fund

The three trustees of this Fund are Dr. Buell G. Gallagher, P President, City College, New York 31, New York; Dr. Grayson Kirk, President, Columbia University, New York 27, New York; and, Mr. Edwin Wolf II, Curator, Pennsylvania Library, Ridgeway Library, Broad and Christian Streets, Philadelphia 47, Pennsylvania. I Talked with Dr. Gallagher, giving him a fairly full picture of SRC and its current activities and also leaving with him the voting study and South of Promise. He was noncommittal about our chances of getting aid from the Schiff Foundation, but was perfectly agreeable to the idea of our submitting an application and supplied me with the names and addresses of the other trustees. He said the application should be sent to each of them. In answer to my question, he said that there were no special policies about grants, except that they must be made within the continental United States. The Schiff Foundation is a liquidation job - that is, the trustees are spending all of the capital as quickly as they can find worthy objects to whom to give it. Gallagher said that there was very little of the money left. He, himself, is a former president of Talladega College and long identified with a liberal position on racial questions. I was left with the feeling that, if we submit a good application, he will support it.

XVI. The Rockefeller Brothers Fund

I spent a good deal of time with staff members of this Fund, mainly Montgomery Bradley and Harry Meserve. I also talked more briefly with the director, Dana Creel, and York Allen. They are considering a request for $8,000 from the Arkansas Council, which is supposed to have the blessing of Winthrop Rockefeller. They are concerned about their investigations in Arkansas, which seem to indicate that many people there feel that the Arkansas Council is lacking in leadership and imagination. The Arkansas request will be separately disposed of by the Fund. However, I was told in my second interview that the staff had decided that a request from the Southern Regional Council would be considered. This should be in by about December 15th. It should probably be a request for support to one or more specific projects rather than for general support. Bradley mentioned specifically consultant work with educators and with law enforcement authorities as areas in which he felt their board might be interested, though we may request aid for something else if we wish. Meantime, we should send earlier full information about SRC, including financial data, biographical data on board, our budget and other sources of support, including Southern. This may have to be sent in two installments, since our new board won't be complete for at least several weeks. The Rockefeller Brothers Fund is at 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York

XVII. The Phelps-Stokes Fund

I spent a good deal of time with Wilton Dillon discussing project items that are of mutual interest and might involve some support for SRC. Of immediate importance is the fact that the Phelps-Stokes board meets on November 20th and should have before it at that time a request of renewal of aid to Mrs. Tilly's program. This means that we should get this request in as soon as possible.

XVIII. The Christopher Reynolds Foundation

Unfortunately, I was not able to see Jack Clareman, the executive of this Foundation. We must sometime soon ascertain from him when our request for renewal of grant should be submitted and what SRC activities they would be likely to consider favorably. He wrote sometime back to say that they liked other activities of SRC better than our work with foreign visitors and would prefer that our next application be based on some other activity.

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL
Atlanta, Georgia

MEMORANDUM

November 12, 1957

Subject: Notes on the 1957 Fund-Raising Efforts.

1. During the calendar year 1956 the Central Office income, exclusive of all projects, was approximately $95,000. Of this amount $31,369 was the amount raised from [redacted] fund-raising sources. The remainder was provided by the Fund for the Republic either directly or indirectly. (app. 64,000)

2. For the fiscal year, October 1, 1956 - September 30, 1957, the Southern Regional Council income was $98,431. Of this amount $82,452 represents income from ~~former~~ fund-raising sources ~~situations~~. This increase over 1956 reflects considerable expended incomes from former sources and a substantial increase in new sources. For instance:

   FFR only 16,000

   A. Of the funds raised from foundations, 49% was contributed from new sources.

   B. Support from labor, while still small, has been increased by 22%.

   C. ~~10% of~~ Our 1957 church income ~~is from new sources~~. has increased 10%.

   D. Individual contributions to the Council have increased only approximately 10% over 1956. However, of the $4,434 contributed from individuals 70% of this amount represents new sources. Fund Drive [illegible] only

3. To continue the operation of the Council at the present level, it will be necessary, during 1958, to have a central office budget of approximately $112,000. Our estimation of expectable income during 1958 indicates that we will have to raise a minimum of $33,000 from sources now unforeseen. → This figure represents the minimum. To it must be added any aid to the state organizations after October 1, 1958.

4. On February 1, 1957, the Central Office had on hand $378.00. Thus, our fund-raising effort during the year has been under the unfortunate pressure of the absence of reserve funds. In essence, each month's payroll had to be raised before it could be met. This has led to some unfortunate economies and to under staffing. It is essential that we not operate under such pressures during 1958 if a stable program is to be maintained. During 1957 the emphasis was of necessity all too often on fund-raising rather than program. Substantial help is needed by the staff if this situation is to be avoided during 1958.

I. The Field Foundation

Talked with Max Hahn. He was both discouraged about the South and about the internal affairs of the Foundation. He said he literally didn't know whether they would have any funds for grants of any kind in the near future. However, he said that he was scheduling a board meeting very soon and that an application from SRC would be considered along with everything else. He is much concerned with projects that will influence the power structure without creating any controversy. I spent some time trying to interpret to him how some of SRC's activities do just this, but I'm not sure how much of it really registered. In any case, we should get a request in as soon as possible. Several of my advisers thought that it would be a great mistake to ask for less than $20,000 or $25,000, even though the prospect of getting such a grant at this time is practically non-existant. Program ideas...

1. Development of a network of lawyersin South with opportunity to specialize in the legal and administrative complexities within which human relations groups must work. A possible full-time coordinator. Advisory service to religious, intergroup, and other social action organizations that do not have a legal arm -- or none that includes this kind of specialty. Sympathetic local lawyers can't give sufficient time to this gratis. Grant to ACLU, AJCongress, or other suitable organization for this purpose? Southern interagency group to advise. Cooperation with NAACP and labor lawyers.

2. Whole function of secretariat for interagency cooperative effort in South. Demands on staff time, communications, preparation and distribution of materials, travel, and meeting arrangements.

3. Separate coordination of merit employment (AFSC, Urban League, NAACP, unions). Case development for PCGC, distribution of information on PCGC and practices, applicant recruitment and training for new opportunities, compiling record on extent of equal opportunity in federal employment.

4. Concerted (interagency) mapping out of fact-finding projects, each to be directed by an appropriate agency, but with cooperative support and evaluation of findings. Action-oriented, with special reference to Civil Rights Commission ~~and~~ Justice Department, ~~and~~ mass media, and agencies. Examples: Voting follow-up, violence and intimidation, jury selection, pro-segregation groups, press handling of desegregation story, followup of integration survey, police practices in desegregation situations, advance fact-finding on communities approaching desegregation.

5. Some way to increase constructive interpretation (enlightened self-interest) to power structure figures in South and their interactors nationally.

6. Official Southern propaganda. ~~Ann~~ Preparation of analyses and distribution of counter-material. To editors. Through mass media publicity. Through organizational channels.

MEMORANDUM April 18, 1961

To: LWD

From: HCF

Re: FUND-RAISING

FOUNDATIONS

Marion R. Ascoli Fund. -- Mrs. Ascoli is one of the Rosenwald daughters and the wife of Max Ascoli, publisher of the Reporter. Since the Rosenwald Fund was the first and for several years the principal benefactor of SRC, one basis for Mrs. Ascoli's interest is clear. Her assistance to the Council, however, was sporadic and token until I got to know her in 1957. My entree was through two friends -- Doug Cater and, separately, Ken Clark. (I think she and Ken have since fallen out over some factional dispute concerning child welfare in New York City.) Marion Ascoli is a very liberal and intelligent woman, sophisticated in the ways of philanthrophy. She likes straight-forward presentation and business-like accounting of expenditures and needs. Although her pledge of $1,000-a-year through 1965 is a modest one, keep in kind that she and her late sister gave major and unusual support to SRC for several years through the New York Fund for Children. If the need arose, and if she were properly approached, Marion Ascoli would probably do more, either through her personal foundation or through one of the other philanthrophies in which she is a principal. In any case, she should be kept informed, written to personally once and awhile, and perhaps visited every year or so.

The Field Foundation. -- There are several keys to this Foundation, of course. Morris Abram is on the board, as is Lloyd Garrison. Justine Wise Polier and Mrs. Field herself are the other two most influential board members. Adlai Stevenson is now virtually inactive, and may disappear from the scene entirely. The Field Foundation is undergoing re-organization, under which the Chicago and New York wings will be severed. This is suppose to mean a more dynamic and more liberal performance on the part of the New York Foundation, which is the one with which SRC is concerned. Although Maxwell Hahn, the Executive Vice President, is often described as a peculiar fellow, he is sympathetic to SRC, and a good relationship with him should be maintained. All formal approaches to the Foundation should be through Max. He has a very lively distaste for what he calls "end runs" -- that is, efforts to push a grant through by way of a board member. So, while Morris Abram can and should be briefed on requests, this should be done privately and confidentially, and all things proper should be done through Max. I hope that by the time this is typed we will have had word that the $25,000 grant for state councils has been renewed for two years. That will mean that both $25,000 grants will be up for renewal in two years. There is every reason to work for and hope for continued support on this scale. Incidentally, Max is one of the persons who often turn to me for advice or information on other grant requests. It would be good if you developed the same relationship with him.

Hopkins Charities Fund. -- We first learned of this one through Frank Loescher, who has received a small grant or two from it for his South Africa Exchange Program. The more important factor in our original grant, however, was a recommendation that Harry Ashmore gave in response to an inquiry from one of the Hopkins' board members. In any case, since that time we have used no intermediaries, but have dealt directly by correspondence with Prynce Hopkins himself. While I have never met him, he seems to be a queer duck, and it is well ~~&&&&~~ nigh impossible to predict the reaction to any given grant request. You can get the flavor of our dealings through the correspondence files. The only thing to do with this one is to keep putting in requests every year and not to write the Fund off if you get a turn-down.

The Adele R. Levy Fund. -- This is Marion Ascoli's sister, another daughter of Julius Rosenwald. Shortly after she made her pledge of $1,000-a-year for five years, beginning in 1960, she died. What will happen to her personal foundation at the end of this period, I have no idea. But, meanwhile, the pledge will be honored.

New World Foundation. -- I need say little about this one, exeept to make sure you know who some of the principals are other than Vernon Eagle. Nancy Harrison (wife of Gill Harrison, publisher of the New Republic) is the heiress and thus the major figure in the Foundation. She is a very unpretentious and liberal gal. Katharine Taylor, now a board member, was a consultant at the time we were first considered for a major grant. She visited the Council and several of us developed a warm friendship with her. If occasion arises Paul Anthony can brief you. The main thing, however, is to keep in close and friendly touch with Vernon. With Vernon, personal friendship and confidence are everything. He likes to be kept informed, to visit the South once a year, in short to be considered part of the family. Our grant -- normally $20,000 this year $25,000, plus the contingency fund -- is a remarkably large proportion of the total granted each year by New World. In fact, scrutiny of the Foundation's annual reports may well bear out that we are its largest single grantee.

New York Foundation. -- The two key men here are John Heyman, secretary for the Foundation, whose family established it, and Saul Markoff, the executive director, who is a close friend of Kenneth Clark's. We owe a great deal to Ken's support in this quarter, so for this reason as well as others I hope you will soon have opportunities to get to know him well. The New York Foundation has a lot of money, most of which it gives away in the City. We have continued to hope that the $5,000 might be increased, and this may still be a possibility if all goes well.

Aaron E. Norman Fund. -- This is a fairly closely held family foundation. Two of the principals -- grand-daughters of Aaron -- live here in Atlanta. They are Phoebe (Mrs. DeJongh) Franklin, and Lucinda (Mrs. Dr. Robert) Bunnen. I originally had two entrees here, Dejongh Franklin, whom I have known since grammar school days and who is a well-to-do lawyer, active in the local chapter of AJC; and Dave Freeman, who consulted with the Foundation for a while and plugged for us with Frank Weil, another family member who serves as secretary of the Foundation. This one is also unpredictable, though Weil is a very cordial correspondent. I have customarily kept Franklin fully informed of our intentions and requests. When and if you get a chance -- perhaps with the advice and help of Charles Wittenstein -- you might arrange to meet DeJongh. Note that we are invited to submit financial data in October or November in support of our request for an increased grant this year.

The Ottinger Foundation. -- We got on to this one exclusively through Dave Freeman. I don't really know who Richard Ottinger is, though he is apparently a contemporary and is doing something or other in Washington now. He was very much interested, through Dave, in our study of the Federal Executive and Civil Rights. Our 1961 grant was slightly increased in consideration of this. The only thing to do here is to enlist Dave Freeman's continuing help and support. As you will see from the file, our requests are made through Dave.

Re: Fund-Raising Memo - Part II

Phelps-Stokes Fund. -- This one is probably at an end, unless Mrs. Tilly can once again touch Fred Patterson's conscience. The Fund went out of the grant-making business over a year ago, and the 1961 grant came through only because of a special appeal which Mrs. Tilly made to Dr. Patterson.

Christopher Reynolds Foundation. -- This one gave the Council $5,000-a-year over a period of several years, beginning in George Mitchell's time. The 1960 request was turned down, but at the end of the year the Foundation sent $400 as an unsolicited year-end distribution. It was through Frank Loescher's intervention that the Reynolds grants first began. But it is well to remember that our Board member Irving Carlyle, of Winston-Salem, has connections with the Foundation through the family business interests and that he is an old personal friend of one of the Board members, Mr. Bennett Polikoff, who is a law partner of the Foundation's secretary, Mr. Jack Clareman. You should read the exchange of letters between Carlyle and Polikoff, At the time the Council's request was turned down in 1960. There is a good chance that this grant can be re-activated after a reasonable "fallow," period.

The Rockefeller Foundation. -- You know all about this one. It is well to keep in mind that it started by Josephine Wilkins' approach to Dean Rusk, whom she knew when he was a very young and humble man starting out in Atlanta. I later had an interview with Rusk and, at his request, with Miss Flora Rhind, the secretary to the Foundation. As far as I know at this point, the two people in the Foundation to whom we owe special thanks are Miss Rhind and Leland DeVinney. I suggest that we keep Josephine Wilkins fully posted on everything pertaining to Rockefeller, since she has a deep and abiding interest here. Also, of course, Dave Freeman may again be in a position to be helpful.

Rockefeller Brothers Fund. -- As you know, Dave Freeman is our contact man here, and is unquestionably our most important ally. The top man is Dana Creel, originally from Atlanta and a graduate of Emory, and I should hope that you will have an opportunity to meet him. It may be worth recalling that the RBF grant was approved before Dave Freeman joined the Foundation. It resulted from a series of intensive talks with other staff members there and a lengthy request for the Leadership Project which we submitted. We are indebted for this early support and championship by another staff member of the Foundation, Montgomery Bradley, who was at one time on the staff of the Fund for the Republic. Monty has turned over all staff handling of this to Dave Freeman, but he has a continuing interest, I think, in SRC and you may have occasion to meet him. He and Dave are close co-workers. The chances of a renewal of RBF support, on some terms or other, should be excellent. When the time comes, you can lean hard on Dave Freeman.

The Taconic Foundation. -- The $25,000 grant for general support runs through 1962, but the grant of like amount for aid to state councils expires at the end of 1961. A request for a renewal of this, possibly on a two or three year basis, should be submitted next fall. Let's talk further about this before that time.

John Hay Whitney Foundation. -- All of the personal negotiation with this Foundation has been done by Mrs. Tilly. It began through her personal approach to Mr. & Mrs. Whitney. My only role has been to write a formal letter of request and a letter of thanks every year. Possibly some direct cultivation by you would be helpful. You may want to discuss this with Mrs. Tilly.

William C. Whitney Foundation. -- Our principal friend in this one has been Michael Straight. The Foundation was set up with money from his mother's side of the family. The members are few, consisting of Mike, his sisters, a lawyer friend named Milton Rose, who serves as secretary, and Roger Baldwin. Baldwin is a frugal soul and doesn't like continuing grants. He probably is responsible for the terminal nature of the 1961 grant.

Memo to: Leslie W. Dunbar From: Paul Anthony

Re: SRC Finances and Fund Raising

The Council's financial needs - general operations - will be about 15% greater in 1962 than in 1961. (From approximately $155,000 in 1961 to $175,000 in 1962.) This trend, and roughly the same percentage of growth, have occurred since about 1955.

The growth is modest and, at least in part, reflects the organization's increasing ability to effeciently use additional funds. It is of some significance that the Council has maintained a continuing controlled growth rather than trying for dramatic increases that an agency in our position might have been tempted to do during the past few years.

At this point there seems to be several relatively obvious but significant points that we should keep in mind; these might determine internal control of spending as well as fund raising policy.

(1) The amount of funds involved is becoming sufficiently large that we need stronger internal control in spending, and rate of spending within the staff. This I mention while knowing that it is something you have wanted since becoming director. To achieve it we must have tighter supervision-by departments-in funds spent with a heavier responsibility assumed by each department. More than in the past, activities - travel, printing, use of consultants, etc. - must be measured not only in terms of value, but relative value within the contex of total annual funds available.

The other requirement is that we have tighter and more immediate cost accounting procedures. The secretary-treasurer will probably need some help if this is to be done adequately. Her responsibilities have increased roughly at the rate of our expenditures, and her's is the only department that has not received additional help.

(2) In 1962 we need to raise from new sources at least $20,000 to $35,000. This, even in light of having added, and hoping to keep the support of the Rockefeller Foundation. Had we kept all of our former support there would be little, if any, new funds to be raised. But, we continue to lose many of our foundations and sources of small, through recurring support.

This too is in keeping with the inevitable philanthropic process that sooner or later long-time supporters lose interest. Several years ago SRC had five or six foundations giving from $2000 to $5000 annually. Next year we have the prospect of renewing only one or two of those. In addition, Mrs. Tilly's program this year loses the support of both the Phelps-Stokes Fund and the J~~ulian~~ Hay Whitney Foundation (adding $4000 to $5000 to our expenses). Support from labor is rapidly diminishing. The UAW in the past three years has not even acknowledged our requests. Since the early 50's the Steelworkers have promptly given us $1000 a year. This year we received $500 only after late prodding from Paul Christopher.

Therefore, in addition to looking to major foundations we should give special attention to finding new sources of support within this category. Much of this may have to be done through the project method since SRC's reputation for solid-major support is running ahead of the fact.

(3) While our base of support is as large, if not larger, than in the past we have a potentially dangerous reliance on three foundations - Taconic, Field, and New World. And, this reliance is growing as we look at these sympathetic sources for increasing assistance. Yet, within each of these there are small but clear indications that eventually the philanthropic pattern of disinterest may assert itself. We should consider very carefully before going to these foundations for additional support unless absolutely necessary.

Since it is a long process, we need, therefore, to begin serious cultivation of new sources that can be brought into the picture when necessary. (As a beginning of this we should try to establish some stronger indications of the possibilities of the Stern Family Fund, the San Francisco Foundations, and any of the foundations that Josephine Wilkins feels, or finds, are serious possibilities.)

(4) We need to give much more creative (if you'll pardon the expression!) thinking to the policies of aid to state councils. Contrary to popular belief, this is not an appeal on my part for cutting off this aid. Rather, it is to urge that we stop the practice of creating a policy by default in which we continue to give, and try to increase this support, with little as an objective other than the giving.

The state councils were created with the idea that they would - by 1957 - flourish and SRC would cease to exist. This thinking was so wrong, the program so poorly administered, and the phenominal amounts of money so wasted, that it probably represents the sorriest chapter of SRC history.

Partly because of this - to keep from having to bury the corpse at public funeral - the grants-in-aid program was inaugurated; the Councils could not yet exist without outside support. Four years, and more than a quarter of a millions dollars later, no state council can yet exist without SRC assistance.

In 1962 we seem destined to give the worst of the councils as much support as ever, and the best of them as much support as can be mustered.

The state councils are a good and needed effort. I heartily support the idea. The effort should be extended to those Deep South states where no councils now exist. (Please note that I say these things.)

But, to give without more creative effort at establishing these groups as independent, self-supporting councils is a dis-service to them, and a trap for SRC. Specifically, what virtue is there in continuing to sustain a weak, poorly led, group (Florida) which in 1962 is no closes to creative program or financial independence than when it was first assisted in 1954?

The ugly and unfortunate truth is that SRC is not a foundation. No program of assistance - and the ensuing obligation of raising twenty per cent of the total funds spent by the council - should be undertaken without a self liquidation of objective firmly in mind.

My views on this subject might not be so strong but that I firmly believe these worthwhile groups can - in time, and properly directed - pay their own way. Critics to this opinion might consider that less than 1/10 th of 1% of more than a million dollars spent in this program has been spent in efforts toward this end.

(5) Finally, the Reserve Fund. Our reserve fund is now $60,000 plus any interest earned during the second half of 1961. We should budget a small amount to this fund each year, and place any earnings from it back into it. SRC finances are sufficiently precarious that deliberate efforts should be made to increase this reserve at every opportunity.

Our Finance Committee probably made a sound organizational decision - and/or unwise financial decision - in placing the management of this fund with the Trust Company of Georgia. After the results are known of the earnings under this management during 1961, this decision should be reviewed.

Dear Mrs. Meyer:

In October 1960 you made a very generous contribution to the Southern Regional Council. We are hopeful that you may be able to renew it this year.

You may have read in the press that the Council is filling a central administrative role in a voter registration drive in the South which, over the next two years, will combine the energies and resources of the principal civil rights organizations. Although this Project itself is substantially financed, it will add heavily to the costs of our central operations, because Project funds are allocated tightly to voting programs. The solicitation of our friends, which we were able to avoid last year, we must undertake again.

I hope, however, that you have been able to draw some satisfaction from your support of the Council. The work we do is exciting and gratifying, and we wish for our contributors a share of these rewards.

I am enclosing a copy of my Annual Report for 1961, together with a recent study of executive action.

With every good wish,

Sincerely yours,

Modern Tax Techniques in Fund-Raising

Equip yourself to obtain more and larger gifts for your institution by learning to present the income, estate and gift tax saving inducements the Federal Government offers to donors who invest in educational, religious, health and philanthropic organizations.

Philanthropy Tax Institute—conducted by Sydney Prerau and Conrad Teitell—meets a real need of development officers and fund-raisers. A practical working knowledge of the Federal tax laws' encouragement to charitable donors is fundamental for all who seek additional resources for their institutions. Of extreme current interest is the increasing use of deferred giving programs in obtaining "the big gift"—and also broad-based support.

You learn step-by-step about both the usual and unusual tax-encouraged ways of giving and the most modern techniques of implementing them. You become aware of and learn to avoid the pitfalls which can result in denial of the charitable deduction and in other adverse tax consequences.

The lectures are presented in a simple and completely comprehensible manner so that even a novice acquires substantial orientation. The in-depth treatment of the subject also meets the needs of those who already know the fundamentals but wish to up-date and expand their knowledge and skills. You can immediately incorporate the functional techniques you learn into your development program—thereby increasing the resources vital to your institution.

The results obtainable from attendance at Philanthropy Tax Institute have been enthusiastically attested to by those attending prior Institutes. A partial list of institutions sending one or more representatives to previous sessions appears in this brochure.

PROGRAM FACULTY

SYDNEY PRERAU

Member of New York Bar; consultant, Committee on Taxation and Philanthropy, American College Public Relations Association; consultant, Tax Committee, Commission on Stewardship, National Council of Churches of Christ; member, Committee on Catholic Charitable Giving; member, Tax Policy Committee, National Social Welfare Assembly; editor, TAXWISE GIVING; lecturer on tax-encouraged giving.

CONRAD TEITELL

Member of New York Bar; editor, TAXWISE GIVING—a monthly guide to tax aspects of interest to development officers, stewardship leaders and fundraisers; Director, PHILANTHROPY TAX INSTITUTE; lecturer before fundraisers, bar and other professional groups on the tax aspects of philanthropic giving; author on tax-encouraged giving and estate planning; arbitrator, American Arbitration Association.

FEE: $250 includes lectures and 208 page Tax Manual containing comprehensive course outline, tax forms, tables, charts, citations of authority. Included are forms for the various life income plans and computing their tax consequences, for reporting income to donors, aiding donors in claiming contribution deductions and reporting income. Course outline is designed to minimize note taking so that you concentrate fully on the lectures. Tax Manual serves as a desk book for your day-to-day guidance. Fee also includes group luncheons on 2nd and 3rd days.

ENROLL NOW. Since enrollment must necessarily be limited, may we suggest you act promptly by returning the enrollment form with a $25 deposit. We will bill you for the balance.

PROGRAM H

TAX BASICS—INCOME, ESTATE AND GIFT

A working knowledge of all you need to know to "talk taxes" with potential donors. These complicated laws are translated into simple English.

OUTRIGHT LIFETIME GIFTS

Complete discussion of income, estate and gift tax savings on gifts by individuals, partnerships and corporations; how tax savings enable donor to make a bigger gift; taking maximum advantage of the five-year carryover and ceiling limitations; when contributions are deductible; how property contributions are valued; avoiding ordinary and capital gains taxes; gifts of securities, inventory, depreciable property, preferred stock, works of art, life insurance, crops, oil and gas interests, real estate, copyrights, close corporation stock, bargain sales; Treasury reporting requirements.

LIFE INCOME CONTRACTS

The charitable contribution deduction; techniques of presentation to potential donors; advantages to your institution and donor; income, estate and gift tax consequences; avoiding ordinary and capital gains tax on gifts of appreciated property; endowment and unit plan life income contracts; avoidance of gift tax on two-life contracts; obtaining gifts by increasing donor's percentage return on present investments; comparison with other life income plans; pitfalls and how to avoid them.

TRUSTS FOR THE BENEFIT OF CHARITY

Trust terminology made simple; why a trust; lifetime, testamentary charitable remainder and short-term trusts; income, estate and gift tax savings to donors; benefits to your institution and donor; avoidance of gift tax on two-life trusts; increasing donor's spendable income; comparison with other life income plans; pitfalls to avoid in trust instruments; obtaining "the big gift" with a trust.

HIGHLIGHTS

CHARITABLE GIFT ANNUITIES

Income, estate and gift tax advantages to donor; techniques of explaining the capital gains tax on the transfer of appreciated property; maintaining donor good will and generating future gifts by furnishing donor with proper information for tax returns; avoidance of gift tax on two-life annuities; avoiding pitfalls; comparison with other plans; "on the spot" estimating of tax consequences (contribution deduction, amount taxable, capital gains implications) using aids furnished at lectures.

WORKSHOP ON LIFE INCOME PLANS

Step-by-step computation of charitable contribution deduction and other tax consequences for each life income plan using government tables and Philanthropy Tax Institute forms and aids; reporting to donor and his reporting on tax returns; tested techniques of presenting plans to prospective donors showing tax savings and increase of spendable income; acquiring information needed to present tax incentives; how to help donor choose taxwisely among the life income plans; tax implications of donor's contribution of his interest under life income plan.

RECENT DEVELOPMENTS

Thorough discussion of recent court cases, revenue rulings, legislation, proposed legislation, anticipated restrictive legislation, regulations, and proposed regulations. You become current on all developments affecting the contribution deduction.

QUESTIONS ARE ANSWERED FULLY DURING THE LECTURES AND AFTER EACH SESSION

Opportunity is furnished to have your particular problems discussed, get technical information, suggestions, etc., together with the benefit of the practical experience of all participants.

Fashion Center Gets Dubinsky Fund Grant

New York—A grant of $50,000 to the Fashion Institute of Technology here, a center of learning for the garment industry, has been announced by the David Dubinsky Foundation.

The grant is among the first of nine awards made by the foundation, established by the Ladies' Garment Workers to help worthy projects in the name of the man who headed the union for 34 years.

A fund of $1 million was set up to make awards over a period of 12 years. AFL-CIO Pres. George Meany is foundation chairman and he also serves on the awards committee along with ILGWU Pres. Louis Stulberg and prominent labor and civic leaders.

The money for the institute, granted in two awards of $25,000 each, is earmarked for a David Dubinsky Student Center. The center, previously endowed by management leaders, is part of the school's expansion program.

Other awards announced by the foundation ranged from $3,000 to $16,000. They included grants to:

The National Council of Negro Women and the North Carolina College at Durham for scholarship aid to poor students; the National Catholic Social Action Conference; the Bund Archives for microfilming rare materials on the Jewish labor movement of Eastern Europe; and to the David Shub Book Committee for publication of a book on the early days of the ILGWU.

The foundation also announced an award to cover the cost of the 1968 Conference on the Immigrant and the Labor Movement, which is sponsored by the Center for Migration Studies at Brooklyn College.

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

On the basis of work already done in the past few years, it seems the Southern Regional Council merits general support from the public at large and organized philanthropy.

How to make the public conscious of the work done and how to present it to the public and philanthropic organizations so as to get money, it appears, is the immediate task of every one of its officers, Board of Directors, members, and friends. To this end a suggested procedure is somewhat loosely outlined below.

A. SOURCES OF EXPECTED SUPPORT

1. Membership of the Council
2. Far-seeing, public-spirited citizens and friends
3. Specially selected individuals in the higher income brackets
4. National church groups
5. Special groups, societies, and associations.
6. Business and manufacturing firms in the South
7. Foundations

B. NEEDS OF THE COUNCIL

The needs of the Council may be classified in three divisions:

1. Immediate needs, which includes money to pay salaries, rent, general office expenses, and publications.

2. Needs for the year 1950. These needs should be included in a carefully thought out budget to cover the year (1) to at least keep the Council at its present level of activities and (2) to do a real job of intensified work.

3. Ultimate needs. An assured budget for a period of years sufficient to do a job that is really worthwhile in the southern section of the country.

C. MONEY FOR IMMEDIATE NEEDS: HOW SECURED

1. Follow up immediately and complete the effort already launched to secure $250 from a selected list of 100 individuals. (only 18 have responded.)

2. Double this list of 100 prospects and contact them as soon as possible. This job should be done by personal calls by the members of the Board of Directors, the officers, or by those who submitted the names. They should be assisted by Mr. Byrd, Dr. Mitchell, Mrs. Tilly, Mrs. Havens, Mr. Williams, and other interested people. In no sense of the word should they be written to and solicited through the mail. It should be stressed in the interviews that it is absolutely necessary to have contributions if this Council is to stay alive and properly function in the future.

3. A special effort should be made to double the membership in the next six months. This, of course, is not a great source of financial income but it is necessary to keep the work of the Council before the people.

D. MONEY FOR 1950 NEEDS: HOW SECURED

1. From annual gifts of those who have subscribed $250 this year. They should in some way be interested to the extent that they would make this an annual offering.

2. National church bodies should be contacted and induced to make subscriptions and gifts from their annual budgets--such as Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians, Congregationalists, etc.

3. Societies and groups should be sought out and asked to make donations from their treasuries.

4. Business and manufacturing groups, especially those manufacturers who own plants in the South and who live in the West or East. They should be asked to make grants from their treasuries.

ULTIMATE NEEDS

Foundations: A large selected list of foundations should be carefully compiled and an organized approach made to them for a commitment over a number of years. It appears that the Council has entre to a number of these through some of its members. This is a fine prospective source that must be handled with a great deal of delicacy and planning, and with information to be submitted at the proper time, by the proper people.

Certain individuals with high income should be approached by certain people to make yearly donations over a period of years, or to give a large amount in a lump sum.

Publicity

The Council has a large amount of bulletins and pamphlets covering the whole field of its activities. It may be necessary, however, to get up some very inexpensive pamphlets to be given away in large quantities where it might be expected small amounts of money could be secured. This kind of material might serve also to get the work and the need of the Council into the conscience of a large amount of people throughout the South. This is not the kind of an effort which lends itself to wide publicity in the press, except in a very general way. All of this that could be had, of course, would be all to the good.

Organization

It does not appear that too much organization will be needed at this stage of our effort to secure money. The state organizations and the membership and officers of the Council, with some additions, might be all we would need at this particular time.

Time of this Special Work

It is hard to separate and imagine any specific dates, as this whole program will naturally be tied into and worked as we go along. However, the immediate need section should be completed as soon as possible. Perhaps we should make a drive to have all the present prospects of $250 disposed of by the 15th of November. This work could be continued right along with the additional $250 prospects. Time, then, could be devoted to clarifying organizing approach for larger sums. Future outlines will be made after immediate needs have been taken care of.

Dear Miss Corr:

Attached is a suggested list of invitees for the buffet supper Mrs. Roosevelt is giving for the Southern Regional Council on September 20. She said she would invite 22 people, allowing for some declinations.

Also enclosed is a draft of a suggested note for approval or revision.

I am quite sure you will understand my feeling of inadequacy in preparing the list - especially since my mishap has prevented my getting around to seek advice. I trust Mrs. Roosevelt will make extensive changes in the list as she sees fit.

I understand you will indicate the proper salutation by each name. And when you return the list with blank stationery and envelopes, may I ask that you include a few extra sheets of stationery with envelopes in case of stenographic error. Kindly have these sent to me by messenger collect. A return envelope is enclosed for your convenience.

The notes will be prepared promptly and returned for Mrs. Roosevelt's signature.

Thank you, my dear Miss Corr.

Sincerely,

Josephine Wilkins

Dear Miss Corr:

Here are the invitations for the buffet supper on September 20th, sent, as you will see, in two envelopes.

The first envelope contains the invitations, dated August 18, to be mailed out initially to twenty persons. These, I assume, will be mailed from your office.

The second envelope contains the reserve invitations, undated, to be mailed only to fill vacancies up to the twenty guests. I feel so keenly the responsibility for letting no one of the reserve invitations get out - except to fill a vacancy - that I would like to hold them myself for any such mailing, since you will be away.

Therefore, if this is satisfactory, kindly return the reserve invitations to me, after they have been signed and franked, by messenger collect.

Need I tell you how my heart has gone out to Mrs. Roosevelt, and to those of you close to her, over this past week-end.

Sincerely,

Miss Maureen Corr

Dear Marie and Averell:

I am asking a few people in for a small buffet supper at my apartment on Tuesday evening, September 20th, at seven-thirty o'clock.

James McBride Dabbs, author and South Carolina planter, and others are coming up to discuss with us the situation in the South. Mr. Dabbs is president of the Southern Regional Council, which as you probably know is giving statesmanlike leadership in that critical area.

I hope very much you will be able to come, and will appreciate your letting me know at your earliest convenience.

Affectionately,

Governor and Mrs. Averell Harriman

Dear Miss Corr:

Welcome back -- although to a staggering desk, I fear!

I am returning the replies to the invitations for Tuesday evening, which were sent over by Miss Gutkind, and returning also the unused reserve invitations.

Summer absences, Labor Day, etc., resulted in the replies coming back very slowly. On last Monday, the 12th, five of the initial invitations were still unanswered. Since I felt it was the final day that any of the reserve ones could be sent, I took the liberty of following up on these five. I phoned saying I was calling in Mrs. Roosevelt's absence to make sure the invitation had been received. Then made a final mailing to bring the number up to twenty.

You will see from the attached list that as of now there are nine acceptances, exclusive of Mr. Dabbs and Mr. Fleming, and five invitations are still unanswered. The weekend mail may bring further replies. But even the acceptances thus far hold very real potentialities for consideration of the situation in the South and its wider meaning.

I will phone tomorrow morning.

Sincerely,

Josephine Wilkins

My dear Mrs. Roosevelt:

Please accept my renewed thanks for the delightful time I had at your home last Tuesday evening. It was a pleasure and a privilege to meet Mr. Dabbs and to hear about the work of the Southern Regional Council.

One point is not quite clear to me. Does the Regional Council wish to be composed of and supported entirely by southerners, or are they seeking financial assistance from New Yorkers?

Arthur asks me to again express his regrets at not being able to join your party last Tuesday. We both send warmest regards to you.

Dear Eleanor:

I want to remind you that when I said that I would give a contribution to the Southern Regional Conference, two of whose members I met at your enchanting supper party, I meant it.

One of the rewards of the party for me was that, for the first time, I had the chance to have a real conversation with Dr. Gurewitsch.

If you will let me know what the speakers want to achieve and to whom I'm to send the check I shall be glad to fulfill my promise.

With affectionate greetings,

Devotedly

Dear Josephine:

After the executive committee meeting yesterday, I went over the follow-up business with Mr. Dabbs. I had some language in draft -- nothing too inspired -- but Dabbs felt, understandably, that the letters should be more or less in style. Here are the two drafts he produced. He and I both want you to edit or revise them in any way you think best. I'm enclosing a return envelope.

As you may recall, I'm heading for San Francisco and more rabbit-skin hunting this Sunday (Oct. 2) and will return Monday, October 10. Meanwhile, if you get a chance to go over the Dabbs letter, I'd like them to get on out and am so instructing Paul Anthony and Mildred Flowers. If there are any changes so basic that they should be checked with Dabbs -- which I greatly doubt -- Paul and Mildred will see to it.

The meeting was a good one -- well attended, good discussion, and general pleasure with the new quarters. Your ears should have been burning; the telegram was pale compared with the warm and admiring things that were said about you.

Yours,

Harold C. Fleming

Dear Fred:

As a man of your discernment will have perceived, the evening at Mrs. Roosevelt's was partly inspired by the hope that some or all of those present might be interested in contributing to the work of the Southern Regional Council.

Although I understand that your energies, and very likely your charitable giving as well, are pre-empted by the New York Urban League, I am sending the letter anyway, pro forma.

Quite apart from such financial matters, I thoroughly enjoyed our conversation and would like to take you up on the invitation to lunch with you and Ed Lewis. The next time I am to be in New York, I will write you in advance to see if it is possible for us to get together.

Dear Mr. Richmond:

Mr. Dabbs and I were happy to have the privilege of meeting you recently at Mrs. Roosevelt's, and of talking with you about the situation in the South and the work of the Southern Regional Council.

At Mrs. Roosevelt's suggestion, I am sending you this further information about our organization.

The Council is currently seeking from new sources pledges totalling $100,000 a year for the five-year period beginning January 1, 1961. This amount, applied toward an annual budget of approximately $250,000, will leave a manageable balance to be raised from existing sources, and will enable the staff to devote its primary attention to much needed program activities during the crucial period ahead.

I am enclosing a list of the Council's officers and members. Since the 1960 annual report is not yet prepared, I am also enclosing a copy of the 1959 report on program activities. Our 1959 annual audited financial statement is available should you wish a copy. Contributions to the Council are, of course, tax-deductible.

In summary, the main assets of the Council in the crucial transition of the South include: (1) reputation and experience in race relations since 1944 and, through its predecessor, since 1919; (2) a membership drawn from respected Southern leaders of both races; (3) an experienced staff of Negro and white professional and clerical workers; (4) the part-time services of specialists in education, law enforcement, economics, and community relations; (5) a close working relationship with state and local councils on human relations (founded by SRC) and with virtually every private and governmental agency sharing these concerns; (6) the confidence of the press, Southern and national, as the major source of facts and analysis in this field.

The past few years have seen a gratifying increase in the Council's outreach and effectiveness. Whereas a few years ago the Council sorely needed the South's leadership, today that leadership is displaying a growing need for the Council and the guidance it can provide. We confidently expect the next five years to be even richer in opportunities for decisive influence by the Council.

We shall be most grateful if you feel that the Council merits your support.

Sincerely yours,

Harold C. Fleming

Our 1959 annual audited financial statement is available should you wish a copy. Contributions to the Council are, of course, tax-deductible.

In summary, the main assets of the Council in the crucial transition of the South include: (1) reputation and experience in race relations since 1944 and, through its predecessor, since 1919; (2) a membership drawn from respected Southern leaders of both races; (3) an experienced staff of Negro and white professional and clerical workers; (4) the part-time services of specialists in education, law enforcement, economics, and community relations; (5) a close working relationship with state and local councils on human relations (founded by SRC) and with virtually every private and governmental agency sharing these concerns; (6) the confidence of the press, Southern and national, as the major source of facts and analysis in this field.

The past few years have seen a gratifying increase in the Council's outreach and effectiveness. Whereas a few years ago the Council sorely needed the South's leadership, today that leadership is displaying a growing need for the Council and the guidance it can provide. We confidently expect the next five years to be even richer in opportunities for decisive influence by the Council.

We shall be most grateful if you feel that the Council merits your support.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mrs. Meyer:

Mr. Dabbs and I were happy to have the privilege of meeting you recently at Mrs. Roosevelt's, and of talking with you about the situation in the South and the work of the Southern Regional Council.

At Mrs. Roosevelt's suggestion, I am sending you this further information about our organization.

The Council is currently seeking from new sources pledges totalling $100,000 a year for the five-year period beginning January 1, 1961. This amount, applied toward an annual budget of approximately $250,000, will leave a manageable balance to be raised from existing sources, and will enable the staff to devote its primary attention to much needed program activities during the crucial period ahead.

I am enclosing a list of the Council's officers and members. Since the 1960 annual report is not yet prepared, I am also enclosing a copy of the 1959 report on program activities. Our 1959 annual audited financial statement is available should you wish a copy. Contributions to the Council are, of course, tax-deductible.

Mr. James M. Dabbs

Dear Mr. Dabbs:

Josephine called Friday to change the signals on our follow-up of Mrs. Roosevelt's supper party.

It seems that Mrs. Roosevelt has very kindly written each of the guests, and those who couldn't come, urging them to contribute to SRC. Mrs. Roosevelt also wrote that she is asking the SRC office to send financial and other data on SRC.

This seemed to Josephine (and I agree) to call for an impersonal, bureaucratic type follow-up, which I have concocted. Of course, a personal note from you would also be fine, though not essential; it might be best, under the circumstances, to wait for contributions which you might wish to acknowledge personally.

In any case, as I leave the office for a week, I am holding your drafts in abeyance. I am sorry for the time and effort this imposed on you Tuesday, but Josephine didn't foresee that Mrs. Roosevelt would write in the vein she did, welcome though that is.

Best regards.

Dear Mr. Dabbs:

Enclosed find my check for $200 as a contribution to the Council. I hope to be able to send an additional contribution before the end of the year, as a token tribute to the brave and important work you are doing.

Your remarks, as well as those of Dr. Frank Graham, made deep impressions, when I had the privilege of meeting you at Mrs. Roosevelt's dinner in your honor. Since then I have lunched with Dr. Graham but our time was largely occupied with CLEF (Civil Liberties Educational Foundation) of which Dr. Graham is the President. So I did not have the opportunity of asking him a question which has been in my mind.

Would the following program be feasible: In Southern public schools eliminate co-education and extra-curricular activities. Devote the schools exclusively to education, as they were 100 years ago. If the parents want to establish a recreation and social center for their children let them do so as a private enterprise apart from the school. At present the public school, especially the highschool in a small community, is a social as well as an educational center. Many residents look upon the highschool as a community clubhouse. If public school buildings were used only for education would it not eliminate some of the bitter opposition to integration?

Probably this idea has already been considered. I would appreciate your thought on it.

Mrs. Stern joins in kind regards to Mr. Fleming and to you

Sincerely

J David Stern

My dear Mr. Fleming:

I am in receipt of your letter of October 3rd. It was a great pleasure to meet you and Mr. Dabbs at the recent dinner meeting at the home of M s. Franklin Roosevelt, and to hear your report with regard to the situation in theSouth and the work of the Southern Regional Council.

I have taken pleasure in sending Mrs. Roosevelt today a check for $1,000 as a contribution to the Southern Regional Council which I am convinced is doing very useful work in improving race relations in the South. I do not feel, however, that I can pledge myself to any specific contribution over a period of five years. I Hope that I will be able to be helpful for a great many years but at my age I feel that it would not be wise to pledge myself to make contributions beyond the current year. I am sure that you and Mrs. Roosevelt will understand the situation. I can assure you, however, that Mrs. Lehman and I greatly enjoyed the evening and that we are in full sympathy with the work that is being done by the Southern Regional Council.

Mr. J. David Stern

Dear Mr. Stern:

This is to add to Mr. Dabbs's recent letter a word of warm appreciation for your contribution to the Council. We are both cheered and strengthened by your support, and by your willingness to consider further help later on.

Your comment on the separation of the sexes in desegregating public schools took on added relevancy last week. As you probably observed, the New Orleans public school authorities propose to do just that when they begin desegregation in the first grade on November 14. Despite a good deal of discussion of the idea, this will mark the first actual experience with it.

My own view, for whatever it is worth, is that this reversal of the prevailing trend toward coeducation and social activity in the schools will not prove necessary for public acceptance of desegregation in the more moderate and urban areas of the South. In the more rural, deep South areas -- where resistance is greatest -- such a step may well be the answer, at least for lengthy interim period. The Council has long made the point that white Southerners must cease to regard public facilities as private preserves for whites only; that they may choose their own "social equals" but may not enforce this private choice on facilities operated by and for the public. As this lesson sinks in, the Deep South will very likely revise its view of the public schools accordingly.

Personally, I should regret the application of this principle below the high-school level. And I doubt its practicability in the lower grades. Perhaps because I attended a good all-male high school in Atlanta, however, I am still not convinced that co-education is an unmixed blessing at that level. Apart from racial factors, I suspect that much good might come of some "de-socialization" of the secondary schools.

In any case, we shall be following and reporting on the New Orleans experience with the closest attention. I hope you will continue to give us the benefit of your views on this and other aspects of Southern race relations.

With renewed thanks and kindest regards to you and Mrs. Stern, I am

Dear Josephine:

Here are the latest returns, one good, one encouraging, one negative. The $500 check from Mrs. Meyer lives up to my expectations, and despite her expressed doubts about future years, I am hopeful that she will continue her support. The letter from Harry Ashmore in response to an inquiry from the Rockefeller Foundation is not only good in itself; the very fact that the inquiry was made suggests that SRC is getting serious consideration. Let's hope they follow up Ashmore's suggestion that they ask McGill's opinion.

As to Avalon, this is a disappointment. But, as I'm fond of saying, you can't win them all. It's annoying though, isn't it, when they give you this kind of polite brush-off? I'd rather they'd say straight out why they are unwilling to help.

The letters written to and by Mrs. Roosevelt were heart-warming. I'm returning herewith Mrs. R's notes to you; I take it you want us to retain the others.

As you know, Dr. Frank was here the other day. I didn't get to hear his speech, though the newspaper accounts were very good. His remarks on the sit-ins were essentially the same as those we used in New South. He called me the following morning (providentially while I was trying to locate him) and we had a pleasant chat. He spoke of you in the most glowing terms, all of which I matched with equal enthusiasm. I took the bull by the horns and asked him about SRC nomination. He said at once he'd be happy to serve if elected, and I assured him I'd be writing further soon. He's a grand person and, as any grand person should, he thinks the world of you.

I'm anxious to see you again. If a November trip to New York develops, as it very well may, I'll expect to do so. The next time we talk by telephone, I want to find out the latest word on your prospective de-hospitalization.

Aside from the local activity on the lunch-counter, King, and political fronts, there is no especially noteworthy news. One reason, I think, is that the presidential campaign is absorbing most people's interest for the moment.

Yours,

Harold C. Fleming

Dear Mrs. Meyer:

On behalf of the Southern Regional Council, I want to thank you most warmly for your contribution. Mr. Dabbs and I greatly enjoyed meeting you at Mrs. Roosevelt's apartment and would like to add a personal word of appreciation for your generous aid to the Council's work.

We can readily understand that you many other commitments prevent your promising continuing assistance. But, apart from contributions, we should like to keep you informed of the accelerating changes in the South and the Council's part in them. The next five years promise to be an exciting and rewarding time for those who want to see segregation and discrimination ended.

I shall take the liberty of sending you occasional reports of the Council and hope to have the pleasure of seeing you again soon.

Sincerely yours,

Harold C. Fleming

Dear Fred:

Thanks for that very kind letter.

The report to the President seems to have had a good impact, not only in the press, but within the new administration; at least, the requests we have had here indicate it is being widely read within the appropriate agencies. Let us hope....

The Urban League is helping, of course, and I am confident we will be working together even more closely as time goes on.

Dear Mrs. Roosevelt,

David and I agreed that the meeting at your home last evening was extraordinarily stimulating, informative and inspiring. We thank you for inviting us.

Until now, our chief contacts with race relations have come through our good friend Judge Waties Waring.

The talks last night shed light on the basic causes of the conditions Judge Waring is devoting his life to improving.

In the light of the recent emergence of the African States, it seems to me vital that the white people of the United States Southern States, and the colored peoples of the whole world be understood as sympathetically as possible, and thoughtfully wisely helped.

Enclosed is the notice of the "Sunrise" revival I told you I had seen in the New York Times. Lambertville N. J. is in Bucks Co. near New Hope

Dear Mr. Stern:

This is to add to Mr. Dabbs's recent letter a word of warm appreciation for your contribution to the Council. We are both cheered and strengthened by your support, and by your willingness to consider further help later on.

Your comment on the separation of the sexes in desegregating public schools took on added relevancy last week. As you probably observed, the New Orleans public school authorities propose to do just that when they begin desegregation in the first grade on November 14. Despite a good deal of discussion of ~~this~~ the idea, this will mark the first actual experience wit it.

My own view, for whatever it is worth, is that this reversal of the prevailing trend toward coeducation and social activity in the schools will not prove necessary for public acceptance of desegregation in the more moderate and urban areas of the South. In the ~~xxxxx~~ more rural, deep South areas -- where resistance is greatest -- such a step may well be the answer, ~~adopted,~~ at least for ~~xxxxx~~ a ~~considerable~~ lengthy interim period. The Council has long made the point that white Southerners must cease to regard public facilities as private preserves for whites only; that they may choose their own ~~xxxxxxxxxxxxxx~~ "social equals" but may not enforce this private choice on ~~xxxxxx~~ facilities operated by and for the public. As this lesson sinks in, the Deep South ~~xxxxxxxxxx~~ will very likely revise its view of the public schools accordingly.

Personally, I should ~~view with~~ regret the application of this principle below the high-school level. And I doubt its practicability in the lower grades. Perhaps because I attended a good all-male high school in Atlanta, I am still not convinced that co-education is an unmixed blessing at that level. Apart from racial factors, I suspect that much good might come of some "de-socialization" of the secondary schools.

In any case, we shall be following reporting on the New Orleans experience with the closest attention. I hope you will continue to give us the benefit of your views on this and other aspects of Southern race relations.

With renewed thanks and kindest regards to you and Mrs. Stern, I am

DRAFT - A (For Guests)

Dear _____:

Mr. Fleming and I were very happy to have the privilege of meeting you recently at Mrs. Roosevelt's, and of talking with you and the others there about the situation in the South, especially in its racial aspects, and about the work of the Southern Regional Council.

Your presence there suggests your interest in the critical situation in the South and in the work the Southern Regional Council is doing toward bringing racial segregation and discrimination to an end. Though, because of its relatively large Negro population, the problem seems localized in the South, it is, of course, a national problem affecting, with the rise of the colored peoples of the world, the national destiny.

Both Mr. Fleming and I are happy to have some part, especially through the Southern Regional Council, in tackling this problem. I don't know whether we said this; I hope we implied it. What we did not say, as being inappropriate to a friendly evening in Mrs. Roosevelt's home, was that the Southern Regional Council, though a going organization with a budget of approximately $250,000, continually needs to gain new financial backers. We are now engaged in the effort to secure from new sources a total of $100,000-a-year for the next five years. Such a sum will enable our trained staff to put most of its effort into the primary job of fact-finding and persuasion. All contributions to the Council are tax-exempt.

Your presence at Mrs. Roosevelt's made me feel -- what white Southerners need and, I think, want to feel -- that the South is truly a part of the nation. If you can go further and support generously the Southern Regional Council, we shall be very happy. Mr. Fleming will be glad to give you any additional information you desire.

Sincerely yours,

J. M. Dabbs

DRAFT - B (For invitees not attending)

Dear _____:

Recently Mrs. Roosevelt gave an informal dinner at her apartment to honor the Southern Regional Council and me as its president. I am sorry that you were unable to attend.

Since I can assume, however, some interest on your part, I am taking the liberty of writing this letter to acquaint you generally with what we did there.

Upon Mrs. Roosevelt's suggestion, I talked briefly about the situation in the South, especially as related to the racial problem; and Mrs Harold Fleming, our executive director, explained the work that the Southern Regional Council is doing. The Council, in brief, is an interracial organization, tax-exempt and educational, with a history dating back through the Interracial Commissions, to 1919. Through a respected Southern leadership and experienced staff, Negro and white, the Council is making a unique contribution to the urgent need for a non-segregated and democratic South.

I am enclosing certain printed information. Mr. Fleming will be happy to answer any questions you may have.

I hope I shall have the pleasure of meeting you sometime and discussing the work with you. Meanwhile, we shall be sending you occasional reports of the Council's work. We hope that as you become more familiar with it, the Council may command your interest and support.

Dear Mr. Anthony:

The news that you have been named as executive director of the Southern Regional Council prompts this brief note of congratulations. Although our paths have not crossed in recent years, I remember one occasion about 8 years ago when we roomed together in connection with a Lutheran Church in America Conference on Race Relations at Wittenberg University, Springfield, Ohio.

I take this opportunity, too, to express appreciation for the work of the Southern Regional Council. Of the many materials that come into our office, yours are among the most helpful.

Our best wishes to you in your new responsibilities.

I DON'T NEED YOU ANY MORE. Stories by Arthur Miller. 240 pages. Viking. $5.

SINCE no group of short stories could possibly carry the distinction or the prestige of a Broadway play, it will be hard to argue that these short stories by Arthur Miller deserve the same attention that is accorded his stage works—the same attention, if not necessarily as much. For in spite of a surprisingly deprecatory introduction in which Mr. Miller refers to short stories as "casual things at the lower end of the scale of magnitude," these offerings are neither mere doodlings nor scratch-pad outlines for more serious works to come. At their best, they make a striking impact, and, as good stories should, illuminate an area larger than the one they traverse. They are not always at their best, but four tales, possibly five in this collection of nine, will enhance Mr. Miller's standing as a writer, not merely as a playwright, as Chekhov's stories enhanced his reputation as a man of letters.

Inge Morath, Magnum

Arthur Miller

Mr. Miller's virtues are firmest when he works outside his characters, showing them great hunger for love and emotional security and the way it is masked by social attitudes and veneers. A woman who has permitted that veneer to crack and who feels it has made her vulnerable acts to restore the balance in a relationship with a neighbor. When she thinks the danger has passed, she reveals the same stony-eyed attitude as before, her frustrated cry of need completely forgotten.

"Fame" is a funny story, a desperately funny story, about the twin drives for privacy and for fame, for the limelight and the still center. It is also about the built-in humiliations that a publicity-conditioned society has fostered.

On the surface, "Please Don't Kill Anything" is the story of a couple who retrieve and throw back into the water fish that have been caught but that are commercially worthless. In the light of the number of fish in the water and the chance of these small fish surviving at all, the effort of the two of them is pointless. But in the man's understanding of the woman's attitude and the opportunity his action gives him to express his love for her, "Please Don't Kill Anything" is about something tender and unspoken between a man and a woman.

A Challenging Density

One story, "The Misfits," the basis of the motion picture, is more notable for its setting than its people. The landscape, with its great distances, its wildness, its heat and its aridity, is vivid and freshly drawn. Mr. Miller has written it as if it were really a prologue; after the wild horses have been captured and the men are rolling along to town, we feel that there is a larger drama

Topics: Overhead for the Underdog

By WALDEMAR A. NIELSEN

A nation finances its essential institutions in various ways: its corporations and industries through their earnings; governmental agencies through taxes; churches through private donations; universities through endowments, taxes and government contracts.

But it sometimes happens that whole categories of vital national institutions can fall through a crack in the system or become caught and mangled in the gears of social transition.

Support Is Changing

In the United States today, concepts and practices for the support of our basic educational, scientific and cultural institutions are very rapidly changing. Federal Government support is entering massively at every level of education. State supported universities are burgeoning—and nowhere more rapidly and encouragingly than here in New York State. Privately supported colleges and universities, with the encouragement of some foundations, are making vigorous efforts to build up their endowments and sources of private support. Universities and research institutions of all kinds are becoming heavily reliant on Federal contracts to carry out scientific work, much of which is military and some of which is "classified."

Cultural institutions, including opera companies, museums, orchestras, ballet groups and others—long neglected by private donors, philanthropy and government—are still undernourished but are beginning to receive attention and somewhat greater financial backing.

There is one vital category of institutions, however, which is being pinched excruciatingly by rising demands for services on the one hand and lack of financial resources on the other. This is that amorphous group of private agencies which are neither schools nor churches nor hospitals nor museums and which are loosely called "nongovernmental organizations." They range from the United Nations Association and the N.A.A.C.P. on the one hand to local civic groups and community centers on the other.

The Endless Hunt

These organizations, whether at the international, national or local level, have been born out of private response to urgent needs of our society. A few are fortunate enough to have built-in sources of income, such as those which perform a service for which a fee can be charged. A tiny number enjoy the blessing of a wealthy and devoted sponsor. Some with strong emotional appeal can attract sufficient support from the general public.

But it is the others who are in the most serious trouble. And these include several agencies of national and international importance and many hundreds, perhaps thousands, of state or local importance.

For them, the alternatives are government contracts of some kind, or foundation grants, or an endless and time-consuming effort to obtain individual and corporate gifts.

But there is a highly developed distaste for giving to overhead costs. The result is that the nonprofit organizations are forced to play the shuttlecock in a particularly brutal form of badminton. Foundations support new projects on a temporary basis on the theory that if the experiment is successful, government funds will provide for the program's continuation. Government agencies increasingly tend to favor the pilot project, which if successful, will "surely" generate continuing support from private foundations.

Those responsible for the management and development of nonprofit agencies are driven to a more and more frantic search for the funds with which to pay the dismal but inescapable basic costs of any institution—the rent, the light, the equipment, and the central staff on which the unending tasks of planning, administration, evaluation and development fall.

More and more time and energy are devoted to the chase. More and more unseemly methods are resorted to. More and more harassment of donors occurs. More and more, the basic strength, stability and quality of these important organizations are drained away.

Core of Management

An important and even vital segment of the institutional structure of our society is financially orphaned—and important tasks in the areas of public education, social welfare, and international relations are not being carried out as well as they must be.

An adequate solution to their financial problems will not be quickly or easily found.

But as a beginning, private foundations, individual donors and government agencies might recall that "overhead," though most commonly used as an epithet, also signifies the vital management core of an institution, without which neither its ongoing programs nor its new experiments can maintain their quality—much less achieve excellence.

THE COUNCIL, THE SOUTH, AND THE FUTURE

December 12, 1955 Fred Routh

The decade now ending has been a period of accelerated change for the South; SRC has played an important role in assisting the region and its people to adjust to this change. Recently SRC has completed the first phase of a vastly expanded program in the South: the setting up of human relations agencies in the twelve states of the area. These agencies have needed considerable aid and assistance from the central office, not only financially, but organizationally and program-wise as well. Today and tomorrow these organizations face and will face the necessity of assisting communities in their respective states to meet the challenge of desegregation and integration. They, along with religious, educational, and business institutions and organized labor, have looked and will continue to look to SRC for guidance.

Thus, the first question to be answered by any organization which asks, "What of the future?" has received an affirmative reply. Is there a need for the continued services of the Southern Regional Council ? YES ! If the past decade can be referred to as the "decade of accelerated change" the coming decade may well be referred to as the "era of jet-propelled transition." And the needs of the state organizations, the region, and the people for constructive guidance will be multiplied not lessened. The South is well on its way back into the main stream of the nation's life. There are strong forces however, out of the past, which work to keep the South isolated.

The Council would be grossly negligent, indeed foolhardy if it fails to assist the forces of progress in the South in the coming decade. Its program must be expanded, not constricted nor terminated, if we are to work out constructive transition.

At the time the grant from the Fund For the Republic expires we may expect that desegregation in the schools will be well under way in some of the Southern states but it is almost beyond hope that much change will have taken place in Alabama, Louisiana, Georgia, South Carolina, or Mississippi. There will be work still to be done by a regional office to assist the state organizations to help bring about compliance with the Supreme Court decision.

The trend of recent Supreme Court decisions is toward holding un-Constitutional the expenditure of public funds for segregated facilities or services. I.C.C. rulings demand non-segregation in inter-state transportation and in terminal and depot facilities. The President's Committee on Government Contracts is working to end discrimination and segregation in all plants which have contracts with the federal government. Organized labor is united as never before and this gigantic force is seeking an end to discrimination and segregation in its locals. As big business and industry move into the South new demands for conformity to the national pattern will be felt even more.

The demands for change on the part of the South are multiplying; they are many times what they were only months ago. To assist the South and its people through this period of transition there is a need for an integrated organization which has had experience in assisting social change and has earned the confidence of both white and colored people.

There is in the South today only one organization which meets all of these requirements: The Southern Regional Council. A joint planning committee composed of representatives of the Board, the central staff, the state staffs, and competent social scientists should sit down together to examine the needs of the South in the continuing adjustment and to plan how the Council may help fill those needs. Its future must not rest on the continuation of funds from one source, no matter how generous. A well organized, far-seeing finance committee is a must. A professionally competent program planning committee is a must. An adequate professional consultant service is a must. A well trained professional staff is a must. A dedicated Board of Directors is a must.

If the Council really cares about the South of the future toward which it has worked, then it has work yet to do. Let it never be claimed that the leaders of SRC said, as did Louis XV,

"Apres moi le deluge."

I remind you of the approach of a December 15th time for the memo on continuance of SRC after the expiration of the Fund for the Republic grant.

MEMO to GSM from CHP

THE FUTURE OF THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

The future of SRC would seem to center around Program, Organization and Financing with priority being given to these items in the order of their listing.

Two questions to be considered in connection with program are:

What is the unique role of SRC as presently constituted?

Is there any need for SRC? Or more precisely, Will there be a need for SRC after the period of the grant from FFR?

Perhaps it would be fitting to say that what is unique about SRC is not what it does but how it does it. Ours is an integrated approach. We have in the past combined in various degrees advocacy, professional service and research. For the most part the emphasis has been on advocacy. We have urged equality of opportunity and we now urge compliance with the law of the land. We will have fulfilled our unique mission, however, if we can 'sell' the integrated approach. We are in a better position than anyone else to promote this approach because we have been working at it longer than anyone else. Our future depends upon the extent to which we can incorporate this experience into a body of technical knowledge and thus make available to the South a much needed professional service. Our major function would be that of imparting to others the skills we have acquired. We are not staffed for research but we have a continuing function of disseminating the findings of other research workers. Under appropriate conditions our files should be available to responsible social scientists for research purposes.

Assuming the realization of the ideal of twelve financially secure, autonomous state organizations dedicated to the achievement of SRC goals, it is difficult to see the need for anything more than a skeletal regional organization to serve as a sort of clearing house that would facilitate communication among the affiliated groups. Even if this ideal is not reached, any movement toward it would involve a corresponding reduction of SRC staff and budget.

The prospect is not bright for financial support that would make the state organizations independent of help from outside their borders. It is unrealistic to expect memberships and individual contributions of small sums by many people to be nearly enough to keep state organizations going. Sizeable donations in "hard core" states will almost invariably turn out to be bribes to get us to turn aside from the school segregation controversy. Local financial support for the SRC program would appear to be in inverse relationship to Need. On the other hand, in a few states where the political atmosphere is more congenial to our purposes, effective state councils may be taken over and operated at public expense. This would be an extension into the South of the pattern of official recognition and backing of human relations programs. In any event SRC would have to look to outside foundation support for its continued existence.

If SRC demonstrated its ability to provide the unique professional service which will be in great demand throughout the South during the next few years, there should be no great difficulty in getting the necessary funds. This is the task before us.

Commission on Interracial Cooperation

409 PALMER BUILDING
Atlanta, Ga.

January 1, 1930

My dear Mrs. Ozmer:

Several weeks ago the Commission received some complimentary copies of Major Moton's book, "What the Negro Thinks". We are putting one in the hands of a selected group of men and women who we believe are concerned about the numerous problems that arise in the South because of the race situation.

I am sending you one of these which I am sure will interest you.

Major Moton is a leader among Negroes and tho he does not speak for all the race, notably the radical wing, he can be set down as representing the majority. We are all curious about what the other fellow thinks.

Will you pass the book on to others and keep it going until it is worn out, and will you write me what you think of the book yourself?

Sincerely yours,

THE INTERRACIAL FRONT

Annual Report of Commission on Interracial Cooperation

During the past year the staff of the Commission on Interracial Coöperation has consisted of the Executive Director, three Directors of the Departments of Education, Woman's Work, and Research, five members of the Headquarters Clerical Staff, and one full-time and four part-time field men. The organizational set-up comprises the Commission, with 126 members representing thirteen Southern states; thirteen State Committees, with fifty to several hundred members each; and a large number of local committees. While the state and local committees are autonomous, they are fostered by and coöperate with the Commission, the parent body.

Because of a greatly reduced field staff it has been impossible of late for the Commission to give adequate attention to the field work. In spite of this, however, most of the state committees have continued to work. They have held well-attended annual meetings, given earnest attention to interracial conditions in the several states, and sought to build public opinion, liberalize public policies, and preserve amicable and coöperative relations between the two racial groups. The local committees, of which hundreds were organized in the early days of the movement, are continuing to function more or less effectively in most of the large cities and in many smaller cities and towns. These local committees work on definite projects—schools, libraries, sanitation and health, protection of life and property, legal aid, and many other conditions involving interracial injustice and neglect.

In addition to the promotion and encouragement of the field work referred to above, the Commission has concerned itself chiefly with the emergent economic and social conditions incident to the depression, and with popular education, woman's work, legal aid, anti-lynching activities, research and investigation. This general classification, however, is neither exhaustive nor quite exact.

Problems Incident to the Depression

It was inevitable that the economic crisis of the last four years should affect the interracial situation very seriously. Widespread unemployment, due to the collapse of agriculture and industry, has greatly sharpened the competition for jobs, which in some cases has been particularly intense along the color line. Long before the NRA came into existence, white men were displacing Negroes, sometimes in occupations previously recognized as exclusive Negro jobs. Occasionally the struggle took the form of intimidation and, in some cases, of actual violence. The most notable recent illustration was the series of assassinations of Negro locomotive firemen in Mississippi and Louisiana, evidently with the purpose of running all Negro trainmen off their jobs. Idleness on the part of both races has been conducive to unrest, ill temper, crimes against property, and other irritating conditions. Certain efforts to lead Negroes to revolutionary violence have fomented mutual distrust, fear and potential hostility, and have developed a number of threatening situations.

These conditions have laid heavy additional responsibility upon the Commission, and at the same time have added greatly to the difficulty of its work. Realizing in the early days of the depression the possibilities of interracial conflict which it involved, the Commission and its related groups have watched the situation closely and have been active constantly in efforts to prevent friction, obviate or correct injustices, protect the interests of the Negro in industry, and coöperate with government agencies seeking the permanent improvement of the condition of Negroes.

In Alabama where revolutionary agitation has been especially noticeable and the resulting tension has been greater than in any other section of the South, the State Interracial Committee, with the advice and assistance of the headquarters staff, has been quietly but persistently active in the effort to preserve interracial understanding and good will, and has been able to ameliorate to some extent what otherwise might have developed into a situation much more serious.

Cooperation in Recovery Program

In view of the fact that Negroes have been among the greatest sufferers from the depression in both agriculture and industry the Commission's staff has devoted a great deal of time during the last two or three years to a study of various phases of this situation and to the effort to render as much help as possible in the Administration's recovery program. These efforts may be classified roughly as follows:

1. Agricultural Conditions.—Extensive field investigations were made of the administration of the farmers' loans provided by the Government for the purchase of feed, seed, and fertilizer. Efforts were put forth to help Negro farmers qualify for this type of relief and to see that it was made equally available to both races. Last year similar investigations were conducted as to the distribution of federal funds in compensation for the plowing up of cotton and the limitation of crop acreage. The significant facts discovered in these investigations were brought to the attention of the proper government authorities, who received them with assurances that a distinct service to the Administration has been rendered in this way.

2. Differential Wage.—When the NRA became effective, with its general increase of wages, many employers of labor in the South began a determined drive for a differential wage rate as between Negro and white workers, on the alleged ground that such a differential was necessary as a protection to Negro workers. The Commission has consistently opposed this effort, as subversive of the best interests of both Negro and white labor, as detrimental to the South, and as tending to defeat the Administration's plan for economic recovery. So far the drive for a differential has met with no favor in Washington. On August 27th the press carried widely the following statement on this subject by Dr. Will W. Alexander, Executive Director of the Commission:

"Employers of labor who are urging a lower wage level for Negroes under the code of the NRA are offering a dangerous proposal. If put into effect, it would undermine the President's program of economic recovery in the South, and at the same time would cut the economic foundations from under the feet of white working men. Negroes, pressed to accept and even to ask for such a differential, are vigorously and, I think, quite properly objecting. They are unwilling to be put in the role of 'scabs', undercutting the white man's wage and standard of living.

"They maintain soundly that in case of equal work and equal efficiency justice demands equal wages. They point also to the practical fact that Negroes have to pay just as much for the necessities of life as white people do. To force them to a lower level than the minimum set by the NRA can mean only lower living standards than those contemplated by the code. This would inevitably play into the hands of unscrupulous employers eager to sidestep their obligations in this crisis. It would constitute also a limitation of the Negro's purchasing power which would cripple the whole program of recovery in the South. There can be no economic recovery for the South that does not include the Negro. The wiser economic leaders will not acquiesce in a plan so obviously unsound."

3. Effect of NRA.—Anticipating the possibility of some displacement of Negro workers as the result of the NRA wage scales, the Commission has kept close watch on this situation and has made careful investigation of conditions in a score of representative cities and towns. These surveys, while revealing displacement, indicate that many Negroes employed when the NRA went into effect have been retained at the higher wage levels. The final effect of the NRA on the status of Negro workers remains to be seen. The Commission is gathering the facts that will be necessary to deal intelligently with the situation, whatever it may be.

4. Distribution of Relief.—Close watch has been kept also on the distribution of direct and work relief, in the effort to see that the needs of the Negro unemployed were taken care of. In general the policies of relief administrators on this point seem to have been commendable. However, not a few situations involving neglect and discrimination have been discovered and dealt with through the proper authorites.

5. Helpful Contacts Maintained.—In these varied efforts, the Commission has been in constant contact with various branches of the recovery administration, and has been called upon repeatedly to investigate and report on special phases of the recovery program as they effect Negroes. Just now (March, 1934) these contacts are assuming greater importance in connection with developing plans for the permanent rural rehabilitation of Negroes on a large scale.

6. Housing Projects.—The Executive Director has been able to help in developing two government slum clearance projects in Atlanta and New Orleans. Each will involve millions of dollars, and if carried to completion will wipe out large slum areas and provide at moderate prices the best type of modern housing for hundreds of families.

In this connection it is gratifying to note that three members of the Commission have been called to important positions in the National Administration. These are Clark Foreman, who was appointed special assistant to the Secretary of the Interior with particular responsibility for the interests of Negroes in the recovery program; Henry A. Hunt, president of Fort Valley Normal and Industrial School, appointed advisor in the department of Federal Farm and Home Loans; and Forrester B. Washington, director of the Atlanta School of Social Work, appointed by Administrator Harry Hopkins as assistant in the Department of Federal Relief.

Dillard University

Two years ago the Director agreed to accept the acting presidency of Dillard University, an institution to be created by the merger of New Orleans University, Straight College, and the Flint-Goodridge Hospital. Meantime, while continuing his connection with the Commission, he has devoted a great deal of time to the effectuation of this merger. The first unit of the combined institution, the new Flint-Goodridge Hospital, was completed and opened more than a year ago and is now in successful operation. This institution, costing more than $300,000, was built as the result of the generous subscriptions of hundreds of New Orleans citizens of both races and is a notable tribute to the effectiveness of interracial coöperation.

It is gratifying to note that work on the new University plant, to be built on a valuable and commodious site in the suburbs of New Orleans, will begin at an early date, with the expectation of opening the institution in the fall of 1935. It is felt that the significance of this enterprise as an interracial project has justified the time and effort which have been required to bring it to fruition.

Educational Program—The Press

The educational program has endeavored to affect public opinion through all available channels. Constant use has been made of newspapers and magazines to the number of 2,000, including all the daily papers in the South, many of the weeklies, all the Negro papers in the country, and the principal journals devoted to religion, education, and other special interests. The purpose of this news service has been "to interpret each race to the other in the most favorable light consistent with the facts." In this effort we have had generous and helpful coöperation on the part of the Associated Press, the United Press, the International News Service, and the Associated Negro Press. The attitude of the newspapers continues intelligent, friendly, and coöperative.

Race Relations Study in Public Schools

Recognizing that interracial prejudice, neglect, and injustice are rooted more often in ignorance and misinformation than in deliberate malice, the Commission is convinced that consistent educational processes, as nearly universal as possible, offer the only sure hope of fundamental improvement. For several years, therefore, it has been endeavoring to develop the study of race relations in the public schools and colleges of the South. A five-thousand-word unit of study on the Negro's constructive contribution to American life has been prepared and made available to thousands of public school principals and teachers. Hundreds of these institutions all across the South have introduced this study and more than 90,000 copies of the source pamphlet have been utilized. Some very remarkable work has been done. A striking example is that of the white schools of a Mississippi city which last year enlisted a thousand boys and girls in this study and had four hundred of them prepare papers on it.

Many schools have greatly expanded the study to include community surveys, visitation of Negro schools, programs for the information of the public, etc.

Without doubt this project has made a definite contribution to interracial understanding on the part of a great many teachers and students. Its chief significance, however, is the fact that it has demonstrated the acceptability and effectiveness of this type of work in the public schools. The project has been approved by practically every Southern state department of education, and has received wide and enthusiastic endorsement at the hands of teachers who have tried it. There have been no unfavorable comments from any quarter.

Last summer at Peabody College the Commission brought together thirty representatives of the state departments of education of the thirteen Southern states, including a number of state superintendents, and laid before them the opportunity and obligation which the public schools have in this connection. After two days of careful consideration, the group unanimously declared that "we desire to see a better understanding in race relations and believe this can be brought about through education." As a means of achieving this end, these educators made the definite recommendation that "suggestions and lesson plans on this subject should be prepared and made available to all the schools in the South," and that ultimately a suitable textbook on the Negro's part in American life should be included in the course of study. Without a doubt such a program in the public schools would go far toward creating interracial understanding and justice. The Commission considers this a reasonable goal and is pursuing a definite plan for its achievement.

The several state departments are now engaged in surveys of their public school textbooks with relation to their treatment of this question, with a view to determining what changes need to be made in the interest of more intelligent interracial attitudes.

Colleges Enlisted

Another major educational interest has been centered in the colleges and teacher-training institutions, as the sources from which the streams of popular education flow. Efforts in this field have been sponsored and directed by committees of outstanding educational leaders, headed by Dr. Bruce R. Payne, president of Peabody College, and including President Frank Graham of the University of North Carolina, Superintendent Willis A. Sutton of the Atlanta Public Schools, State Superintendent James H. Hope of South Carolina, and many others of equal influence.

Under these favorable auspices, three notable Conferences on Education and Racial Adjustment have been held in the past three years and an approach has been made to the four hundred universities, colleges, and teacher-training institutions in the South in the interest of a definite program of education in race relations. The response has been gratifying, and courses in race relations have been introduced in not less than 150 institutions. A notable illustration is the program carried out in successive years in Arkansas State Teachers College, in which each of the 800 students was brought into contact with a carefully planned program of race relations education. A textbook on the subject, prepared under the auspices of the Commission especially for teachers colleges, and an exhaustive source book for reference purposes are nearing completion. It is the Commission's purpose to give major attention during the next few years to this phase of its educational program, since the teachers college is the strategic point of attack upon the whole problem.

Women Form Anti-Lynching Association

The Department of Woman's Work, through the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching, has continued its campaign against mob violence. This Association, organized three years ago by the Director of Woman's Work, already has a membership of more than 17,000 women, each of whom has signed the following pledge:

"We declare lynching is an indefensible crime destructive of all principles of government, hateful and hostile to every ideal of religion and humanity, debasing and degrading to every person involved. Though lynchings are not confined to any one section of the United States, we are aroused by the record which discloses our heavy responsibility for the presence of this crime in our country. We believe that this record has been achieved because public opinion has accepted too easily the claim of lynchers and mobsters that they were acting solely in the defense of womanhood. In the light of facts, this claim can no longer be used as a protection to those who lynch. We pledge ourselves to create a new public opinion in the South which will not condone for any reason whatever acts of mobs or lynchers."

The 17,000 signers represent 2250 separate communities in fourteen Southern states. Without exception they are women of standing and influence and their numbers are being increased steadily. In turn they are securing the signatures of their local sheriffs, police chiefs, and other offices to the following pledge:

"I oppose and condemn the crime of lynching for any alleged cause as one destructive of all principles of American government. I endorse every effort of citizens to create a public opinion which will support all officers of the law in the discharge of their oath of office, to support and defend the Constitution of the State and of the United States, and as one of these officers, I will assist in this campaign for the eradication of lynching."

The several state councils of this Association meet annually, carry on an educational campaign against lynching, watch for dangerous situations, seek to avert threatened trouble, support officers who resist mobs, and demand court action in cases of mob violence. This organization has made investigations of a number of recent lynchings and has published the facts, which in many cases show mistaken identity in mob action, the connivance of officers, and the unwillingness of courts to convict. In this movement the great religious organizations of women are coöperating, with their direct approach to hundreds of thousands of the most influential women in the South. It is believed that the significance of this mobilization of Southern women can hardly be overestimated.

Another important phase of work among the women of the South has been the effort to make interracial education and activity a part of the regular programs of their various organizations, civic, educational, and religious. The plan comprehends local studies of Negro schools, health, civic conditions, racial attitudes in children, and the like, leading to efforts along many lines for the improvement of the conditions affecting Negroes. This program has been officially adopted by the missionary organizations of Southern Methodist, Baptist, and Presbyterian women and is widely operative. Since there are more than fifteen thousand of these organized groups, all potentially committed to a race relations program, the possibilities of this line of approach are very great.

Research and Investigation

Two important research projects were consummated during the past year, the one a series of case studies of recent lynchings and the other an exhaustive study of anti-lynching laws and judicial practice state by state. Both studies were made by members of the Commission's staff and were sponsored by the Southern Commission on the Study of Lynching, a group of eleven representative Southern leaders.

The case study report was published last summer by the University of North Carolina Press, in a 500-page volume, entitled "The Tragedy of Lynching." This has attracted wide and favorable attention.

The purpose of the judicial study, which was made with the advice of the deans of nineteen Southern law schools, was to reveal the weak points in legislative enactment and court procedure with relation to the prevention and punishment of lynching, and to suggest additional measures which might seem desirable. The 220-page report of this study, entitled "Lynching and the Law," was issued recently from the Press of the University of North Carolina.

During the summer, an exhaustive investigation was made of a series of lynchings in and around Tuscaloosa, Ala., and of the attendant community conditions and attitudes. The results of this investigation were published in a 40-page report, entitled "The Plight of Tuscaloosa," which was given wide circulation in Alabama and surrounding states. Though this report constitutes a vigorous indictment of community attitudes and practices and points to connivance and actual participation of officers in two of the lynchings perpetrated, its accuracy has not been challenged. A number of the year's lynchings in other states were investigated by the research staff and the facts were given to the public, together with demands for court action. In some of these cases indictments are now pending, but in the light of past experience, the probability of conviction is not great.

Legal Aid

A number of significant cases pending in the courts during the past year have demanded considerable attention. Persistent efforts were put forth to secure a change of venue in the Scottsboro cases, and failing in that, to guarantee adequate protection to the prisoners in the trials held at Decatur.

The upsurge of lynching during the past year, bringing the number of victims to twenty-eight, as against eight for the year 1932, has been distressing, but it is not necessarily to be taken as indicating a permanent trend. A study of the lynching curve over the past five decades shows that it has invariably been affected unfavorably in periods of economic stress. There is reason to believe that the increase of last year may be explained largely on this ground. It has served, however, to shock the nation into a fresh realization of the horror of this practice, and affords a favorable background for renewed efforts to eradicate it. The Costigan-Wagner Anti-Lynching bill now pending in Congress has received wider popular support than previous proposed federal anti-lynching laws, not a little of this support coming from the South. The opinion of the Commission is divided as to the probable wisdom and effectiveness of this bill; hence, it has taken no official stand regarding it. Whatever the fate of the bill the discussion of the matter will doubtless have value in the development of intelligent public sentiment for the eradication of lynching.

Members of the Commission are agreed, however, that the present interest in the subject should be utilized in strengthening the anti-lynching laws of various states where the present legal safeguards are felt to be inadequate. A measure looking to this end has already been introduced in the legislature of Kentucky and similar efforts are contemplated in other states.

COMMISSION ON INTERRACIAL COOPERATION

ATLANTA, GA.

March, 1939

"No agency has contributed more to the establishment and maintenance of tolerable relations between the black and white races in the South than has the Interracial Commission. Its policy and methods are simple and sound. It proceeds on the theory that the basis of nearly all racial hatred and animosity is lack of mutual understanding among the peoples of the earth. It therefore makes it possible for the choicest minds and spirits of the two races of the South to meet around a common council table, and through contact and free interchange of opinion to arrive at a clearer understanding of the hopes, ideals and standards of each other. A decrease in lynchings, an improvement in educational facilities, a sympathetic study of the Negro in colleges and universities, and the appearance of influential Negro leaders before selected audiences of white people, to discuss the race question from the Negro's angle, are some of the unusual and salutary concrete results of the activities of the Interracial Commission."

COMMISSION ON INTERRACIAL COOPERATION

A Brief Report of Recent Activities

From its inception, the Commission on Interracial Cooperation has had two objectives: (1) the correction of conditions involving interracial injustice or neglect; and (2) the improvement of mistaken attitudes out of which such conditions grow.

At the outset, when there were sufficient funds to maintain one or more field men in each state, the major emphasis was on the first type of work. Interracial committees were set up in every Southern state and in hundreds of communities, and functioned effectively for the improvement of state and local conditions. Later, because of diminishing funds, it became necessary to reduce the field staff and to put relatively greater emphasis upon the second or educational phase of the Commission's program. In spite of this, however, most of the state committees have continued to function, some of them quite effectively, and many local committees are still doing good work.

VIRGINIA AND NORTH CAROLINA

In this respect, the work in Virginia and North Carolina stands well out in front. Each of these states has a very large interracial committee—1200 members in Virginia and 2000 in North Carolina. These were carefully selected and in North Carolina were invited to accept membership by the Governor of the state and in Virginia by a United States Senator. It would be difficult to mobilize in either state a more representative or influential group. Working together, the two employ a full-time secretary and raise an annual budget of $5000. This amount, supplemented by an appropriation of $2500 from the general Commission, makes possible a continuous and effective program.

During the last year, the Virginia Committee contributed materially to the enactment of a bill providing for state care of feeble-minded Negro children. In certain critical situations it has done useful service as an agency of understanding and conciliation. It is now at work on the new educational adjustments made necessary by the recent Supreme Court decision in the Missouri case. Other recent interests have been the promotion of a Federal housing project for Negroes and the organization of a permanent camp for Negro boys.

ACTIVE LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

The North Carolina Committee has been active in the present legislature in behalf of an anti-lynching bill sponsored by Governor Hoey. It is also pushing a nine-point legislative program for the improvement of Negro education, and is seeking the fuller representation of Negro social workers in the expanded social security program. Many members of the legislature are members of the State Committee and the Governor is its honorary chairman.

Numerous state and regional conferences have been held in both states, attended by outstanding leaders in religious, educational, civic and political circles. Close contacts are maintained with the church leadership. Effective work has been done, also, in promoting in the public schools the study of the racial situation. A unit of study on this subject, developed in a Virginia school, has been published and put into the hands of 3000 teachers. In many important centers in both states there are local committees which deal with such emergent issues as education, health, housing, recreation, police protection, and other conditions involving Negro welfare. The newspapers have been sympathetic and cooperative.

TEXAS

Perhaps next in effective field work has been the State Committee of Texas. This Committee has a hundred dues-paying members, meets regularly, and functions ad interim through an active executive body. After years of persistent effort, it has at last secured from the legislature the establishment and maintenance of a State Tuberculosis Sanitarium for Negroes. This institution is already full and the Committee is pressing for an increase of its capacity. The Committee has also secured legislative authorization for a State Home for Delinquent Negro Girls.

Among other achievements of the Texas Committee and affiliated local committees have been the establishment of health units for Negroes, the inclusion of colored teachers in the Teacher Retirement Act, establishment of day nurseries, equitable distribution of social security benefits, improvement of rural schools, and fairer distribution of state per capita educational appropriations. For more than a year the organization has been working for an annual legislative appropriation of $30,000 to provide scholarships for Negroes seeking graduate work not available in the Negro colleges of the state. This measure is now pending in the legislature. The Committee is seeking means to employ a paid secretary and to finance its work more adequately.

GEORGIA, MISSISSIPPI, SOUTH CAROLINA

The State Committees of Georgia, Mississippi and South Carolina have recently been reorganized and started afresh on corrective and educational programs. The new South Carolina Committee has a membership of one hundred and has set up the following as its immediate objectives:

1. To secure and disseminate information as to state and local conditions that need attention.
2. To mobilize civic, educational, social, philanthropic, and religious agencies for the improvement of these conditions.
3. To set up a local committee in every county, comprising in its membership a cross section of private and official leadership. The process of local organization is now under way and committees have been organized in a number of communities.

The new Mississippi Committee has eighty-eight members drawn from all parts of the state. Represented in the membership are the State Department of Education, State Board of Health, State University and Teachers' Colleges, State College for Negroes, Federation of Negro Women's Clubs, Children's Home Society, National Youth Administration, Works Progress Administration, and other organizations and groups. In the last legislature the Committee supported, but unsuccessfully, a bill to create a state training school for delinquent Negro youth. Its program comprises the preparation and wide distribution of educational material on race relations. Through the cooperation of the Mississippi Education Association, 9,000 copies of materials for race relations study were recently placed in the hands of the public school teachers. This material was supplied by the Committee but was distributed by and at the expense of the Education Association.

The Georgia Committee, recently reconstituted, has built up a representative paid membership numbering more than a hundred and growing rapidly. It has an active executive committee which meets monthly, and holds frequent regional meetings in various sections of the state. For the time the Committee's major interest is focused chiefly on education, health, and equality before the law.

OTHER STATES

State committees set up several years ago in Kentucky and Tennessee still hold together, meet regularly, and exercise a constructive influence for the improvement of interracial attitudes and conditions. The improvement of educational and health facilities have been major objectives in these two states. Members of the Alabama Committee have worked quietly and with good results in the Scottsboro affair and other cases involving justice in the courts. The work in Arkansas, Louisiana and Florida has suffered seriously for lack of executive stimulation and should be reorganized and set going anew as early as possible.

ANTI-LYNCHING CRUSADE

In the meantime, in furtherance of its second objective, the Commission's educational program has gone forward along a number of lines. The phenomenal growth of the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching is a notable example.

Set up by the Commission in 1931, and developed under the leadership of a member of the Commission's staff, this organization has enlisted a membership of 40,000 Southern women, representing 2,800 communities in fifteen states. Each of these women has signed personally a declaration repudiating lynching for any cause whatever, and pledging herself "to create a new public opinion in the South which will not condone for any reason whatever the acts of mobs or lynchers." In turn, the Association has secured similar pledges from 3,300 men, including more than 1,200 sheriffs and other officers of the law.

The leaders of the Association are always on the alert for threatening situations, ready to appeal promptly to the governors and other officials to take vigorous preventive measures. When lynchings occur, they voice prompt condemnation and demand court action. They have interviewed most of the Southern governors; from time to time they communicate with all the sheriffs of their respective states; they write articles for the papers and enlist the support of the editors.

Numerous state anti-lynching institutes have been held. Speakers representing the Association have visited scores of colleges and presented the cause to thousands of students. They have also addressed hundreds of religious and civic organizations of women, urging their enlistment in the anti-lynching crusade. As a result, no less than seventy-eight important state and national bodies have officially committed themselves to a program of education for the prevention of lynching.

There can be no doubt that the Association has made a definite and important impact on public opinion and that it is in part responsible for the steady decline of lynchings to the low records of eight, eight and six for the past three years.

RACE RELATIONS STUDY IN THE SCHOOLROOM

The approach to public opinion through the colleges and public schools has been another interesting and rewarding phase of the Commission's educational work. For a number of years efforts have been under way on an increasing scale to make educators aware of the obligation to prepare the rising generation to meet fairly the problems incident to the South's bi-racial population. This has entailed numerous educational conferences and a vast amount of correspondence.

The college professors of sociology were first approached and asked to consider the feasibility of introducing race relations courses in their respective institutions. Interest immediately developed and a few such courses were introduced. The results of these experiments were highly satisfactory and the movement has spread steadily till more than seventy Southern colleges are now giving definite courses on this subject. Many others list courses in social problems and general sociology as giving specific attention to race relations.

HUNDREDS OF COLLEGES COOPERATE

Anxious to enlist yet other institutions, the Commission has prepared numerous bulletins on various phases of the racial situation, suitable respectively for integration in courses in sociology, American history, literature and education. These have been made available from time to time to 1200 teachers of the above subjects in 400 colleges. Hundreds of teachers in 260 different institutions have welcomed these materials and assigned them to their classes for supplementary study, report and discussion. Last spring, for example, deans and professors of education in 115 teacher-training schools ordered more than 25,000 copies of one of our late bulletins, "Education for Southern Citizenship." These they put into the hands of the upper class students preparing to teach. Altogether, not less than 200,000 copies of the Commission's various bulletins have been used in this way in the colleges of the South. They have been in demand also in a number of great institutions in other sections of the country, including Columbia University, Smith College, Bucknell, Johns Hopkins, and others. Scores of professors write enthusiastically of the results, and express warm appreciation of the service rendered by the Commission in this way.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS WIDELY ENLISTED

Several years ago efforts were begun to enlist the public schools, also, in simple factual studies and projects concerning the racial situation. The response has been general and encouraging. To date, more than a thousand schools have cooperated in the plan, enlisting a vast number of children in the study of the Negro's history, achievements and contribution to American life and the practical problems involved in his presence here. In many cases, the pupils supplemented their classroom work with visits to the Negro districts of their respective communities, interviews with Negro leaders, and first-hand observations of Negro schools, business development, housing conditions, and the like. The comments of principals and teachers relative to these studies and projects have invariably been favorable, often enthusiastic.

OFFICIAL APPROVAL GIVEN

The plan has received the approval of all the Southern state departments of education and a number of them have cooperated with the Commission in bringing it to the attention of thousands of teachers. Most significant of all is the fact that it has been written into the official curriculum bulletins of Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee and Virginia. Thus the weight of official approval and authority is given to the study of questions which a few years ago would have been completely taboo.

Several surveys of textbook content relative to the Negro have been made, revealing the need of extensive revision of many of these books in the direction of a fairer, more adequate treatment of this subject. The findings of these surveys have been brought personally to the attention of more than 500 leading textbook authors and publishers.

MUCH YET TO BE DONE

Though the results so far attained in the schools are most encouraging, it is freely admitted that a great deal remains to be done. The number of college courses in race relations should be increased till one is securely established in every important college in the South. A normal treatment of some aspect of the subject should be integrated into every college department of sociology, history, literature, music, art and education. Every teacher-training institution should be preparing teachers-in-training for intelligent, effective work in this field. Thousands of teachers already in service need to be awakened to the importance of this type of work and afforded aid in introducing it. New textbooks should be written and old books revised in order that a fuller and fairer picture may be presented. By such means only may we hope adequately to prepare the youth of today to deal intelligently and fairly with the obligations of tomorrow.

Other phases of the Commission's educational program have been the continued cultivation of the newspapers and press associations, contributions to religious journals, contacts with the educational agencies of the churches, promotion of Race Relations Sunday, and supplying informative literature to thousands of enquirers.

OTHER ACTIVITIES

During the depression period the Commission's department of research has made many investigations of the conditions and needs of Negroes in industry, agriculture, and on the relief rolls. In many cases the results of these inquiries have been laid before the responsible authorities, often at their request, and have helped materially, it is believed, in working out the problems involved. Assistance has been rendered also in a series of important fact-finding studies recently carried out by a number of public-spirited agencies in Georgia.

The Commission has also been able from time to time to render legal aid in important cases involving the miscarriage of justice in relation to Negroes. Within the month, for example, it helped save the lives of three Negro youths who, on wholly insufficient testimony, had been hurriedly convicted of murder and sentenced to the electric chair. New evidence was discovered, a retrial was secured, and executive clemency was sought. As a result, two of the number have been set free and the third is serving a relatively short prison sentence. This victory was the more notable in that it was achieved in the county nationally advertised some years ago by the famous "murder farm" case, involving the murder of eleven Negro convicts employed on the farm, presumptively to prevent their giving evidence of peonage. Prosecution in that case, resulting in convictions and life imprisonment, it will be remembered, was financed by the Commission.

A NATIONAL SERVICE

The Executive Director, though on partial leave of absence in Washington, has kept in close touch with the Commission's work by frequent visits and regular correspondence. In view of the fact that he first went to Washington as a representative of the Commission to work for a Federal program of ownership rehabilitation for landless farmers, 700,000 of them Negroes, and later, in the Resettlement and Farm Security Administrations, was put in charge of this program, it is felt that his contribution to Negro welfare in this connection is directly in line with his responsibility to the Commission and is perhaps greater than he could have made in any other way.

On February 8th and 9th, 1940, delegates from State Committees on Interracial Cooperation met in Atlanta to discuss the problems of organization, programs of work, and the creation of a sympathetic public attitude toward these programs. Early in the first session it developed that these problems were the usual ones facing volunteer workers in the field of social and economic relations characteristic of minority and majority peoples.

The states were represented by each State Chairman, or his alternate, and two delegates appointed by the State Chairman with the approval of the State Executive Committee. The sessions of the conference were in charge of these delegates. At no time did they forget that all their plans and their programs must be of a kind that could be carried through by volunteer workers.

This booklet—the conclusions of the delegates—is issued both to serve those who were present in developing the work already begun and to inspire other states to take up their own problems in ways which promise the largest return in the field of interracial action.

CONFERENCE ON FIELD ACTIVITIES

State Interracial Committees

February 8, 1940

Mrs. M. M. Hubert, Presiding
Vice-Chairman, Mississippi Council on Interracial Cooperation.

2:30 P. M.—Round Table 1

What methods should be pursued by state interracial committees in educating the public on policy and program?

C. H. Bynum, Texas—Leader
Mrs. C. C. Alford, Mississippi
J. P. Burgess, South Carolina
Mrs. E. B. Harrold, Georgia

The delegates agreed that each state had developed special ways of reaching the public, all of which were adaptable to every State Committee.

The result of this Round Table is embodied in the following recommendations:

Your committee recommends the development of the following methods in the education of public opinion in the South:

1. Regional Institutes on Adult Education should be organized and conducted. (Appendix VI.)
2. Speakers Bureaus should be developed and prepared. (Appendix IV.)
3. State Committees should organize local committees throughout the states.
4. State and local committees should prepare publicity materials.

3:30 P. M.—Round Table 2

Should state interracial committees set up well-defined organizations?

Thomas M. Bond, Kentucky—Leader
Mrs. Leon S. Holley, South Carolina
Mrs. W. A. Turner, Georgia
Mrs. L. W. Alford, Mississippi

After presentation of the organizations of state committees in Texas, Mississippi, Georgia, and South Carolina, the leaders of the Round Table brought in the following recommendations for future state committees, which were unanimously adopted:

This committee recommends the following organization outline as a basis for future organization of state committees:

1. Membership

There should be an unlimited membership, divided equally as to race and sex. The membership should represent all sections of the state and should be drawn from civic, religious, and educational organizations.

2. ADVISORY COMMITTEE

   The Texas plan of an advisory committee should be adopted by all state organizations. (Appendix III.)

3. EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

   Sixteen members should be the minimum number on the Executive Committee with due recognition of race and sex.

   This committee should represent the membership of the state committee as to geography, race, and sex.

4. MEETINGS

   The Executive Committee should meet at regular and stated intervals. There should be an annual meeting of the State Committee.

5. FINANCES

   There should be a state membership fee of at least one dollar annually which would include a subscription to THE SOUTHERN FRONTIER.

Should the state interracial committees attempt to work together on a common project?

DR. BENJAMIN F. HUBERT, Georgia—Leader
A. J. FINCH, Mississippi
DR. T. W. CURRIE, Texas
MACK M. GOSS, South Carolina

Before the regular business discussion, Mr. Fred McCuistion of the General Education Board, present by special invitation, was asked to discuss the status of State Agents for Negro Education in the State Departments of Education. (Appendix II.)

In discussing the question whether or not there was any one condition which was present in all the Southern states and could be made a common project, it developed that there were many conditions from which to choose. However, Mr. McCuistion had presented a situation which the delegates believed called for immediate consideration and which should be taken up by them at once.

The following recommendation was unanimously adopted:

Your committee recommends to the Executive Committee of each State Committee on Interracial Cooperation a two-point program: First, that in cooperation with the State Superintendents of Education the state committees develop an intensive program of education of the public on the value of the work of State Agents for the Division of Negro Education to insure proper and adequate appropriations by state legislatures for the support of this office; second, that at every opportunity the state committees inform the public of the status of teachers' salaries in their respective states so that at an early date equalization of these salaries on a basis of qualifications may be attained.

MACK M. GOSS, Presiding
Chairman, South Carolina Interracial Committee

2:00 P. M.—ROUND TABLE 4

Shall we meet again? MRS. W. A. NEWELL, North Carolina—Leader
MRS. M. M. HUBERT, Mississippi
MRS. HENRY HAVENS, Florida
DR. FREDERICK D. PATTERSON, Alabama

The value of an annual meeting of representatives from state committees, at which difficulties as well as progress could be discussed by all the state representatives, was declared of great worth. Meeting and becoming acquainted with each other added greatly to their courage in continuing to work against obstacles in their own states, the delegates declared. For these and other reasons, it was unanimously voted to hold another WORK CONFERENCE.

It was agreed that if, in the judgment of those responsible for next year's program, an Advisory Committee is needed, the members of the committee should be the Chairmen of State Interracial Committees and two persons from each state which has no committee.

APPENDIX I

February 8, 1940—7:30 P. M.

Address—Dr. Will W. Alexander, Executive Director, Commission on Interracial Cooperation, Inc.

(By Dr. Alexander's request the editorial in the March issue of the Southern Frontier is reprinted herewith as a summary of his talk:)

THE SOUTH'S PROBLEM NUMBER ONE

In the so-called President's Report on Economic Conditions of the South appears the following statement: "because of the decrease in tillable land, in the older Southern States east of Texas, the farm acreage was actually less in 1930 than in 1860, though the rural population had nearly doubled."

In the meantime, the fertility of the soil that remained in cultivation, except in areas like the Mississippi Delta, has been greatly reduced. The birth rate in this region is higher than in any other section of the country. These facts about land and people point to the South's greatest problem: There are not enough acres to support the population on any decent level. If the total income were divided equally it would be insufficient. Since it is not so divided, there is at the bottom a large group of people caught in a net of unbelievable poverty and want. I know of 12,000 farm families in one Southern state whose total net worth, after a lifetime of toil, was less than ten dollars a family. These thousands are but typical of multitudes.

The situation is further complicated by the fact that we are shifting in our agricultural program from cotton to diversified farming and live-stock production. This change seems necessary, yet it is steadily reducing the demand for farm laborers and in addition limiting their opportunities for employment. Rapid mechanization, also, is contributing vastly to rural unemployment. It is said that each tractor displaces one and a half to two farm families, and the use of tractors is spreading; I know of one county alone where 700 tractors were installed in three years.

In the past, about one-quarter of the children from the rural sections of the South have found employment in industry in Southern cities or in the North. Industry, however, no longer needs them, since there are already millions of unemployed waiting eagerly at the factory gates. So long as this condition in industry prevails, there is no possibility of solving the problem of rural over-population by migration. The problems of these rural families must be attacked where they are. Yet, in this area where the largest part of our national population is being born, agriculture offers them less and less opportunity for any sort of satisfactory life.

The depression has made the Nation aware of this tragic situation. Unfortunately, however, both the South and the Nation have regarded it as an emergency that would pass with the depression, and thus far it has been treated as such. It is high time we realize that this is a chronic situation which did not originate with the depression and will not be very much affected by the return of so-called "prosperity."

The problem that we confront, therefore, is to find some means by which the Southern rural poor can be given an opportunity to live decently where they are. We shall find the solution only when we realize that this is a long-time problem, requiring long-time large-scale planning such as we have never done before. We must find a way by which this over-populated area can, with some decency, support its population. This is imperative, both for the South and for the Nation.

How to do this nobody at the moment can fully answer. It cannot be done by the states working by themselves; it cannot be done by the Federal government without the cooperation of the states. It will require broad statesmanship, trained technical leadership, and intelligent, cheerful cooperation on the part of the Southern people. It must, of course, include within its scope both whites and Negroes.

APPENDIX II

February 9, 1940—9 A. M.

Condensed remarks of Mr. Fred McCuistion, Field Agent, General Education Board:

Before discussing this question we should review the history of the development of the program of aid to education in the South. Then we may consider the problems which will be created when the General Education Board closes its program of aid and which must be faced now before they become critical.

In 1867 George Foster Peabody, New England financier, established the Peabody Education Fund of two million dollars to promote popular education in the South in cooperation with state and local authorities.

In 1868 General S. C. Armstrong, agent of the Freedman's Bureau, founded Hampton Institute.

In 1881 Booker T. Washington opened Tuskegee Institute.

In 1882 John F. Slater, a Connecticut manufacturer, established a fund of a million dollars for the development of educational facilities for Negroes.

In 1901 Robert C. Ogden, New York merchant, began a series of conferences which developed into the Southern Education Board.

In 1902 John D. Rockefeller established the General Education Board.

The set-up of the General Education Board was outlined in 1902 but it was a year later before it was incorporated. The Board itself grew out of the old Southern Education Board that had probed around in the South and found some of the problems you are talking about here.

The General Education Board adopted as its policy the suggestion of Dr. Buttrick: "Lay this foundation not on going down to save the South but by letting these funds flow through Southern channels, people and organizations, as rapidly as they come to see this problem and present it for help." In other words, the Board doesn't have a program of its own: the program grows out of the South—out of the problems here.

In 1905 the General Education Board made its first grant for Professors of Secondary Education at State Universities.

In 1907 the Anna T. Jeanes Fund, of a million dollars, was established for the improvement of small rural schools. The following year Dr. James H. Dillard became the executive director of this fund.

In 1911 Julius Rosenwald began to aid in building schools for Negroes; the Phelps-Stokes Fund was incorporated to administer the sum of a million dollars for education; the Carnegie Corporation was established; the General Education Board made its first grant for a State Agent for Rural Schools for Negroes to Virginia, followed later by grants to all the southern state departments of education for such agents.

In 1914 the Smith-Lever Bill was passed by Congress providing extension service for the improvement of rural life;

Divisions of Rural Education (white) were established in the Southern state departments and maintained with General Education Board aid for about 15 years.

In 1924-25 Divisions of Research and Divisions of Schoolhouse Planning and Construction began to be set up, and were maintained from 3 to 10 years with Board aid.

In 1930 or thereabouts, Divisions of Library Service and Divisions of Teacher Education were established in about half the southern states, operating for 4 or 5 years with Board Aid.

During this period of aid to the South for public education, the General Education Board also gave substantial sums for county training schools for Negroes, for Jeanes teachers, for summer school study, and for scholarships for both white and Negro people.

In 1939 the Board made its final appropriation for State Agents for Rural Schools for Negroes.

In answer to the Board's inquiry of the field staff, "When are we going to apply to this work the policy of helping a program for a certain time and then letting the states assume it?"—It was agreed that the Board would make a grant to continue the work for the period 1939-1946. Unless the states begin to assume some of the load, this grant, though available until 1946, is not sufficient to carry the work longer than 1943. So, if the state superintendents do not want to ask for the whole appropriation in one legislative year, part of it must be taken over by the legislatures meeting before that time.

State Agents:

No two State Agents will do the same thing at the same time. It is better for them not to be tied down to a set program. Practically all the money available for Negro education has been spent under their supervision, and increased funds have been secured from the states by them. They have persuaded county governments to employ Jeanes teachers to the number of 430. They, in cooperation with Jeanes teachers, are largely responsible for the building of the 5,000 Rosenwald schools.

As you approach the problem of helping the educational forces in your state to take over these activities, you will find that you must confer first with the state superintendent and state agent to find out their plans or program for taking this work over. You should place at their disposal any personnel that you may have or any means you may develop of disseminating information furthering the program.

The General Education Board would have no suggestions to make on methods. The program you would want to work out would be a separate one for each state.

APPENDIX III

Advisory Committee (Texas Plan)

Heads of state organizations having a representative on the committee, presidents of educational institutions whose duties preclude active membership, heads of governmental divisions of the state, and other citizens whose cooperation is desired shall be invited to become members of an Advisory Committee to the State Committee.

APPENDIX IV

Speakers Bureau

A special committee appointed by the Executive Committee of the Interracial Committee might consider mechanics of setting up a Speakers Bureau. Suggestions are:

To submit a questionnaire to all members of the Interracial Committee—local and state.

To card index all organizations to which the members belong with the names of these members listed on each card.

To place responsibility upon Interracial Committee members for speaking or presenting speakers to conventions, conferences, or local meetings of the organizations to which they belong.

To provide for speakers material which deals with state or national conditions of interest both to the Interracial Committee and to the organization to be addressed.

Proposed material for the Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation which could be easily adapted to the program of any state.

1. History of Commission on Interracial Cooperation from its inception in 1919 following World War I, including the names of the Southern people, white and Negro, who launched the movement; the present membership; something of the source of income of the Interracial Commission; the philosophy of the movement and, in general, the method of procedure and the reasons for adopting these methods. (This may be obtained from the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, Atlanta, Ga.)

2. History of the State Committee—(along same lines as No. 1 and prepared by the Executive Committee of the State Committee).

3. Citizenship and the Public Schools, which should include the reason why the Interracial Committee is interested in schools; a discussion on taxes and who pays them; some figures on the discrimination in the public schools on the basis of race and geography—especially in teachers' salaries; the story of the work of the Division of Negro Education in the State Department of Education and of the work of the State Agent. (This material should be prepared in cooperation with the State Superintendent of Education and the State Agent.)

4. Public Health which should include a discussion of sickness and disease, particularly contagious diseases and so-called social diseases, and its effect upon the welfare of the entire population; the necessity of the inclusion of all Negroes in the program of Health for the benefit of the entire community; some figures on hospital facilities open to Negro doctors and patients; training facilities for Negro nurses; employment of Negro nurses in private hospitals where Negro patients are admitted; Negro nurses in certain specialized employment such as life insurance companies. (The Department of Public Health—State and Federal, State Nurses Association, and the Negro Medical Association are sources of information on this subject.)

5. Unemployment, Low Wages, and Their Effect on Community Life —(Professors of sociology and economics in colleges and universities can help in the preparation of this material.)

6. Negroes Who Have Achieved (native-born or long-time residents of state). This should include the life stories of Negro citizens who have attained recognition either in the state or the nation.

7. White Citizens Who Have Contributed to Interracial Progress and Good Will. (Native-born or long-time residents of state.)

(These topics furnish some suggestions for institute programs on which informed persons discuss the problems in detail.)

College Courses In Race Relations

AN EFFORT TO MEET THE CHALLENGE OF
THE SOUTHERN SITUATION

CONFERENCE ON EDUCATION AND RACE RELATIONS
710 Standard Building
ATLANTA, GA.

EDUCATION FOR SOUTHERN CITIZENSHIP

Among the major objectives of education Dr. Franklin H. Giddings lists the acquiring of "knowledge and appreciation of neighbors of all races, languages, nations, and creeds." Bagley says: "The ultimate aim of education is the development of socially efficient men and women." Another has expressed it this way: "The most important aim of education is the preparation of people to get along together harmoniously, helpfully, and therefore happily." It would be hard to find fault with these statements, since whatever else education may do for one will be of very little practical value unless it fits him also to become a useful and happy member of society. If it fails at that point, it fails fatally.

If these be accepted as sound educational ideals, it is obvious that here in the South no effective system of education can neglect problems so acute, so pressing, and so inescapable as those involved in the racial situation. To do so, indeed, would be criminal negligence of the welfare of both races, so closely are their interests intertwined.

The college course in race relations is an effort to meet this challenge.

COLLEGE COURSES IN RACE RELATIONS

A recent check revealed the fact that seventy-four Southern colleges and universities are offering seventy-seven named courses dealing with the interracial situation in America*. These courses carried a variety of titles, the favorite being "Race Problems." This title, with slight variations, accounts for thirty-three courses. Twenty-four courses are called "Race Relations," "Race Relationships," and "Interracial Relations."

Seven are entitled "The American Negro," "The Negro in American History," or simply "The Negro." Other titles found standing alone are "Minority Groups in the United States," "American Minority Problems," "Population and Racial Adjustment," "Racial and Rural-Urban Sociology," "Races and Nationalities," "Race and Population," "Racial Backgrounds of the American Nation," and "Race and Culture Contacts." A teachers' college makes a definitely professional approach to the subject, with a course entitled "Problems of Dual Education in the South."

A questionnaire recently returned by the teachers of forty of these courses in thirteen States and the District of Columbia brought the information summarized below. It is offered without comment.

LENGTH OF COURSE:

All ran either a quarter or a semester, three hours a week.

HOW FREQUENTLY GIVEN:

Every quarter, 1.
Twice a year, 8 (including summer school in five cases).
Once a year, 19.
Every other year, 10.

*In fifty-three other colleges, courses in social problems are catalogued as giving specific attention to this subject. In addition, correspondence revealed that in 260 institutions some attention is given to the subject in the departments of history, literature and education.

PREREQUISITES:

Junior or senior standing, 12.
Sophomore standing, 1.
"Some Sociology," 22.
American history, 1.
No requirement, 4.

ENROLLMENT:

Varied between wide extremes, the lowest being 10 and the highest 90. Five courses had enrollment of 20 each; five had 30 each; two had 35; two enrolled 40; three enrolled 50, 55 and 90 respectively. The average enrollment was a fraction over 25.

PERCENTAGE OF STUDENT BODY ENROLLED:

In many cases low, as one would expect; in one very large institution only one-tenth of one per cent. On the other hand, several schools reported six, eight and ten per cent of the entire student body enrolled in these courses. One reported twenty-five per cent. In another case, the enrollment included thirty-three per cent of all the seniors.

TEXTBOOKS USED:

No single text; syllabi and wide reading, 16.
Weatherford and Johnson, "Race Relations," 7.
Reuter, "American Race Problem," 3.
Young, "Minority Peoples," 3.
Dowd, "The American Negro," 3.
Johnson, "The Negro in American Civilization," 2.

PARALLEL READINGS:

All the above and many more—Boas, Bogardus, Bond, Brawley, Brown, Dollard, DuBois, Embree, Fairchild, Garth, Gillette, Hankins, Kleinberg, Lasker, Miller, Moton, Muntz, Odum, Oldham, Raper, Shrieke, Thompson, Washington, Woodson, Woofter, and so on at great length.

MAJOR OBJECTIVES OF THE COURSE:

"Better understanding of minorities."
"To promote objective thinking."
"To create right attitudes."
"To impart knowledge and appreciation of other races."
"To interest students in the problems of race."
"To study need and methods of adjustment."
"To establish a basis for intelligent opinion."

METHODS OF TEACHING EMPLOYED:

Lectures, 32.
Discussions, 37.
Reports, 31.
Investigation of local conditions, 26.
Projects, 11.
Question and answer, 16.

WHAT PROVISIONS, IF ANY, FOR INTERRACIAL CONTACTS?

Few or none, 11.
Visit Negro schools, 18.
Invite Negro speakers, 11.
Interracial student meetings, 7.
Visit Negro business centers, 3.
Have Negro singers on the campus, 3.

One professor writes: "In our case, a visit to a Negro college did most to mitigate prejudice." Another says: "The opportunity to observe educated Negroes is of the greatest value."

MISCONCEPTIONS AND PREJUDICES COMMONLY ENCOUNTERED:

"All the common stereotypes," say several.
"All you can imagine," says another.

The most frequently reported were:

Inherent inferiority of the Negro, 23.
Negroes inherently criminal, 6.
Predisposed to disease, 4.
Inefficient, 4.
Meant to be servants, 4.
Must be kept in their place, 4.
Fear of intermarriage, 4.

Other difficulties encountered were: Ignorance of the facts; indifference; knowledge of lowest types only; unwarranted generalizations; fear of "social equality"; belief in occasional necessity for lynching.

TO WHAT EXTENT DOES THIS COURSE APPEAR TO MODIFY STUDENTS' ATTITUDES?

"A great deal," say 14 professors.
"Considerably," say 13.
Four reply "Somewhat."
Three say "Very little."
One says "Not at all."
One is unable to judge.

Among the favorable comments on this question are the following:

"Students assure me that their attitudes changed greatly. They favor programs and policies required to do justice to Negroes."

"The beginning of a continuing process."

"Sympathies broadened and point of view transformed."

"That some students are profoundly affected is shown by their subsequent records of service to Negroes."

"The course leads students to look for scientific evidence before forming opinions and attitudes."

"Prejudices largely disappear when replaced by facts."

"Student attitudes modified to a very great extent."
"Attitudes changed in a marked degree."

One who credits the course proper with doing very little to modify attitudes, nevertheless testifies that "the acquaintances we make with Negro institutions and educational leaders do make a profound impression on the students." There may have been a similar element of modesty in the other two lukewarm reports.

One teacher, however, frankly confesses defeat: "I'll have to admit that student attitudes against the Negro are stronger than my ability to change them." In consequence, he is giving up the course.

ESTIMATED VALUE OF THIS COURSE IN COMPARISON WITH OTHERS:

"Most important and valuable course we give," 10.
"One of the most valuable," 24.
"Second best," 1.
"Too unlike for comparison," 2.
"Uncertain as to value," 2.

Following are typical comments:

"Subject matter is more vital."
"More potential than theoretical courses."
"Has more practical and human values."
"Closer than most to the thought and feeling of students."
"None more important from the standpoint of urgency."
"No other serves the same purpose."
"Deals with live and pressing problems."
"Especially important for teachers and social workers."

HOW DO YOU LIKE TO TEACH THIS COURSE?

"Best of all," 12.
"Very much," 16.
"As well as others," 10.
"Not so well," 1.

Typical comments:

"Arouses much interest on the part of students, hence is interesting to teach."

"Easier to teach because of live student interest."

"No course more challenging, stimulating and enjoyable."

"Gives satisfying consciousness of immediate results."

"As a Southerner, I am particularly interested in this course because of a sense of responsibility for interracial justice."

"My choice course, because I see in it an opportunity to render a greater service to my students, my state and the South than in any other."

VOLUNTEERED OBSERVATIONS:

"Much of the best teaching in race relations comes from the inclusion of the subject in other courses. In every course in sociology here this subject is definitely considered."

"Much racial data is included in other sociology courses."

"There is need for more opportunities for students to meet educated Negroes."

"Our student interracial committee is more significant than the course."

"Most of our students become teachers and such a course is very important for them."

How Shall We Organize

The purpose of a State Committee on Interracial Cooperation is to educate the public to an awareness of conditions which result in injustice to many citizens, with special emphasis on education, health, economic opportunity, law enforcement, and social security; to insure the elimination of discriminations in the operation of government directed against racial minorities; to promote local interracial committees in order to build in every community a united people without regard to race, creed, or color.

Commission on Interracial Cooperation, Inc.

710 Standard Building

ATLANTA, GEORGIA

April, 1940

Revised January, 1942

Local Interracial Committees

I. PURPOSE—

The purpose of all interracial committees is, first, to create attitudes of justice and equity and fair play for all people without regard to race or religion; second, to interpret for the public the conditions in a community which defeat justice and equity for any one group. For both purposes some project of work should be undertaken by a local committee which can be used as the reason for presenting the major purpose of the interracial committee—to create right attitudes.

It is advisable, therefore, to have some definite project to discuss when a committee is to be organized. Otherwise, aimless talks and undirected discussion will inevitably dissipate the earnestness with which the people come together.

II. WHO SHALL TAKE THE LEAD IN SETTING UP A COMMITTEE?

Members of the State Committee living in a county should assume the responsibility for convening the first meeting. However, any citizen interested in good citizenship can act on his own initiative in calling a meeting of other like-minded persons at which time a free discussion of the service which the local interracial committee can give should follow and a formal organization be set up.

III. WHO SHALL COMPOSE A COMMITTEE?

Anyone who is interested in justice to all people in the administration of public and tax-supported activities which affect the whole community and in equity for all before the law. County officials, business leaders, ministers of the churches, professional men and women, church and club women, teachers and agricultural leaders—all who have contact with many groups and individuals and who recognize that problems of health, education, wages, crime and delinquency are human problems—should be enlisted in the program of the committee.

IV. FEE

In order to have an identifiable membership there should be a small membership fee large enough to include subscription (25c) to THE SOUTHERN FRONTIER. State members become members of local committees without paying this local membership fee.

V. NUMBER OF MEMBERS:

A minimum of ten members, one-half of whom should be white, is recommended.

VI. COMMITTEES:

A Committee on National Unity is imperative. Such a committee capable of impressing upon local public opinion the relation of local unity to National unity is of utmost importance now and in the future. All other committees, those on schools, recreation, health, defense work, should be guided in their activities by recommendations of the local Committee on National Unity.

VII. MEETINGS:

This may be left to the judgment of the membership. In cities, however, local committees frequently become too large for constructive planning. As a whole, when this situation develops, it may be taken care of by creating an executive committee with power to act as a planning committee. Meetings of the whole committee, however, should be called at least quarterly.

VIII. NATIONAL DEFENSE AND INTERRACIAL COOPERATION:

National Defense presupposes a united people. People are individual persons living in definite communities. If conditions in a community are such as to bear hardest on a segment of the population and no serious attempt is made to relieve these conditions by those who have the power to do so, then that community endangers National Defense. If, in addition, this segment of the population is discriminated against because of race or creed the community that fails to remove discrimination weakens Democracy and Christianity. Local interracial committees should assume the responsibility of informing the local public of discriminations in their counties against a minority racial group by the local and state governments, develop plans to wipe out such discriminations, and work to make the plans effective.

IX. EDUCATION OF ATTITUDES:

Opportunities should be sought to present speakers before women's clubs, service luncheon clubs, chambers of commerce, business men's leagues, missionary societies, young people's organizations, and at educational assemblies. In this way the information concerning county conditions will reach audiences which far exceed the membership of the county committee.

The Interracial Commission Comes of Age

A week before the Armistice, November 11, 1918, a traveler in the South would have been struck by the apparent solidarity of the population, white and Negro. In support of the war they were united as never before. Two hundred thousand Negro men were fighting in France and many more were preparing to go over. The millions of Negroes at home were responding heartily to every wartime appeal and, in proportion to their means, quite as generously as any other group.

A week after the Armistice one might have observed a subtle but ominous change. Distrust was awakening. What would be the attitude of the Negro troops when they returned from France? Rumors filled the air, and by the time the soldiers began to return suspicion and fear had taken deep hold upon both races. Mob violence, which had greatly declined during the war, burst out afresh. In city after city race riots flamed up, with casualties on both sides. The tension tightened everywhere, and with dread suspense the Nation awaited the outcome.

Oppressed by the dangers inherent in the situation, a small group of Southern men met day after day in Atlanta seeking some means to avert racial conflict. At the center of this group were John J. Eagan, manufacturer and churchman, Will W. Alexander, who as a representative of the Y. M. C. A. War Work Council was in close touch with the returning Negro troops, and Dr. M. Ashby Jones, pastor of a leading Atlanta church—representatives of the three strongest Southern denominations, Presbyterian, Methodist, and Baptist.

Out of the thought and prayer of these men and others like them, the Commission on Interracial Cooperation was born early in 1919. There was no thought that the movement was other than temporary. However, after the immediate crisis following the Armistice had been met, it was apparent that conditions affecting the relation of the races in the South were not caused by the War—war had merely served to bring the situation to the surface. The founders of the Commission saw that future crises were inevitable. Thereupon, it was decided to increase and intensify the original program of education of the population, both white and Negro, making the Commission a permanent peace-time movement.

With this in mind, a change in method of approach was developed. Representatives of south-wide and state organizations were elected to membership on the general Commission and on state and local committees. As members of the Commission, these representatives learned of existing conditions; as leaders of civic and religious organizations they presented to their constituencies the racial situations of which they had been made aware; as citizens they and their constituencies have appeared before boards of education, health departments, city councils and legislatures with requests for more equitable consideration for Negroes. Sunday schools, churches, medical associations, women's clubs, teachers' associations, colleges, and high schools have become participants in the education of the South in interracial cooperation.

Now after twenty-one years, at almost every conference and convention of young people, organized civic and church groups, and professional men and women some speaker presents a program of work for better race relations. Inspired by knowledge, citizens unaware of the influence of the Interracial Commission work for more adequate educational opportunities for Negro children, for the extension of health and hospital facilities to Negro citizens and Negro doctors, for the inclusion of Negro areas in city improvement, and for the establishment and maintenance of recreational centers for Negroes. Though the Commission itself accomplishes none of these improvements, from it has come the motive power which is prerequisite to action. Because inequalities, injustices, and persecutions on the basis of race still afflict the South, the work of the Commission continues.

The methods adopted by the Commission in developing its program have caused confusion in the minds of those people who have always worked in organizations with by-laws, constitutions, and instructions handed down by the parent organization. But the members of this parent organization, being Southern, knew from their own experience that racial attitudes were individual attitudes; that conditions varied in each community of every State according to local prejudices. Until men and women investigated their own civic problems and were moved to act to eliminate them, no hope of progress could be entertained. As a result, always the Commission has refused to bind either itself or the state committees with rigid rules and regulations. It still refuses to dictate a program to any state or community. It does, however, assist in setting up state and local committees and, if they request help, will cooperate in the development of a program upon which the community agrees.

The Commission has had six presidents. Mr. John J. Eagan, of Atlanta, a founder and the first president, held that office until his death in 1924. Mr. Eagan was succeeded in turn by Dr. M. Ashby Jones of Atlanta; Dr. W. C. Jackson, President of North Carolina College for Women, Greensboro; Dr. John Hope, President of Atlanta University; Dr. E. McNeill Poteat, Jr., of Raleigh, North Carolina; and Dr. Howard W. Odum of Chapel Hill, North Carolina, who has served as president since 1937.

While the Commission is primarily concerned with discriminations affecting Negro life, every effort is made to see race problems as bi-racial. Those conditions which are patently the result of racial discrimination, which injure the South economically and culturally, and which defy or nullify the principles of democracy and Christianity are the major points of attack. Education of the people to recognize these self-imposed limitations and to work to remove them is the major purpose of the Commission.

THE BACK LINES OF NATIONAL DEFENSE

"Total defense is not merely a matter of armies and navies. There are back lines as well as front lines and agriculture, public health, and civil liberties constitute these back lines."

EXPLANATORY NOTE

Delegates from the Interracial Committees of Texas, Mississippi, Georgia, and South Carolina met at Atlanta University, February 1940, for a conference on the problems of state committees under volunteer leadership. Methods for organizing local and state committees were adopted as well as a one point program of work. This point was the support by state appropriation of the Division of Negro Education at present financed by the General Education Board. The state representatives were told by a representative of the Board that the Board will withdraw all such support within the next five years.

The second Work Conference on Interracial Cooperation was held at Tuskegee Institute, February 1941, with delegates from the four state committees represented the year before, and also from Kentucky and Alabama. The program was arranged by Dr. Ira de A. Reid of Atlanta University. What the delegates heard and what they thought should be done about it are presented in this pamphlet—"The Back Lines of National Defense." The resolutions following each session are an expression of the individual attitude of the delegates, and not necessarily the attitude either of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation or of the separate state committees.

THE SOUTH AND ITS AGRICULTURAL BACKGROUND

H. C. Nixon

The problem of the South in the light of its agricultural background is the problem of individuals and communities adjusting themselves to new ways of making a living and new ways of living in a rapidly changing economy. I refer to the cotton economy.

Three Revolutions in the South

We have been troubled in the South with three revolutions during the last twenty years. The first of these revolutions was caused by the development of synthetic substitutes for cotton displacing about four and three-fourths billion bales. The domestic use of substitutes is voluntary but the governments of Germany and Italy, and also the government of Japan, make the consumption of substitutes for cotton mandatory. That chemists in Germany are developing substitutes for cotton has something to do with cotton in Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and other Southern States.

The second revolution grew out of the whole world market situation. Our cotton economy is based on the assumption that the United States is an economic colony furnishing raw material to the rest of the world. The rest of the world, now, produces most of its own raw material at less cost. This revolution is intensified by the present war.

The third revolution is within the cotton country itself—the mechanization of cotton farming. There are areas in West Texas where one farm family which formerly cultivated one hundred and fifty acres, now, with tractors, cultivates four hundred and fifty acres. Some communities are 100% mechanized in their cotton farming. This applies almost equally in Oklahoma and Mississippi. Mississippi, with level land, is being mechanized more rapidly than others of the old cotton states. Thus, the cotton South is confronted with a serious human problem in the increasing displacement of farmers and farm labor.

Migration No Longer Possible

"I came from a little community in Alabama called Possum Trot. People used to go from Possum Trot to Texas. I can recall six families in Texas of which both the man and woman came from Possum Trot. I can also recall farmers who started married life in Possum Trot and went to Oklahoma to farm. But people can't go out there any more and try to farm; those folks already out there and in Texas are taking up all the land. Thus the mechanical revolution is making it impossible for people to leave little Alabama communities to go there and farm."

Mechanization Poses Human Problems

This mechanical revolution has one parallel with slavery. Slavery spread over the cotton country on the best lands, the level lands. The hillbillies became hillbillies because they were pushed into the hills by slavery. What does mechanized farming do? It repeats the same story of moving onto the best and most fertile lands. Farming folk face a three-fold barrier: loss of cotton market, closing out of migration, and increasing mechanization—problems which their traditions, background, experience, training, and education all combined do not fit them to solve.

Growth of Cotton Psychology

We have had a cotton consciousness, almost a cotton conduct, which has forced people to grow cotton. That is true not only of sharecroppers but of landowners. We have individuals and communities that have grown cotton for so long that they know nothing else. Some would like to change but do not quite know how, nor do they have the facilities for change.

The unfortunate thing is that this situation, general over the South, has created an attitude of acceptance of the belief that Southern farm folk are incompetent. "These sharecroppers can do nothing but raise cotton and we might as well accept it," is said by people in all walks of life, white and colored. This is a problem which involves not only individual and community adjustments to changed situations, but also the acquirement of the education, the experience, the background, and the traditions necessary to effective adjustment. In addition to these societal changes the farmer who abandons cotton farming for subsistence farming will need help to acquire scientific education and to learn economic planning; he will need investment facilities to process his products and to market them.

Some years ago a school teacher of wide experience told of a little fellow in grammar school who flunked out so that he could not be advanced to high school. His mother came with tears in her eyes greatly concerned because little Johnnie was not promoted. The teacher happened to recollect that the boy's mouth seemed to be more open than his mind. She took him to have an examination. He was put through the usual medical examination. It was found that the boy had hookworm, tonsil trouble, adenoids and Bright's disease. They got rid of the first three and the Bright's disease disappeared automatically. This little boy went through high school, graduated from college and is now a worthy citizen of South Carolina.

Many of the assumptions in the South that sharecroppers lack ability are due to certain environmental conditions and physical factors. All of the South's population must be taught to believe that sharecroppers and casual laborers can be educated and retrained if they have the chance.

I see in this the spirit of democracy. We cannot have any democracy unless we have economic democracy, and I do not see how we are to have economic democracy without political democracy. Democracy has to live all over, or die all over. Live—without respect to race, creed, class or religion—or die completely.

DISCUSSION

QUES.: Where does this lead us? What are some of the implications of what has been said? How does this background affect the conditions or describe the conditions which exist at the present time? How may we alter this background in order to promote the type of democracy spoken of?

If people can't migrate and don't die, then what is to become of them?

ANS.: Some farmers are eking out a mighty poor existence on mighty poor land; other farmers are pushed off the land entirely; many are moving on to lands that should have been left alone, lands on which they can't make a living. A. & M. College in Arkansas has made tests of the soil of lands on which some of these people are living. These show that animals which are fed nothing except products of such soils are deficient in bone tissue, have big ears, mal-shaped bodies and other defects. It is assumed that people whose subsistence comes entirely from kindred soils will also have mal-shaped bodies and inadequate bone material.

This brings us face to face with the problem of public land as a public utility.

QUES.: Isn't there enough land in the South for every rural family if it were properly distributed and cultivated?

ANS.: If it were properly distributed and cultivated. There is such a thing as expanding our own production and consumption. The South can produce more food for eating, more chickens—we have a reputation for chicken. The State of Iowa has more chickens than Alabama, Mississippi, and South Carolina.

QUES.: You cannot do that as long as land is owned in large blocks and farmed by tenants, can you?

ANS.: Right. That is where you have to bring in public policy.

QUES.: Is the Resettlement Administration working in the right direction?

ANS.: Yes, I think so, but they cannot do it by themselves. I think the States have got to cooperate.

QUES.: I know of a State in which there are 4,000 farmers and surveys indicate that the soil is sufficient to support only 2,700.

ANS.: That is true. There are many areas with two and three times as many people in them as there is a living for. We do have too many people in the South for the prevailing economy but I do not think we have too many people to make a living if we can expand our economy. Many say we do not have the intensive farming that we might have. Though there are successful experiments in some communities, it is true that in some regions a living could be made on smaller acreage.

Comment: Even if you had intensive farming, you couldn't support 4,000 farmers on the land in this section that I referred to.

ANS.: Again, I say, we need public policy to keep people off of bad land. Wisconsin has a system of zoning, not forcing people off land, but zoning certain areas and saying "You can't go on this to farm." We have to get the Southern State governments which have taken over thirty-five million acres of land for taxation, to set up a system of conservation and zoning and to say "this is for agriculture and this is not for agriculture." State-owned lands might have to be apportioned, good lands leased on long term for agriculture.

A number of interesting books have been written in recent years about this question of land, but none dramatizes the situation as does the little book by Gerald Johnson, "Wasted Land," summarizing Odum's "Southern Regions." There is also "The American Earth" by Carlton Beale and "The Plantation South" which points out that in 1930-34 500,000 youth left the South, and still, because of recent conditions 200,000 more were backed up on farms and couldn't get out. In 1920 people moved out faster than they did later. Odum shows that 3,800,000 Southerners went North; 400,000 Northerners came South—more than nine Southerners lost to the South to one Northerner gained.

Now for the question—What are we going to do? To start with we should work for state programs with state-owned lands. A certain amount of state zoning and state planning would at least keep poor people off of poor lands.

Much state land is marginal, yet could be improved and terraced. Much of it with little improvement could be put in shape so that somebody could make a living on it. All this involves a question of an alert public opinion. People must be made conscious and concerned. At an agricultural meeting recently a reporter remarked that it was difficult to put anything in the paper because city people just were not interested. Before we can do anything concrete, we have to develop the sentiment for it.

Then we must get this program to people out on the land. It is not enough to have it kept at agricultural colleges. I have attended Farm Weeks without seeing any farmers at all in attendance. I have not seen a County Agent at Possum Trot. It is a matter of getting this applied education to the farmers, the hillbillies and the sharecroppers.

We need more people, lay people, who can talk about this to groups, who are able to build up the background of the whole picture; we need more material, easy to read and digest and to impart to others.

As a result of the presentation and discussion on the subject of The South and Its Agricultural Background, the Committee reported as the conclusions of the conference the following report (condensed):

> Land is the common heritage of all. Privacy of ownership should not permit its abuse. An inalienable right of every farmer should be access to the quantity and quality of land necessary to make a living. Waste of land and waste of people are parallel phenomena.
>
> Essential to an effective program of state and federal action that will lead to wise land use is the development of widespread understanding of the importance of land as it relates to the total economic and social life of the region.
>
> We recommend widespread discussions of the agricultural background of southern economy among all youth and adult groups concerned with the general welfare as a means of preparing people for:
>
> > An appreciation of the significant experiment now being carried out by the federal government as regards land use and resettlement.
> >
> > The promotion of further public action to remedy the evils of agriculture not possible of correction by private means.

EDUCATION IN THE SOUTH AND NATIONAL DEFENSE

HORACE M. BOND

In any discussion of National Defense involving Negroes, I can but preface it by calling attention to the quiet, resourceful, skilful effort, now culminated by success, by which President Patterson here at Tuskegee has set us an example through obtaining the unit of the Air Force for Negroes now established. In this, the most conservative of all branches, the unpublicized, non-sensational success of this effort should be greeted by us all as an example with high merit.

In discussing the double-barreled subject before us, I am reminded of the famous story of the American in Italy, who, through his boasting, had offended his Italian guide to the point of rejoinder. Did the American have any cathedral like St. Peter's? No. Did he have any ruins like the Colosseum? No. Did he have any volcano like Vesuvius? No! But he had Niagara Falls to put the thing out!

One might feel something like that about Education and National Defense in the South. We are having a great deal of National Defense, but we also have lots of lack of education to put the thing out.

To return to the serious vein becoming to this gathering—it is appropriate that we address ourselves to the pattern of Education in the South. Historically, it is an enterprise exhibiting a social lag, due to the economic structure of the region, behind other sections of the country. It is a commonplace to repeat that the original structure of the South, with its many complications of race always aggravating class structure among white persons, yielded but bitterly to the idea of universal education for all white persons. The South was a clear sixty years behind New England in its common school revival—Governor Aycock of North Carolina, two generations after Horace Mann in Massachusetts.

If this was true so far as white persons were concerned, it has been even the more true so far as the application of the theory of tax-supported education for Negro children. Joined with the lag in political liberalism has been that of poverty, in which our section shares a not distinguished place. The consequent inequalities in the provision of public education for Negroes on all levels are so notorious as to be known to us all, in the public elementary, secondary, and collegiate institutions.

Black Belt County Makes Progress

Paralleling these inequalities for Negro children are those to be found for white children, especially those resident in the rural "white" counties. Certain statistics purport to show that the general level of education for all white children in the South is far below that found in the North and in the West. This is an error which hides the facts regarding the vast inequalities between children in the South. In the black belt sections of each Southern State white children are now, and have been for two generations, educated at a public expense far above that in the most prosperous rural areas of the North and the West, and exceeded by but few Northern urban centers. The children in the South who suffer are the Negro children, wherever they are found, and, despite recent schemes for equalization, the white children of the hill counties of the South.

There is to be entered in the record a partial correction of these data; a correction which was brought to my attention recently by the distinguished director of research in the State Department of Education in this State of Alabama. Taking some figures of mine which traced expenditures for public schools in Wilcox County from 1870 to 1930, this gentleman brought the figures up to date; and showed an astonishing record of advance for the financing of Negro schools in that county since 1930. I could but conclude, after seeing those figures—and in defense of my belief that Education constantly mirrors social and economic change—that something tremendous is happening in Wilcox County; that the figures since 1870, which he exhibited, showed, like some sort of social thermometer, the steady development of a tremendous social and economic revolution affecting whites, but principally the blacks, in the Black Belt County of Wilcox, Alabama.

The point of these differentials in education lies in the fact that in considering the needs of education in the South we are still considering the most fundamental and basic of educational needs for a population. We have no elaborate pattern, such as is to be found in a Northern community; we have no history of a long tradition of a literate population. We have an illiterate population to make literate, and we have, as in the past, inadequate instruments with which to effect these changes.

German State Not Built on Illiteracy

Let me turn now to an invidious and a very odious comparison. We like to decry German and Prussian education. We say that it has failed because the people have been left ready victims of propaganda and race hysteria. We say again, as we said twenty-five years ago, that the Germans are brutes, Huns, vandals, Mongols—inhuman. (In passing it would, perhaps, be enough condemnation to say that the Germans are human beings—but let that pass.)

We say also that their schools have failed humanity. Perhaps they have; but we must admit that they have not failed the purposes of the German State. If there is brutality and racial madness abroad in the land, there is also the skill and determination to weld together what is one instance where, in spite of France, we can agree with the military experts—"The most impressive military machine in human history." That machine, by contrast, was welded in a relatively short space of time by a nation that had been going to school for two hundred years; a literate nation, if not a God-fearing one. The foundation of German might was not laid upon the shoulders or the hearts or the brains of people who were twenty-five per cent illiterate, whose parents were fifty per cent illiterate, and whose grandparents were almost one hundred per cent illiterate. Nor was this mighty machine forged from four or five months school terms, or from teachers who had never graduated even from what would have been, in any European country, if not in America, a mockery of high school. It was not even based on the terrifyingly poor schools in which twenty million white Southern Amercians have been educated.

One might even go further and say that the Germans are susceptible to propaganda is no criticism of the process of education; the uneducated millions we have in the South are not less, but the more susceptible. It is true that they cannot read, as do the Germans—but they can listen, and they will.

Status of the Negro in National Defense

We see education in the South, then, as an under-financed enterprise, faced with the most terrific problem in history, complicated by race, by class, at every step. This is the foundation upon which our program for National Defense is to rest, at least in this section. I will not ask—defense of what? I wish merely to call to your attention the fact that we enter a competition in armament and in world power politics with considerable more than one-tenth of a nation able to offer little more than ready volunteers and man power to a task requiring the ultimate in technical skill and literary preparedness.

The status of the Negro in National Defense becomes apparent with these considerations in mind. I do not think we who are Negroes will need to argue over-much about inclusion in the National efforts when the necessity or the time for National Defense has really come to us. When the country is in need, it will need us; and it will call for us; for, although machines have made many of us superfluous, I cannot but recall the historic breaking of barriers that has always been precipitated by a true National crisis.

What we face in our educational institutions, in the efforts we are making to obtain projects of various sorts, is the same frenzied effort all of us in the South have made to obtain WPA or PWA or other types of Federal aid grants. We have not asked ourselves, as has President Hutchins, of the University of Chicago, whether the business of the school should be military preparation. We have only seen a thousand dollars here, or ten thousand, that is much needed in order to piece out the sorry materials with which we have to work. For generations we have gotten a crumb from the table there of the Slater Fund, or the Jeanes Fund, or the Rosenwald Fund, or the General Education Board, or the WPA, or the PWA, or NYA to supplement the meager fare provided by public funds; and we see—or at least, many of us see—another crumb or so that may be obtained by devotion to the God of Battles. But no doubt this is another question.

New Agencies Treat Negroes Fairly

One question in which we are interested is the fact that we are not getting the crumbs that we wish to get. We do not get them for the reason, I think, that the armed forces, and the logic which accompanies them, is the most conservative and deeply entrenched to be found in any country. Negroes have been singularly well treated by such new agencies as the NYA, whose directors were susceptible to reason, and who did not have a tradition of discrimination to follow in the South—where the economy of scarcity, at least where funds are concerned, is deeply rooted in the minds and consciences of old time educational administrators. The distribution of funds aimed at the integration of educational agencies into the National Defense program has, to the extent that these funds are to be distributed through old-line educational agencies, a particularly unfortunate consequence for Negro schools. Too often the administrators of the departments through which these funds are to flow have been reared in a tradition that they must make their white agencies superior to any in the country, and use federal funds which might have gone to Negroes to supplement local or state funds which were non-existent. After these gentlemen have made their agencies the equal or superior of those in Illinois, or Iowa, or Michigan, then they will turn to the Negro schools.

Of course, as in the old system whereby educational expenditures within black belt counties were left to local officials, the time never came. There was always a new need apparent for the white schools; a new salary to be paid, a new person to be appointed.

It is that psychology, I repeat, with which we have to deal in the present efforts to obtain federal funds, being spent for National Defense, for Negro educational institutions. We may expect a crumb here, and a crumb there; (no Maxim silencer was ever as effective as a thousand dollars worth of patronage to a Negro sub-official while the big shots got away with a thousand million); but the old blood of the old federal educational agencies is going to distribute the new monies in much the same way they have distributed the old—that is, as long as National Defense is "pork barrel."

What Most of Us Have Forgotten

One might descant in this vein forever; I repeat, it is the patient, courageous, and wily soul who manages to sneak up on the off side of these bureaucrats, and extract a trifle more than a crumb. But I would prefer to conclude this paper by reminding you again of what most of us have forgotten.

It is that an agency of public education—and of private education, as well—has no other reason for existence than as a pillar of the defense of the Nation. This agency exists to conserve and to transmit the culture. It does not exist to manufacture tanks or airplanes or to train people whose chief aim in life is the manufacture of tanks and airplanes.

I take it that an educational institution best serves the cause of the Nation when it aids in the creation of a population intelligently aware of its national objectives, and proficient in the common skills that make the achievement of those objectives possible. I take it as a corollary that the Nation best serves its purposes that maintains and provides for its youth the instruments through which its culture can both be conserved and transmitted.

You know, and I know, that the South has never done as much; that America has never done as much. There will come another day of crisis, when the fingers of the mechanics we are now making with such zeal will be gnarled with age and stiffened by use. There will come another day, twenty—twenty-five years hence, when the airplanes they are to fashion and the ships they are to weld will be as prehistoric as the cross-bow or the javelin, as implements of war.

What of the Future?

When that time comes, and there is a new rally to the cause of National Defense, there will be frenzy again; there will be emergencies again; there will be alarms again; and from the fields and villages of Macon and Wilcox and Peach Counties, and the slums of Montgomery and Birmingham and Atlanta and New Orleans, there will come trooping those recruits to the new army of national preparedness yet unborn today.

Will the Nation, having exhausted itself in the National Defense of this generation, have had, in the interim, the wit to gird itself for the new crisis, by girding the hearts and brains and loins of this new generation? Will the high schools and the colleges and the little country schools have been made powerful and sufficient unto the day of that new era? It will come; surely it will come; I call all of you to witness that it will come.

If come it must; and come it will! let us then remember that the cost of three battleships that will be useless in 1965 would equalize the cost of educating white and black children in the South; that the price of the new munitions plant at Lister, Alabama, would equalize the salaries of white and Negro teachers in this State for the next twenty-five years; that the no-longer staggering, commonplace millions and billions now being thrown into the maw of National Defense, could be divided fractionally to provide a healthier, sounder, sturdier National Defense for us and for our generation and for future generations than any secret weapon in the hands of any nation in the world today or tomorrow.

Of course we won't do it; we never have, and we never will. Like the Germans, we are neither brutes nor Huns nor vandals; we are only human beings whose pastime is the brutalization of our fellowman and whose passion is an occasional frenzy in the defense of we know not what. "Vanity of vanities," said the preacher to the members of this Conference, "all is vanity." But because the preacher was wise, he still taught the people knowledge.

DISCUSSION

Is there any possibility, or prospect, of a bill for Federal Aid to Public Education, similar to the Fletcher-Harrison Bill, being introduced in this session of Congress?

I would like to tell the group of the talk made by Superintendent Glenn of the Birmingham, Alabama, schools to the Interracial Committee. He said that at a conference of Superintendents at Montgomery the State Superintendent told them that as a result of the Supreme Court decision in Norfolk, Virginia, ruling that salaries of white and Negro teachers must be the same, Alabama had to face this problem very definitely and "yet funds to do so are out of existence." As he saw it, the only way in which equalization could take place at the present time would be to reduce white salaries in order to raise salaries of Negro teachers. He felt the time was ripe, because of the Supreme Court decision and other factors, to get the Fletcher-Harrison Bill re-introduced. He wanted the Interracial Commission to consider it and take whatever steps were necessary.

QUES.: Would that be the only way to get the matter of salaries adjusted?

ANS.: I suppose there would be other ways—court cases, for example—yet, I think it is correct to say that it can never be remedied by states. In the last analysis tax reserves available are not enough to do the job. The cost must be met on a national basis in order to equalize education. Federal equalization of education is the only thing going to remove differentials in education, so far as teachers' salaries are concerned, between North and South, white and black, city and county.

QUES.: Wouldn't you say, also, that whether or not the Fletcher-Harrison Bill is passed, we have to be sure there is an attitude of willingness on the part of the white South to see that the Negro child does get this opportunity?

ANS.: The most disappointing aspect with reference to the present federal funds for education is that in the distribution of the federal funds for vocational aid—and they are tremendous—granted through the Smith-Hughes, the Smith-Lever laws, Negroes are getting about 3% when the population of Negroes is about 25%. On the other hand, the new agencies handling federal funds for education offer hope for greater equity. The older agencies are inclined to take the money for white schools.

QUES.: Is there any way of writing into that bill, in the event it should come up, a provision which would safeguard the money so that all of it would not go to the white schools in the South?

ANS.: People differ on that. The last draft of the bill provided that in any years in which the state receives new federal aid no state should spend less out of state money than had been previously spent on Negro schools; and that all this new federal aid would be allocated on the population percentage basis. I heard a speaker during the past week say that he felt that if the federal government comes to the place that it would no longer allocate money for education, then would begin the ruin of our democratic system. So far, appropriations have been made outright for National Defense and appropriations, about 70 millions, have also been made for education under the heading of Defense—rural shops, technical education and so on.

Vocational Training for National Defense

In Texas 17% of funds are allocated to the Negro on the percentage of population. Negroes are being trained only for those occupations that offer them employment. Few Negroes are being trained in skilled and semi-skilled trades as there is little demand for them. In addition, the responsibility is placed upon Negroes to show that there are openings in a new field before training is given them. Negroes in Texas are being made more skilful and efficient in service to white people and, in certain occupations, to their own race. In one of the state's richest counties there is no vocational high school for Negroes. This is due, so reports go, to the influence of local labor unions.

QUES.: Is this attitude of organized labor typical of the South or is it confined to this locality?

ANS.: The experience of some persons has disclosed that in other places there are those who are willing to allow labor unions to influence school systems. In a city not far from here there was some sort of definite program of training started in the school system, but, because union labor objected to it, the school officials said, "We won't have it."

Comment: Isn't it a pattern taken over from the normal life of the community? We talk about Negroes out of work—Negroes on relief. I happen to know, in Louisville, Kentucky, that local labor unions have kept the board of education and high school from offering auto mechanics, for the simple reason that Negroes trained in this field would go out and compete with others in the city—this in spite of the fact that there are thousands of Negroes in the city who own and drive cars whom these Negro mechanics might serve.

This is the time when the Interracial Commission and State Committees throughout the South ought to work to open up all avenues of employment equally for Negroes and for whites. Instead of acquiescing in the procedure of training Negroes only for jobs now open to them, why not say, "Train them for jobs, even if the jobs at present are not open?" By the time they are trained, maybe the jobs will be open. Negroes should be trained according to their capacity and not according to the kinds of employment society permits them to hold.

QUES.: The extra money given to the NYA and other agencies for this training—does the expenditure of that money have to harmonize with the requirements of the Selective Service Act?

ANS.: In the Selective Service Act there is no statement at all about how money for Vocational Education shall be spent.

Federal Policy and Local Policy on Training for National Defense

A state director of Vocational Education said recently, "If you know of definite opportunities where Negroes may be absorbed as soon as they are trained, we will give them training."

Dr. Robert Weaver, assistant to Sidney Hillman, said in Atlanta that in this matter of vocational education under National Defense the policy had been written in that there must be no discrimination on account of race. Dr. Weaver followed this statement by saying that they had learned in Washington that a policy set down in black and white did not mean anything until people in the local community knew about it and wanted to follow it.

The demands of Defense industry are expected to be so great in the next two or three years that there will be a shortage of labor in trades and other labor calling for high skill. In spite of ruling or interpretation, this discussion shows that the policy still has to be worked out locally.

CONCLUSION

First—No matter what is done in Washington; no matter what appropriation for any specific type of education or training may be assured; no matter what it may amount to in dollars and cents; no matter what law is laid down in Washington or by the Supreme Court; in the final analysis the local administration of that law is determined by the local community interest, and local community attitude is going to determine a local situation. So, as you go back to Georgia, Mississippi, Louisiana, and the other states, remember that you are the law in the final analysis.

Second—There is great inequality in American life even in the basic opportunities of education, even in the basic opportunities for vocational training in a field or fields in which, ordinarily, we have felt there has been very little prejudice against Negroes. We have given to democracy a great deal of service we haven't believed in very much.

Third—The greatest defense of this country is in the character of its citizens, its people; not its white people or black people, but the people who make the country, the citizens of America. If we are actually interested in National Defense we will see to it that not 9% to 10% but 90% to 100% of people are trained for good, useful, fruitful lives, for service five, fifty, or a hundred years from now.

The Committee submits the following:

1. That State Interracial Committees should keep themselves informed on the whole program of education in the several communities.
2. That the program of education which will develop attitudes of people toward all Defense plans and services should be begun immediately.
3. That the Atlanta office be petitioned to distribute to State Committees on Interracial Cooperation the present policies and rulings and the future declarations of policy and rulings of the several agencies directly concerned with the development of education in the Defense program.
4. That a study of all proposed legislative action including the Harrison-Fletcher Bill be sent to the State Committees by the Interracial Commission.

WAGES, HOURS, AND THE RIGHTS OF LABOR

LESTER B. GRANGER

The South Is Important

We know that no section stands or falls on its own; it is the same with individuals and communities. Any section that is backward socially and economically affects the progress of all other sections of society, especially if such a section constitutes a large segment of territory and a considerable proportion of the total population of a nation. So it is that the status of the South is of national importance, for about 35 per cent of the total area of the United States is below the Mason-Dixon Line, and 27 per cent of the total population live in this area. The purchasing power of this 27 per cent has become of vast importance to the whole nation.

While industry was in the process of development, and for years after, foreign markets absorbed its output, both in manufactured goods and raw materials. But in these later years these customers have been largely lost, so more customers must be found at home.

Does the South Buy or Use All it Can Absorb?

The South has 27 per cent of the total population and less than 15 per cent of the total income; the average income tax paid in the South is far below the national income tax. For instance, Texas pays an average of $47.00 while New York pays $578.00. The average per capita income for the nation as a whole is $69.08 but for the South it is much lower.

Are there reasons for these disparities? First, consider wages. In the North the average per hour paid labor is twelve cents more than in the South. In cotton mills in the North 25 per cent of the workers receive 52 cents an hour and 50 per cent of the workers get 37 cents an hour. In the South fewer than 10 per cent of the workers receive even as much as 37 cents an hour. Consider next the differentials in the amount of relief paid in different sections. The national average for WPA workers is $54.87, but for the Southern States it is much lower. In Mississippi relief workers receive $30.54; in Arkansas $31.54; in Georgia $35.00. For old age assistance the average for the nation is $19.47, but for Mississippi it is $7.37, and for Arkansas $6.00. Relief grants in New York average $53.00 per month for a family of five. In most Southern States the average is $9.03, the highest being $19.58.

Lower Standard of Living in South Affects National Standards

These few figures show that the purchasing power in the South is lower than that in the North and, since purchasing power fixes the standard of living, the Southern standard of living is far below that of the rest of the country.

What effect does this situation in the South have on the nation?

When I was a boy I used to pass through several little New England industrial towns on my way to school. These little towns were well kept and the general atmosphere was one of thrift and industry. I pass those same towns now and I notice a marked change from those early years. Streets which were formerly well kept and paved are less than slum sections; only a trickle of workers are on their way to work in the morning—just here and there. If you talk to the people and ask for reasons for the change, some will say, "It is the depression;" some will say, "It is because of meanness on the part of the manufacturer," or "selfishness on the part of the local labor party;" but all agree that the industries that used to support those towns have come South. Industry has found in the South what it has not found in the North—unorganized cheap labor. Industry is escaping from a field favorable to labor to one that is unfavorable; from a field where standards of living and purchasing power have been high to one where the standards of living are low and purchasing power is on a subsistence level. The long-time—or maybe not so long-time—effect will be the reduction of the purchasing power of millions of consumers to the end that our domestic markets, which must be developed to absorb the fruits of industry and agriculture, if they are to be absorbed, will be so contracted that economic collapse for all the nation will inevitably result.

What Makes the South Different?

Now let us see whether or not there are any special conditions which contribute to the apparent willingness with which Southern workers accept these low wages. Immediately we are brought up against the obvious condition which differentiates the South and the rest of the industrialized sections—abundant Negro labor, willing to take a wage slightly higher than it receives and yet not equal to the low wage paid white labor.

The biracial economy in the South has depressed the standards of living and the wage scale of the white people in areas in which Negroes live. It destroys what little economic security each could enjoy and confers advantages on neither group, nor on the South as a whole. So it is that the basis of low standards for white people is found in the disadvantaged economic status of the Negroes.

Whenever Negro wages have shown a tendency to equal those of the whites the controlling forces have moved in to block this out. Every possible device has been used to maintain this biracial situation and the condition of acquiescence of white workers to low wages. It is done by persuasive arguments; by flinging the banner of racial hatred; sometimes, by wails of self-pity on the part of those who, complaining of the poverty of the South, assert that the survival of the South depends on new industries which must be offered special inducements to come. Finally, sometimes by the use of brutal force.

Individual Survival Is Still Important

Why is it that white workers as a whole are only too glad to work for this low wage? They take this wage because, low as it is, it is higher than they have been making in any other employment. Why is it that white urban workers accept this low wage? They know that, outside of town, rural people are getting an even lower wage and suffer even lower standards of living. Why will these white rural people work for so little money? They know that farther out on the circumference of the wage circle there are Negroes who, receiving even less, will jump at the chance to earn a bit more.

What Is the Answer?

What is the answer? The answer is the labor union. We do not have the union in the South because of situations growing out of our biracial society. For always, I repeat, on the extreme outer circumference of this pool of cheap white labor is this untouched Negro labor—a standing threat to white jobs. Negroes are not in industry nor are they trained to go into industry, yet their very presence determines the scale of wages and standard of living for white labor. White labor, so insecure that it fears to organize, is aware of the presence of this lowest paid group of all groups, capable of being trained and willing to take any job which will pay a little more than it now receives.

The tobacco workers in Durham, North Carolina, wanted a union. The employers were willing for the white workers to organize but when they found that the Negro workers, constituting sixty per cent of all employees, were to be included they opposed such a move. Without the Negro, the union would have been futile. If an employer, himself, feels that his Negro labor should not be included in a union, it is to the advantage of all labor to probe into the reasons. Southern labor has been gradually coming to realize this. As a result, in these past eight or ten years, progress has been made. Labor leadership has begun to take a realistic stand on this question of race—don't think that the Arkansas tenant farmer loves the Negro tenant farmer any more than he did eight or ten years ago! He knows that the conditions are the same and that forces at work are the same as they have always been, but he realizes that nothing can be changed unless both races combine their forces. By meeting together they begin to see that both suffer under the same limitations, and that only by working together can they improve conditions for either group.

Have We a Responsibility?

What can we do to further the steps which will help the South?

Because, for the first time, the American nation is beginning to think in terms of democracy from the wider standpoint, we will have to determine whether or not we have the same responsibility for wiping out economic differentials as we have assumed for eliminating educational differentials.

If we decide that we have, I think we ought to turn our attention to educating the general public regarding the labor movement. We will have to convince the South unless these two races stand together, the South will remain at the bottom economically, educationally, and culturally. If we are going to be honest about improving our living conditions, we will admit that the labor movement must be strengthened; we will admit that the labor union has faults, large and small; yet we will also admit that no better substitute has been found to take the place of the labor union.

DISCUSSION

QUES.: Where Federal funds come in, do they eliminate the actual differentials in wages?

ANS.: If the South had been able to stand up and respond in the same way as was true of the North, it would have had much more advancement.

QUES.: Do you think there will be some lowering of wages outside of the South as a result of this condition in the South?

ANS.: Yes, when one section suffers we all suffer to an extent.

QUES.: Is it true that Southern labor is more inefficient than labor elsewhere; that Southern people can't be trained to turn off the same amount of work as other people can?

ANS.: It is possible that some Southern labor does not produce as much as labor elsewhere. On the other hand, a great many mills in the South, when they were set up down here, were equipped with obsolete machines, the new and improved machines being installed elsewhere. This may have been done because the owners accepted the theory, as a fact, that Southern labor is inefficient. On the other hand, it is reported that a large part of Henry Ford's skilled Northern labor is recruited from Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas, and other Southern states where existing wages are extremely low.

QUES.: Do you feel that there is any logical basis at all for differentials between sections?

ANS.: The only logical basis that I can see would be the differences between the cost of raw material and perhaps the difference in the cost of transportation.

QUES.: Do living standards cause false reasoning?

ANS.: There is five per cent difference in the cost of living in the South and in the North. The reason the people in the South spend less money than those in the North is that they have less money.

QUES.: To what extent is the Negro becoming an employer?

ANS.: Records show that the employment of Negroes by Negroes reached its highest point in 1929. During the depression years many Negro employers failed and businesses closed down along with everybody else. This affected the number of Negroes employed by Negroes. Negro business has not come back to its peak of 1929.

QUES.: Are there any Negroes employed in the kind of industries that are connected with the CIO?

ANS.: Yes, 35,000 in packing, mining, railway, rubber and steel industries, in the industries in and around Birmingham and the oil fields of Texas, and some other fields.

QUES.: Are Negroes employed in the textile industries?

ANS.: Not much has been done in this direction in the South. Labor leaders say they have not been able to get their hooks in the Southern scene.

Comment: I wonder if we are all agreed that the problems of industries—wages, hours, and intimidation of workers—all are purely of economic origin. We exploit our laboring groups; we keep them working against odds while a small portion of our population gets its economic step up. If only the merchants could see that an increase in daily and annual wages of the workers of the community would bring them prosperity; if these small-town merchants largely dependent on mill wages could only be made to see that, they would be for some form of labor organization.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON WAGES, HOURS, AND THE RIGHTS OF LABOR IN THE SOUTH

The economic status of the South is of major concern to the entire nation. Industry must have customers and is necessarily affected by the low income and consequent low purchasing power of the South. Average wages and income levels in the South are from one-third to one-half lower than the average for the nation. The standard of living in the South is considerably lower than that of the nation; not because of any appreciable difference in the actual cost of living, but rather because of a lowered income which prohibits the purchase of commodities and service which would be involved in a level of living comparable to that of other sections.

The poverty and the disadvantaged economic circumstances of the South are affected by low industrial wages; low prices for farm products and inadequate purchasing power for either industrial or farm products, and by an economic control of labor maintained by arraying white and Negro workers against each other.

Some suggestions for approach to this industrial situation are:

1. To encourage the work of modern unionism and the extension of appreciation of the principle of collective bargaining, with emphasis upon the organization of all workers in the various industries without discrimination or exclusion on basis of race.
2. To persuade labor leaders to recognize the necessity for elimination of racially discriminatory policies in their approach to collective bargaining, if they hope to achieve maximum success.
3. To develop an understanding of the relation of workers to economic life and of the necessary relation of Negro workers to white workers through worker's education programs.
4. To develop recognition on the part of the merchant class that higher wages for all workers, both Negro and white, will mean more business and more prosperity for them . . . with the implication that they should support programs designed to remove racial differentials and sectional differentials in the matter of wages.
5. To develop recognition of the serious difficulties in the Southern economic pattern caused by the low wages paid to workers in the field of personal service, which does not permit any kind of wholesome living, with the consequent dangers both to morale and to purchasing power of the community.
6. To insist that the Federal Government in its administration of public funds for relief and employment in the South not be a party to this policy of sectional discrimination that contributes to the perpetuation of lower income levels of the South.
7. To work for the elimination of the poll tax and the other devices that concentrate political power in the hands of the few to the disastrous result of the South in all too many instances.
8. To stimulate the improvement of the administrative procedures of the Public Employment Service to the end that the now all-too-frequent discriminatory policies will be eliminated.
9. To encourage and endorse the insertion of non-discriminatory prohibitions in Federal contracts which will operate to reduce and eliminate the refusal to employ Negro workers.
10. To advocate the discontinuance of the administrative policy of industrial and vocational education which operates on the theory that no workers should be trained for industries in which they are not now employed, thus resulting in the practical elimination of Negroes from the training programs for many of the skilled and shop occupations.

Bibliography

Lester B. Granger of New York is Field Secretary of the National Urban League, an organization designed primarily to improve the economic status of Negroes of the United States. The League has state and local units throughout the South.

Dr. H. Clarence Nixon, an assistant professor at Vanderbilt University, is a native of Merrellton, Alabama. His book "Forty Acres and a Steel Mule" is a striking presentation of the problems, human and economic, growing out of agricultural mechanization. Dr. Nixon is a member of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation.

Dr. Ira de A. Reid, professor of sociology at Atlanta University, is on leave of absence to serve as special assistant in the research division of the Federal Social Security Department in Washington, D. C. Dr. Reid is the author of "In a Minor Key—Negro Youth in Story and Fact," and co-author of "Sharecroppers All."

In March of this year Dr. Horace Mann Bond was one among six given special citations by the American Educational Research for his book "Negro Education in Alabama." Dr. Bond is a member of the Georgia Commission on Interracial Cooperation.

Needed . . . A Southern Charter For Race Relations

By GORDON B. HANCOCK

When the forefathers of our Nation conceived and wrought the Declaration of Independence, they achieved a political consummation that was at once a tribute to their own greatness and a challenge to all succeeding generations. At the very heart of this great instrument is the incipient spirit of isolationism, akin to that which motivated the Monroe Doctrine. Yet after only a hundred and sixty years we find Great Britain and the United States drawing up the "Atlantic Charter," which is a virtual "Declaration on Inter-dependence." A comparison of the two "declarations" makes more dramatic the irresistible truth that nations, like individuals, cannot live unto themselves. Even the wars of today are not wars between individual nations but between combinations of nations; and it follows that any prospects of a lasting peace must be predicated upon a combination of peace-loving nations. In other words, the limited combinations of nations for war is a prelude to the unlimited combination for peace.

Education Undermines Racial Isolation

Just as isolationism among the nations is outmoded, so is it among the races of mankind. Three major influences which are operating against isolation among the nations are calculated also to negate isolation among the races. The first of these is education. Education has a liberalizing effect upon human minds everywhere and all the time. In its expansion, its program and its processes, it broadens narrow minds and creates in them a desire for truth. Seekers after truth are like spokes of a wheel—the nearer they come to the hub, the nearer they come to each other. So it is that a kinship is established among educated people which tends to transcend conventional limitations. The white youth who drove an ambulance to the scene of a South Carolina accident and then refused to help the dying because they were Negroes would not have been guilty of such inhumaneness had he been educated. Education is undermining such spirit among men.

Our nation today is set to the grim task of winning a war we tried so hard to avert. So opposed were we to war that even when its threatenings had blackened our national horizon, we refused to face the ugly facts. Only the tragedy of Pearl Harbor could drive home to us that our country was endangered; that everything we love and hold dear was threatened with destruction. The unanimous response that the educated leadership gave at this critical time is one of the finest tributes that can ever be paid to the cause of education in these United States. Negro leadership no less than white leadership rose to the emergency with the firm resolution to fight Nazism to the last ditch! White and Negro leaders alike called for an "all out" against the Nazis. Negro leadership is epitomized in this statement by the National Urban League:

> "It will help us if we are guided by this principle: that no special racial objective at this time is more urgent than accomplishing the defeat of the Axis powers and preserving our American form of government. This does not mean that we shall retreat from positions we have already won in our quest for citizenship; neither does it mean that we give over seeking new gains, even in the midst of war, for many improvements in the Negro's situation are essential to the successful prosecution of the war. . . . But at no point must we allow the Negro community to forget that its future safety and its sole chance of attaining democratic equality lies in defeating the aggressor nations that now seek to enslave all the peoples of the world."

The nation should be proud of a group that could make such a statement in the face of such great emergency. The educated white man and educated Negro are together.

Religion Nourishes Racial Brotherhood

Religion breaks down isolation. Just as seeking minds evolve a sympathy and kinship with each other, so it is with seeking souls. Though slow the processes, religion is making men more tolerant toward each other, bringing them closer together. One of the early examples of the functioning of religion as the solvent of isolationism is that of the establishment of schools in the South by the religious foundations of the North during Reconstruction days. Today Catholics, Protestants, and Jews recognize a community of interests transcending race and national boundaries which is but the prelude to their gradual mergence into one grand religious whole.

Science Knows No Racial Lines

Science tends to destroy isolation. Facilitated communication and improved transportation are death-knells to isolation. What is more, we are now only in the dawn of science, and therefore of the intertwining of human relationships. What is in store for a world where the barriers of time and space are forever crumbling has not yet entered into the minds of men.

If nations and races in distant parts of the earth cannot be isolated how much less can the Negro and white races of the South. Segregation is an attempt at isolation; but when a white orchestra exudes jazz and swing music of Negro derivation and Negroes render the music of Brahms and Mozart and Beethoven, they demonstrate the difficulty of attempted isolation. The Negro, semi-isolated physically, is spiritually so integrated into the heart of the South and the Nation that it is impossible to separate the one race from the other. We may well consider seriously the problem of making racial contacts mutually profitable.

If I Were a White Man of the South

The rise of the Negro in the South, gratifying as it has been, is only the prophetic outline of greater achievements of the future when the Negro will realize more completely his aspirations and the white man will understand and value him more fully. If I were a white man of the South, I would be proud of the late Dr. E. E. Just and of Dr. George W. Carver who have made history as scientists; I would be proud of Congressmen DePriest and Mitchell, all of whom hail from Alabama —to say nothing of Joe Louis, the Nation's idol. These Negroes are a compliment to the white race no less than the Negro race. They are not liabilities but assets to their section and their Nation. If I were white I would feel ashamed of the dreadful odds they had to surmount in order to bring credit to my Nation! They are convincing proof that it is not the "let up" Negro but the "kept down" Negro that constitutes "the white man's burden."

With isolationism being swept away and with Negro worth increasingly exemplified, the time is now ripe for planning a greater tomorrow in race relations. Just as the Negro is ready and willing to help win the war, he is ready and willing to help win the peace by assisting to make the South a better place in which to live. The time is at hand when the leadership of the South, white and Negro, must go into a "huddle" and plan the future of race relations. It is not too early for Negroes to be thinking in terms of concrete goals such as greater skilled industrial employment in the South. Negroes need larger measures of New Dealism as it pertains to agriculture and agricultural rehabilitation. The knotty problem of labor unionization that is going to take deep hold on the South is a challenge to both the Negroes and the lowly whites. How can the labor union that has so stubbornly opposed the Negro be made to open its doors to him? How can the exclusiveness be replaced by inclusiveness in labor ranks?

Needed—A Southern Charter For Race Relations

As the "Atlantic Charter" was needed to prepare for post-war times and problems, so also is needed for the South a "Southern Charter" that will chart an interracial course for the post-war period. The Negro must help draw up such a charter. In it must be set out specific demands such as the moral right to work for an honest living; the right to share equitably in the educational opportunities, without which he cannot function in a democracy; the right to vote for the mayors and governors, law makers and law enforcers, officials who control his daily life, as well as for the President who is powerless in local affairs. To draft this "Southern Charter" and to direct its course, there should be a central planning committee preferably headquartered in Atlanta, where close cooperation could be had with the Interracial Commission. From this, a pattern plan could be disseminated throughout the South. On this planning committee should sit white men and women who are not afraid to be called "Nigger Lovers" and Negroes who are not afraid to be called "Uncle Toms"! The time is at hand for the white and Negro leadership of the South to rally to an unparalleled opportunity.

NATIONAL UNITY AND CIVILIAN MORALE

I. Rumors

Rumors are floating around the South which are causing tension between the white and Negro peoples. Rumors to instill fear and hatred, to divide a people whom he is attacking, is a familiar and successfully used technique of Hitler's.

Rumor Number 1—Uprising of Negroes Against White Citizens

a. Are you helping Hitler by repeating that Negroes plan to attack white citizens; that they are arming themselves with guns, ice picks, or other weapons?

b. Have you reported to the FBI any and all rumors of this nature reaching your ears?

c. Have you talked to local Negroes to learn how they feel about these rumors affecting their loyalty and their patriotism?

Rumor Number 2—"Eleanor Clubs" and Domestic Service

Another rumor is being circulated, directed especially at white women, to stir in them racial fear and resentment. This relates to domestic service. "They say" Negro women are organizing "Eleanor Clubs" with the general purpose of forcing all Negro women out of domestic service.

a. Have you heard these rumors?

b. Have you repeated them and supported them by relating the story of someone who has lost a cook, a maid, or a laundress?

c. Have you pushed this rumor back through all the people who have repeated it to get at the truth?

d. If a Negro cook has left domestic employment have you tried to find out why she left?

1. For a better job?
2. Because she is receiving money as a soldier's dependent and does not have to work?

Discussion:

If for either of the reasons under "d" a Negro woman leaves domestic service, should she be condemned? Would you not act in the same way?

(Read "Boston's Fight Against Rumors"—American Mercury, September, and organize a RUMOR CLINIC.)

II. Sore Spots

1. Transportation
   a. Have you had reports of serious racial friction on public transportation?
   b. If so, have you investigated any of them?
   c. Does the white public observe the rules setting aside certain seats for Negro patrons?
   d. Is this rule observed when no Negroes are on the bus or street car?
   e. If not, do white people move from seats reserved for Negroes when Negroes get on the bus or street car?
   f. Have you discussed the transportation situation in regard to racial troubles with officials of the company controlling this public service?

2. The Police; Negro Civilians; Negro Soldiers
   a. Does the local police force assist the Military Police in maintaining order among Negro soldiers?
   b. Does your city have Negro policemen?
   c. If an Army camp is nearby in which Negro soldiers are stationed, does it maintain Negro Military Police?
   d. Have you investigated reports of mistreatment of Negro civilians and soldiers by the civilian police force?

The Background

Education for the Negro

By VIRGINIUS DABNEY

There are differences of opinion among Southerners on the question whether Negroes should be admitted to publicly-supported institutions of higher learning hitherto reserved for white students, and there will doubtless continue to be such differences of opinion. There should be no disagreement, however, on the point that Negroes are entitled to adequate educational opportunities, and that until they are given such opportunities there can be no satisfactory solution of the race problem.

Something like half a century ago, Joel Chandler Harris wrote that "if education of the Negro is not the chief solution of the problem that confronts the white people of the South, then there is no other conceivable solution and there is nothing ahead but political chaos and demoralization." While the threat of "political chaos" does not loom anything like so large today as it did when the foregoing was written, the basic thesis remains sound.

It ought not to be necessary today to convince any informed Southerner that the level of civic responsibility and social advancement of any group is intimately bound up with the educational opportunities which that group enjoys. Ignorance breeds criminality, just as do filthy surroundings and lack of economic opportunity. In earlier days, the theory was rather widely held that educated Negroes were more apt to turn to crime than uneducated Negroes. While there may have been a measure of truth in this during the ante-bellum era, owing to the natural aversion of any educated person to living as a chattel slave, the notion that education was a crime-breeder unfortunately persisted into the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

It took statistical demonstrations to convince some Southerners that they were wrong in believing that crime is more prevalent among the educated Negroes than among the uneducated. First among such demonstrations was that given by Dr. Clarence Poe in his article, "Lynching: A Southern View," which appeared in the Atlantic Monthly for February, 1904. Dr. Poe, then as now one of the South's most influential leaders, showed that the percentage of criminality among illiterate Negroes was much higher than among the literate.

A more elaborate demonstration of this thesis, and one which deserves to be better known, appeared thirteen years later in the South Atlantic Quarterly. It was published in the January, 1917, issue of that magazine, and was from the pen of Gilbert T. Stephenson, then judge of the Winston-Salem Municipal Court, and now prominent in North Carolina banking circles.

Mr. Stephenson communicated with officials of penal institutions in various parts of the South, and with educational authorities, as well, and reported his extremely convincing findings in the article mentioned above. His exhaustive analysis led him to the following conclusion:

"All the available statistics and the unanimous opinion of men in a position to know the facts would seem to be proof that education—elementary or advanced, industrial or literary—diminishes crime among Negroes. The alarmingly high rate of Negro criminality is as much a condemnation of the community in which it exists as of the offending Negroes themselves."

The South should take that unassailable declaration to heart. Until it does so, there can be no satisfactory approach to the Negro problem.

The South....Child Rich..Dollar Poor

By Dr. Eli S. Marks

The relation between education and taxable income is not a simple one. In a rural economy, education is not essential to productivity, although training in modern agricultural methods is certainly a key to the expansion of production. In urban areas, with their complex industrial organization, lack of education may be a decided obstacle to efficiency.

The relation between taxable income and illiteracy is brought out by an analysis of 1,104 counties in 13 southern states. The 1,104 counties included 571 counties which were completely rural and 200 counties in which 30 per cent or more of the population was urban. For these two groups the median population per individual income tax return (1930) is tabulated against the number of illiterates per 1,000 population. A high median indicates relatively few income tax returns.

Number of Illiterates per 1000 Population	Median County Population Per Individual Income Tax Return
	Rural Counties	Urban Counties
Under 50	442	39
50-99	433	73
100-149	433	89
150 or more	340	92
All counties	410	68

In the urban counties the number of income tax returns increases as illiteracy decreases reflecting the greater taxable income associated with increased literacy. In the rural counties the relation is, if anything, reversed. Peculiarly enough, this reversal reflects the retardation of the southern agricultural economy. The areas with highest illiteracy are also those containing the South's richest farmlands. In these areas illiterate sharecroppers produce wealth which is reflected in the income tax returns of their landlords. In the areas where small independent farms prevail, illiteracy is lower but the general poverty of the rural areas appears in the low number of income tax returns.

City and Country Out of Balance

Under present agricultural conditions in the South, it is doubtful whether improvements in education would profoundly affect economic conditions of the rural areas. With change in agricultural methods, the value of education may be expected to increase. In the urban areas the contribution of literacy to income seems clear.

It should be noted that the concentration of taxable wealth in urban areas is much greater than the concentration of population. The urban counties show six times as many income tax returns (in relation to population) as the rural counties. There are four counties in Tennessee which contain cities with population over 100,000. In 1937, these four counties contained only 33 per cent of the state's population but had 55 per cent of the taxable property (real estate, personal property, and public utilities). These four counties also accounted for 73 per cent of all Federal income tax returns from Tennessee in 1937.

Rural South—the Mudsill of Education

The ability of rural areas of the South to support educational systems is far below that of the urban areas. Southern urban areas, handicapped by a poorly trained labor force, are in turn far behind the wealthier cities of the North in ability to support education. The situation is further complicated for both areas by migration. Between 1920 and 1930 over one and a half million persons left the South for other areas of the United States. Nearly half of these migrants were Negroes. As is true of most migrations, over 50 per cent of the migrants are between the ages of 15 and 45.

This largely untrained population has created a serious problem of adjustment in the areas to which they have migrated and this is true particularly of the Negro migrants. At the same time the South has lost a large potential source of wealth.

The South: Its Children and Old People

Migration and a high birth rate have resulted in a larger proportion of population of school age in the South than in the remainder of the country. In 1940, 20.1 per cent of the population of the South was between 5 and 15 years of age compared with only 15.7 per cent of the population of other areas. Thus the South has in proportion to its population 28 per cent more educables than the remainder of the United States.

It is true that the burden of support of the aged is somewhat lower in the South than it is in other areas. Only 5.5 per cent of the southern population is 65 years old or over compared with 6.8 per cent of the population for the United States as a whole. More than 8 per cent of the population are 65 years old or over in the New England, West North Central and Pacific States. While encouraging on the surface, these figures actually reflect the poor health and high mortality conditions of the section and the effects of past migration in draining from the South large numbers of persons in the productive ages from 20 to 50.

The low proportion of persons over 65 in the South implies to some extent that the South is contributing more than its share to the present program of Federal old-age assistance. This is, of course, not true in actual proportions of Federal tax money spent for old-age assistance. In this respect, the South undoubtedly receives more money in old-age assistance than it pays in taxes to the Federal government for that purpose. In terms of ability to pay however, the South is probably being taxed more for old-age assistance than are other areas.

Education: A National Responsibility

There is nothing inequitable about the old-age assistance plan if we think in national rather than regional terms. The care of those aged persons who produced our national wealth in the days of their productive vigor is a responsibility of the nation as a whole. Having in fact accepted this theory, the United States must consider whether the training of those young persons who are to produce our national wealth in days to come is not also a responsibility of the nation as a whole.

The social and economic structure of the South is characterized by a set of vicious circles. One of the most notable of these is the relation between education and income. A poor educational system has operated to produce a population poorly equipped for the production of wealth and the resultant low tax revenues have made it impossible for the South to support a good educational system.

Percent of Tax Dollar Spent for Public Schools in 1938

Education and the Tax Dollar

By Guy B. Johnson

Most of us are by now familiar with certain unpleasant facts about the South. We know that the South has the lowest per capita income and per capita wealth of any region in the nation. We know that wages are low, that agriculture is very sick, and that the South is probably in reality the nation's Economic Problem Number One.

We have also heard that the South has more children of school age per 1,000 adults than any other region. This means that our educational burden is doubly heavy, because we have more children to educate and less money to spend on education. It is not surprising then that whereas southern states like Georgia and Louisiana spend from $30 to $45 per public school pupil per year, the northeastern states like Pennsylvania and New York spend from $80 to $135.

But does this mean that the South does not believe in education? Does it mean that the South has been lying down on the job? No indeed! In spite of the poor showing made by the South when it is compared with the rest of the country, there is one thing to be said to its credit: considering its resources and the amount of money which it can raise by taxation, it actually makes a relatively greater effort to carry the burden of education than do the wealthier regions.

One measure of effort to support public schools is the proportion of the tax dollar which a state is willing to spend on education. A study made in 1934 for the United States Office of Education showed that in 1930 the average state was spending 40.2 per cent of state and local tax collections on schools, but that the southern states were spending 41.3 per cent of their tax collections for education. Of seven states which were spending less than 35 per cent of their taxes on education, only two were in the South, and one southern state, North Carolina, spent more than half of its taxes on schools.

A study of "School Costs and State Expenditures," published by the National Education Association in May, 1941, gives us more up-to-date information, but it shows that the picture has not changed materially. It shows what per cent of the 1937 state and local tax dollar was spent on public elementary and secondary schools in 1938. The expenditures range from New Mexico's 60.4 per cent down to Massachusetts' 22.9 per cent, and the national average is 34.2 per cent. Now, if we rank the states from high to low and divide them into four groups of twelve each, we find that in the highest twelve there are seven southern states: North Carolina, Texas, South Carolina, Alabama, Virginia, West Virginia, and Oklahoma. Along with them are western states like New Mexico, Wyoming, and Utah. In the second highest group we find Arkansas, Georgia, Mississippi, and Louisiana. Nearly all of the great wealthy states are in the third and fourth groups. Only two southern states, Maryland and Florida, are in the fourth or lowest group, but here we find Ohio, New York, New Jersey, and all of the New England states. Thus it seems quite clear that on the whole the poorer and more rural states of the South and West are making better than average effort to educate their children.

Unfortunately, with all of this valiant effort to support education, our southern schools are on the whole far below the national average. The trouble is that we have so few tax dollars to use as compared with the rest of the country. The need for some sort of equalization is clear. Within individual states the principle of equalization is now accepted as sound. We consider it a matter of simple justice to pool the tax resources of a state and use them so that the school children in a county with poor resources will not be penalized just because they happen to be living there. If the principle is sound as between the counties of a state, why is it not just as sound as between the states of the union?

If the educational burden were better balanced between the various regions of the nation, the South could do a better job of developing its human and natural resources. The South is the "seed bed" of the nation. It raises more children than any other region, educates them as best it can—and then watches many of the brightest ones go out to the North and West to seek their fortunes. But no matter whether our children stay here in the South or migrate to other sections, they are going to play a greater part in the make-up of the future American population than any other region. In the interest of the national welfare it is important that they have as good an education as the average American pupil.

This Is The Tragedy Of The South

By James C. Derieux

In every Southern state thousands of white boys and more thousands of Negro boys are growing up without enough education to meet the minimum requirements of the Selective Service organization. In some of the Southern states more than half the Negro boys, and a fourth or more of the white boys are excluded from the armed services because they have not a fourth grade common school education, or its equivalent.

These tens of thousands of boys are unfit for the tasks of modern war; and they also are unfit for the tasks of modern peace. Thus there is no condition of life into which they fit satisfactorily.

What is to become of these illiterates and these semi-literates who have no place in war, and no satisfactory place in peace?

A study of relief rolls shows what happened to their fathers. Eroded fields, sagging fences, tumble-down shanties, and other visible signs of ignorance and of poverty show what the illiterate and the semi-literate accomplished before the national government rescued them from the sinister suggestions of hunger. Of course, every one can cite instances of successful illiterates, and of happy illiterates; but a few selected instances mean little. It is the conduct of the masses, of important groups, that determines whether a state or a region or a nation builds strength and happiness, or whether it allows hope to fade, and disintegration to begin.

South Carolina is representative of other Southern states, and here is what a study of school figures in that state reveals:

Approximately three-fourths of all Negro boys drop out of school before completing the fourth grade, and approximately one-third of the white boys do the same thing. If this situation is not remedied, South Carolina will be forced to continue indefinitely its difficult struggles against the consequences of ignorance and of poverty, those disaster twins, each of which is cause and effect of the other.

In thirteen Southern states 979,666 white children were enrolled in the first grade of the public schools in 1939. In the fourth grade that same year the total enrollment was 617,998.

Why should there be in this typical year 261,668 more children in the first than in the fourth grade? The answer is plain: scores of thousands of children drop out of school after the first or second or third year of study.

The figures for Negro children are, as one would expect, more startling. The total Negro enrollment in the first grade in 1939 was 605,498; in the fourth grade, 251,316. The "mortality" here was 354,182.

If these total figures are divided between boys and girls they will show that the "mortality" of school boys is much greater than that of girls. The fuller meaning of this fact is clearer when one recalls that nearly all of the fighting, and most of the productive work of the world is done by males.

There was a time when the illiterate had a place in war, and when he could fit, somehow, into low-standard peace time life. But that was before war became complicated and mechanized, and before peace became mechanized and complicated. The tasks of war today require mental aptitude and some knowledge; and the same may be said of the tasks of peace. There would be many more industries in the South today, including recently established defense industries if there were more boys and men who had enough schooling to become skilled workers quickly.

"We haven't the time," say Army officers, "to teach men to read and write, and then teach them to be soldiers."

"We haven't the time," industrialists say, "to teach workers to read and write, and then teach them how to do our kinds of work."

No place in war. No satisfactory place in peace. This is the tragedy for thousands in the South. This is the tragedy of the South. But it is not a tragedy that has no end. The people of the South can stop it within a few years by putting their thoughts, their hearts and a little more of their substance into education.

Whatever the reasons may be, whenever the Federal Government lays down a new rule in the National Defense game, the South gets a blow. Occasionally these blows appear to be so light that they can be absorbed without permanent damage to sectional life and institutions. Recently one of these "light" ones was administered—

The Selective Service Board ruled that in the future no selectees will be drafted for military service who haven't a fourth grade education. It caused little or no ripple on the surface of Southern public opinion, already made punch-drunk by certain Supreme Court decisions aimed straight at the South. Yet the implications of this ruling are more far-reaching in effect on the immediate present and the not so remote future of the South than any recent court decision. The South can, and doubtless will, find ways of evading or deferring compliance with the latter, but the former enforces itself.

According to a recent columnist, from May 15, when this ruling went into effect, to July 15, 91,919 draftees were "excused" on account of illiteracy—37,217 white men, 54,702 Negroes. This column repeats what is general knowledge: the South has the heaviest percentage of illiteracy. In Louisiana 4.8 per cent of white selectees and 23.7 per cent of Negro selectees were rejected, with Georgia and Florida slightly less. Mississippi, Virginia, and North Carolina were classed together as states of high illiteracy.

The South may have to depend increasingly on illiterates and semi-illiterates not only for the present but its future also should this Nation engage in a "shooting" war.

The next move is up to the department to which the applicant has been certified. The department sends a questionnaire to said certified applicant with the request that it be returned with a photograph.

THE SOUTHERN FRONTIER asked State Departments of Education to set out the causes for the decrease in enrollment between the first and fourth grades in Negro schools and for the difference between the white and Negro schools. The causes are so uniform that one educator could have answered for all thirteen. "More Negro children than white have to drop out of school to help earn a living."—"White schools have a greater holding power due to longer terms, better teachers, and more attractive housing facilities."—"In those counties where there are Jeanes Supervisors and well prepared teachers, the distribution through the grades is assuming a more normal situation."—"A large number of Negro children in the first grade are too young to be in school. But parents who have to work feel it is safer for their children at school than locked up in the house all day."

The figures on enrollment are bad. But what about average attendance? One county superintendent bluntly stated at a public meeting that if all the Negro children enrolled in that state attended school, there would not be school houses to put them in. Obviously the more children enrolled in a county, the more state funds that county gets. On the other hand, the fewer children who attend school after enrollment, the less that county must spend of its own funds for the education of its children.

We Must Comply With What?

Editorial, Southern Frontier, November, 1941

Negro State Teachers Associations are chalking up an increasing number of suits against county or city boards of education to equalize teachers' salaries. The decision of the U. S. Supreme Court which held that a differential in teachers' salaries on the basis of race is unconstitutional, has emboldened many Negro leaders in education to insist that something be done about their salary scale. A casual glance at the table of salaries shows the marked discrepancies between the pay of white and Negro teachers:

Average Salaries for Teachers*

State	White	Negro
Alabama	$ 816	$387
Arkansas	625	367
Florida	1,133	569
Georgia	886	398
Louisiana	1,026	368
Mississippi	750	237
North Carolina	916	647
Oklahoma	1,059	923
South Carolina	939	388
Tennessee	887	580
Texas	1,195	704
Virginia	912	598

The question of salaries is merely preliminary, an entering wedge, which doubtless will be followed by others. It is, conceivably, unconstitutional to differentiate in the expenditure of public funds between children on the basis of race. Teachers' salaries are reflected in the per capita cost.

Current Expenditures per Child Enrolled

State	Year	White	Negro
Alabama	1938-39	$36.03	$10.65
Arkansas	1939-40	26.84	10.63
Florida	1937-38	55.44	21.64
Georgia	1939-40	43.38	12.47
Louisiana	1938-39	60.37	12.62
Mississippi	1938-39	38.96	4.97
North Carolina	1937-38	39.31	21.71
Oklahoma	1939-40	49.75	51.52
South Carolina	1939-40	46.80	11.40
Texas	1939-40 (appro'd)	54.06	26.32
Virginia	1938-39	30.18	18.22

Then comes the question of capital investment. The financial picture of the Southern public school system is practically complete with the consideration of this third differential:

Value of Buildings, Grounds, and Equipment per Child Enrolled

State	White	Negro
Alabama	$114.71	$23.93
Arkansas	111.46	31.01
Florida	265.56	70.33
Georgia	139.13	34.69
Louisiana	205.88	32.11
Mississippi	175.23	10.68
North Carolina	161.61	52.87
South Carolina	172.35	32.79
Texas	226.51	72.86
Virginia	157.46	60.43

To those who know something of school conditions in the South, nothing more is needed than these three tables. The money is not here to wipe out the differentials on the basis of race; nor is the money here to wipe out the differentials on the basis of geography. But differentials must be wiped out.

It is no news nowadays that the South has more children to educate and fewer tax dollars to educate them with than the rest of the country; it is no news that the South's schools are the poorest in the country; nor that the Southern States spend more proportionately on education than do the states in the rest of the Nation.

Then, why doesn't the South—man, woman, and child—work unceasingly for the passage of S-1313 which would broaden educational opportunities for the South's children? The late Senator Pat Harrison, Mississippi, could not convincingly be charged with a subconscious desire to eliminate segregation or to destroy states' rights. Yet for three consecutive Congresses, he was co-author of bills to provide Federal Aid for Public Education. Senate Bill 1313 now before the Congress is the Harrison-Thomas bill.

If the fears arising at the thought of Federal Aid to Public Education are honestly entertained, and if the words of the opponents to the measure mean what Webster says such words mean, then these ten questions embody the arguments against the bill which the bill itself answers:

If the Bill Becomes a Law

Q. Can the Federal government dictate the policies of the States, the curricula, the personnel, the control of the schools?

A. The policy: "Without Federal control over educational policies of States and localities," the States will maintain responsibility in the conduct of education; organization and administration of schools; processes of education; the selection of personnel. (See II, Page 6 of Bill.)

Q. Will Southern States be forced to wipe out biracial school systems?

A. The bill recognizes and accepts biracial schools created by state law. (Sec. IV-2; Sec. VI, 1-e—2-a; Sec. XII, Page 6 et seq. of Bill.)

Q. Who makes the plans for apportioning funds within the State?

A. Each State works out its own plan for apportioning Federal funds but without any reduction in the amount spent out of State and local funds during the fiscal year ending in 1940. (Sec. VI, Page 7 of Bill.)

Q. If the State does not accept the Federal plan, will the money be withheld?

A. There is no Federal plan. (See Answer 1.) Money will be withheld only in case of failure to meet certain conditions or for illegal use of Federal funds. (Sec. VIII, Page 8 of Bill.)

Q. (a) What are the conditions under which funds will be withheld?

(b) How is illegal use determined?

A. (a) These conditions are: Failure to make proper reports to Commission; spending less on Negro schools than the State spent in 1940; failure to abide by the merit system in making appointments; permitting funds to be used for private purpose, and by private agencies. (Sec. VIII, Page 6 of Bill.)

(b) An audit by State departments every six months (Sec. VIII) will determine the use of funds.

Q. Can the Federal government dictate textbooks and the general purposes for which the money can be used?

A. Textbooks are not mentioned specifically. Sec. IV-3 provides that a State may use up to 25% of its money for plants and equipment in national defense areas; up to 25% for the same purpose in other school districts; 2% for expenses of the State Department of Education. The rest—48%—is not allocated by the bill but is subject to distribution by the State Department for "all types of expenses of public elementary and secondary schools."

Q. Will the Federal government compel the appointment of officials of State Departments of Education approved by the Commissioner in Washington?

A. Sec. VII-3 provides for the merit system, specifically excluding from its provisions members of boards of education within the State, all elected officials, and the State Superintendent. All other employees of the State Department must be selected on merit and efficiency and "without regard to political considerations." Sec. II-2 reserves to the State the right to select the "personnel employed by the State and its agencies and local jurisdictions."

Q. Will the money be divided among the States on a per capita basis or on the basis of need?

A. Allocation of Federal funds will be based on the number of educables in the State; the ability of the State to pay; and the extent to which each State is taxing itself to educate its children. (Sec. IV-2a.)

Q. Will the interests of Negro children be protected in their separate schools?

A. Sec. VI-1e provides that a State cannot reduce the amount of local and state funds below that spent on Negro schools in 1940. (See Answer 3.)

Q. Who will determine a "just and equitable apportionment for Negro schools?"

A. The bill itself in Sec. XIV defines "just and equitable proportion for minority races," an amount equal to the percentage of Negro population of the total population of the State. (Page 8 of Bill.)

Education for Security

By C. H. Bynum

America's first line of defense is a people who are experienced in the ideals and practice of democracy. Defense of the chalk-lined cliffs of Britain; penetration beyond the Rhine, over the Alps, and across the Pacific will not avail if America's whole citizenry does not enjoy the full privileges of democracy. Thirty billion dollars for battleships, tanks, airplanes, munitions, and other materials of war will halt the invasion of the evils of Naziism, Communism, and Fascism, temporarily; but so long as inequalities in educational opportunities exist in America, the security of America is threatened.

The fact that inequalities do exist between sections of the nation is subject to proof. Between the South and the rest of the country, these inequalities, without regard to race, are so great that only by repetition of statistics can national responsibility for wiping them out be accepted. On the basis of national standards in terms of average daily attendance, the minimum per capita expenditure required for elementary education is approximately $60.00 and for high school education $102.00. An average daily attendance of 80 per cent of the children of school age in the eighteen states maintaining separate biracial schools, would require an annual expenditure of $450,000,000 for elementary schools and $325,000,000 for high schools.

This $775,000,000 does not include any funds for the improvement of physical equipment. One hundred and twenty-five million dollars annually is required for capital outlay. But because of the present conditions of physical equipment, $125,000,000 is too small a figure for a minimum program for replacements and expansion of facilities.

Since these vast sums of money are needed to bring the educational opporunities of Southern children up to the minimum standard of the nation which spends on an average of 40 per cent of its income on education, could it be assumed that by greater exertion the South might finance its own needs? Facts do not support this assumption.

If the South out of its own resources set out to raise its standard of public education to the minimum national level, it would have to apply practically its total income from all sources to this objective. For in a most favorable year the total taxable resources of the eighteen states would yield approximately one billion dollars, nine hundred million of which would have to be allocated to the support of schools, which would then reach only the minimum average of the nation.

The bare statistics of the financial needs and financial resources are convincing evidence that the South cannot educate for national security without Federal aid. There is no alternative. So long as the South is forced to carry the whole support of its educational system, the security of America is threatened. Any plans for National Defense which do not include long range planning for the eradication of the inequalities in educational opportunities will fail of their ultimate purpose. And the plans must be made and set in motion now. Our peril demands action.

The South's Children Are the Nation's Children

Until the Federal Government aids public education, several million children will not have opportunities which should be theirs, according to Dr. Howard A. Dawson, director of rural education for the National Education Association. Dr. Dawson, speaking to the Fulton (Georgia) County School Principals' Clubs, stated that no local or state tax system could be devised which would meet the educational needs of America's children.

Federal aid to public education is necessary, Dr. Dawson declared, if general conditions are to be improved.

"The government may as well be pouring relief money down a rat hole as under the present system," he said. "The only way to correct the condition that exists is by education, by teaching the underprivileged how to better their situation. The nation's wealth consists of the skills of its inhabitants and its natural resources. Money spent on education is an investment that increases the nation's wealth."

Speaking of Negro education, Dr. Dawson pointed out that one result of discrimination in this field has been to disqualify a larger proportion of Negro than white men for military service since the ruling of the Selective Service Board setting the minimum educational requirement at fourth grade.

"In one camp, Belvoir, near Washington, 76 per cent of the Negro soldiers were found virtually illiterate. Thus white boys must fight in the place of these men who were not given minimum schooling."

TO AMERICA

How would you have us, as we are?
  Or sinking 'neath the load we bear?
Our eyes fixed forward on a star?
  Or gazing empty at despair?

Rising or falling? Men or things?
  With dragging pace or footsteps fleet?
Strong, willing sinews in your wings?
  Or tightening chains about your feet?

The Education of Public Opinion

By P. B. Young

The number of lynchings in 1939 dropped to the lowest in the history of this country. This record is generally conceded to be due in part to the education of public opinion through the activities of the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching. Working also on public opinion, but through legislative processes, has been the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Through these organizations it is becoming generally known that the traditionally accepted cause for lynchings is not sustained by the facts. Lynchings are not due primarily to attacks upon women, though this consensus has been religiously cultivated by a considerable body of public officials and newspapers. For instance, in the 1938 Senate filibuster against the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill, this argument was used on the floor of the Senate by some of that body's most important Southern members.

As public opinion has become informed on the thought processes and ultimate purposes of mobs, lynching has declined.

What has been true in educating the public on lynching could be true in the matter of tax supported education. The prevailing opinion is that Negroes contribute virtually nothing to their education. In fact, it is asserted by a large element of otherwise well-informed people, that Negroes pay no taxes.

Recently when the matter of equalizing the pay of white and colored teachers in Virginia on the basis of qualifications and work was submitted to the courts, a leading white citizen, a lawyer and man of mature experience, wrote one of our newspapers that:

> "The white taxpayers of Virginia have cheerfully borne the heavy burden . . . from taxes paid by them for the education of Negro boys and girls since 1865. The white teachers have cheerfully carried their part of the burden, although these large expenditures have kept down their pay."

The assumption here is that white taxpayers bear almost, if not all, the "burden" of Negro education, and that white teachers are paid low salaries partly as a result of this situation. The statements of this gentleman furnishes proof that public opinion in the South is not informed (1) on how taxes are derived, (2) on the wide differential between the amount of tax funds appropriated for white and Negro schools, and (3) on the contributions to supplement tax funds Negroes and others outside the South have made and are still making.

One may not dismiss lightly direct taxes assessed against real and personal property of the nearly eight million Negroes in the South. These taxes are not comparable, of course, to those levied against an equal number of more favorably circumstanced white citizens, but it is a considerable item, nevertheless.

Then, there are the indirect taxes, which no consumer escapes. Well informed people know that every time a person travels on a train, bus, or street car, he pays taxes. Every time a person buys food or clothing he contributes to the upkeep of government. Every time a person rents a house he pays the owner's taxes on that house in the rent. Every citizen pays these taxes, be he white or Negro.

If, however, educational opportunity is to be determined by the amount of direct taxes paid, what would become of the educational opportunity of the thousands of white children whose parents are in as bad economic plight as the parents of the Negro children?

Arguments that Negroes pay little or no taxes give social if not legal sanction to the discrimination in school expenditures on the basis of race. The average expenditure per Negro child throughout the South is $11.00, per white child $44.00. Negro children have shorter school terms, inadequate school buildings, both in number, size and equipment, practically no transportation. Negro teachers are paid smaller salaries, they have more pupils than they can adequately train. The South loses more in this biracial educational policy than the South gains.

Whatever funds the States have spent for the education of its Negro children have been supplemented by contributions from the meager income of Negro parents and from interested philanthropists. The most heroic example of self-help, as well as sacrifice in education in the United States during the past quarter century is the Negroes' contribution to the building of 5,000 Rosenwald schools in Southern States. Though these schools became the property of the State when completed, nevertheless, Negroes themselves contributed over $30,000,000 to the building of the so-called Rosenwald schools.

The building of the school buildings has not been the sole interest of philanthropists. But it was soon recognized that what was taught in the Rosenwald buildings was as important as the buildings themselves. Into this picture came the General Education Board, which for over fourteen years has been carrying the entire expense of the supervision of Negro education in the State Departments of Education in the South.

These philanthropists have now reached the state of financial exhaustion. Negroes are economically depressed after years of struggle with their political and economic disabilities. It would be a service of great humanitarian value, as well as a service of great economic and social value to the South, if the education of public opinion in the matter of public school expenditures could proceed with as much facility as it has progressed in the matter of lynching. To this end Southern women have an opportunity to make an outstanding contribution.

Printed Catalogs Do Not Create Universities

One southern editor has advanced five possible solutions for meeting the question of higher education for Negroes:

1. We can build graduate schools comparable to our white State Universities.
2. We can admit Negroes to our present State Universities.
3. We can lower the white universities to the Negro level.
4. We can sit back and wait.
5. We can pass a scholarship bill to provide some sort of training in institutions out of the state.

The tendency at present is to adopt the first of these solutions. Thoughtful Negroes, however, doubt the financial ability of the states to do more than create Negro Universities by printing catalogs.

If Negroes keep on sniping at Missouri where the heat generates, that State will establish a graduate school at Lincoln University comparable to that of the State University. Maryland sees possibilities in a graduate school at Morgan College; Virginia talks specifically in terms of law and medicine; Florida has plans under consideration; Kentucky and Tennessee are confronted with court battles precipitated by Negroes grown a bit impatient over nothing. From the other states which already have done nothing come a monotonous repetition of "nothing is being planned so far as we know."

The South, the Supreme Court and Negro Education

By Felton G. Clark

The case of graduate instruction of Negroes in the Southern states is one of the most crucial to arise in the entire history of education. The manner in which it is to be provided (in some instances is being provided) will reflect among other things the relationship of private to public education, the relationship of education to religion, the place of thoroughness in a scheme of education, the attitude of the educated white South toward the higher education of Negroes, and the respect of the educated white South for constituted authority. Obviously, there is also involved the matter of determining whether or not the South wants to profit by the highest development of Negro brain power with all the favorable concomitant results that may attend the effort.

Why the Negro Wants Graduate Study

The Negro's desire for graduate study is actuated by the same forces that would make any human being seek it. In some instances he wants the prestige given by an advanced degree; in others, he desires a better economic return on his educational investment which may come about as a result of possession of graduate training. In others still, he is motivated by the urge to acquire the attributes that will make him an original contributor to the world of thought. Of late, Negroes have felt a definite urge to marshal their best thinking on problems of their own group: problems relating to the administration of justice, to the adequacy of income, to the availability of employment, to the facilities for appropriating leisure, to the maintenance of health, to the preservation of a well-balanced personality, to the sound development of character, to the facilities to grow in enlightenment. There is no doubt that never before has the Negro group in America been as cognizant of the problems envisaging it as now. To this same extent is there a tendency to procure scientific techniques for analyzing and, if possible, solving these problems. It follows that the desire for graduate instruction should be enhanced by these factors. And since approximately nine million Negroes live in the Southern states, the problem of graduate instruction for Negroes, if it is to be justly and logically considered, weighs heavily upon the doorstep of the South.

Enter Southern Tradition

Of course the South has not fully assumed its responsibility—for two primary reasons. In the first place, general graduate education in the South has been slow in its development. In the second place, the South's traditional attitude toward the Negro has completely denied him access to graduate education other than that which he paid for out of his own pocket and obtained in Northern institutions or from one of the few Negro institutions doing graduate work.

John reports in his Some Aspects of the Development of Graduate Study in the United States that only 79 master's degrees and 11 doctor's degrees were conferred on Negroes before 1910. Between 1914 and 1936 master's degrees were given to 1,476 Negroes of which 362 came from Negro colleges. One hundred thirty-nine doctor's degrees were awarded to Negroes during the same period all of which were granted by Northern (mixed) universities. Although Fisk and Howard universities attempted graduate instruction just before the turn of the century, it is felt that the first systematic attempts to offer graduate instruction at a Negro institution were those of Howard University in 1921.

Because of the factors mentioned earlier, especially the desire to become more secure in the teaching profession and to receive larger financial returns for labor expended, the demand for facilities for the graduate education of Negroes was greatly increased following the Howard effort. Moreover, the philanthropic foundations, departments of education in the South, several of the Negro private colleges, and a few of the Negro public colleges became definitely interested in the enterprise. As a result initial efforts in graduate education were made by Fisk University and Hampton Institute in 1927, Atlanta University in 1929, Xavier University in 1933, Virginia State College in 1937, Prairie View State College in 1938, North Carolina State College for Negroes and North Carolina Agricultural and Technical College in 1939.

Supreme Court Forces South's Hand

Adding to the seriousness of the case of graduate instruction of Negroes is the recent ruling of the Supreme Court in the case of Lloyd Gaines vs. The University of Missouri. According to this decision, the states of the South must admit Negroes to their general public universities or provide Negroes with education facilities (regardless of level) that are substantially equal to those afforded for persons of the white race. That there is the obligation and the necessity for providing this graduate training for Negroes is admitted by the enlightened white South (as is indicated by discussion at all the more recent meetings of the Conference of Deans of Southern Graduate Schools). Their problem is "How?" Four proposals have been made, as follows: (1) Admit Negroes to existing state universities for white students; (2) Add graduate divisions to existing state colleges for Negroes; (3) Provide tuition subsidies for graduate study in schools which Negroes may attend; (4) Provide regional graduate centers in the South. The major problem of the first proposal is the segregation policy of the South. Yet one or two of the more outstanding Southern universities are informally accepting Negroes for class-room work; sometimes it is formally recognized by Northern universities. The major problem of the second proposal is the difficulty of finding funds to finance a respectable program of graduate study in an existing Negro public college when one knows that generally the Southern states have not as yet expended sufficient money adequately to finance graduate education in their white universities, and in their Negro undergraduate colleges. The major problem of the third proposal is the Supreme Court decision to which reference has been made and the improbability that a tuition subsidy can really provide equal educational opportunity. The major problem of the fourth proposal is the difficulty of getting the satisfactory cooperation of the states of a given region in matters of financial support and educational policy with reference to a particular graduate center.

A New Pattern is Developing

At present, no Southern state admits a Negro to its graduate school, although one state, Maryland, has admitted two Negroes to the Law School of its state university. Six states have made what President Clement of Atlanta University has rightfully called "limited provisions" for graduate instruction of Negroes, namely: Alabama, Louisiana, Missouri, North Carolina, Texas and Virginia. The trend in the four states last mentioned is toward a fairly definite and effective pattern. In the cases of the other two states, the attempts have been more or less informal, representing work taken by persons already possessing the first degree, which work may be recognized "if and when formal graduate work is actually done." Kentucky, Maryland, Oklahoma, Tennessee, West Virginia as well as Missouri, North Carolina, Texas, and Virginia provide tuition subsidies for study in graduate schools which admit Negroes.

As of the last regular school session the nine Negro institutions offering graduate work enrolled 629 students at this level and approximately the same number during the summer term. When one realizes that the bulk of this enrollment was at Howard, Fisk, and Atlanta universities; that the tuition subsidies have hardly made a dent upon the solution to the general problem; and that with about three exceptions graduate work in Negro colleges is generally confined to education and the social studies, he cannot but conclude that graduate facilities for Negroes in the South are woefully inadequate.

A Look at the South, Three Years After Gaines' Suit

Editorial, Southern Frontier, December, 1941

On the 8th of December, 1938, the Supreme Court of the United States handed down the "Gaines decision" on graduate education for Negroes. Under this decision, states must provide equal educational opportunities within the states for all its citizens. Missouri was the state specifically involved but the decision applied in effect to the other sixteen states which maintain separate schools for Negro and white citizens. Immediately the white Southern press began to debate what the South could do to meet the conditions; conferences of white educators were held or were reported about to be held. The average citizen, not greatly concerned, left everything to school men and the legislature.

The "Gaines decision" is no longer news. As far as the general public goes, it is all settled. To Negroes it is far from settled and to politically dominated educators and administrators, an uneasiness moves them at the sight of an occasional Negro application to their college. What they do with these applications is any white man's guess. But what has been done in these three years to provide graduate and professional training for Negroes? What is being planned for the future?

Have the educational lobbies secured increased appropriations for Negro colleges along with those for white colleges? Have administrators seen to it that their Negro state colleges shared Federal funds in proportion to their need?

What Have the States Done?

Briefly, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, and Tennessee have done nothing; Arkansas, Oklahoma, Maryland, and Texas have provided scholarship funds to supplement the cost to Negroes leaving the State for graduate study; North Carolina has established a department of law and a school of library instruction in North Carolina College for Negroes at Durham. Missouri, where the suit originated, has established a law school and is arranging for a school of journalism; Virginia reports progress in increasing teachers' salaries and in introducing courses on the graduate level.

What Is Being Planned Next?

Even the most honest, altruistic, and liberal Southern states could not possibly establish in three years graduate schools for Negroes on a level with white schools. No semi-reasonable person would expect it. But workable plans for future development—what are they?

Either the future of graduate and professional training for Negroes is to be kept a deep dark secret to avoid political repercussions, or there is mighty little future to look forward to if initiative is left to educational authorities.

Do Educational Lobbies Aid Negro Schools?

It is not to be concluded that some white educators in these states are not thinking about the problems confronting them. They are thinking. Certain signs point to the trend their thinking is taking. "Let us build up our State College for Negroes here at home," they say. Now, few white people outside of school men know that colleges must meet certain undergraduate standards before they can give recognized graduate work and almost no Southern legislator knows it. Consequently, it is quite possible that legislatures may attempt, with greater success than they have yet had, to add graduate schools to the catalogs of Negro colleges without an appreciable increase in the appropriations. This theory is susceptible of proof, and with figures. The total net increase in the last appropriation for fifteen Negro State colleges over that immediately preceding was $140,183.50 (Table I). These Negro colleges received from the recent legislatures for all graduate, professional and undergraduate work $3,434,318.50 (Table I).

How much these same legislatures appropriated for their own institutions is not immediately available but one may gather something of the differences in amounts from the appropriations of Texas. Out of a total biennial appropriation for higher education of $22,602,069, the State's only Negro college, Prairie View, gets $349,500.

PWA Funds and Southern Educators

By 1933 public construction of educational facilities throughout the Nation had decreased in volume to such an extent that the PWA was persuaded that help from the Federal Government would stimulate the states to greater exertion in providing funds for essential construction. A building program was inaugurated with PWA furnishing 55% of the estimated total cost. The South, in six years, benefited to the amount of $59,452,737 in PWA funds for construction of its institutions of higher learning. This was not, of course, commensurate with the South's needs. It was merely the amount that the South could pay for. But with such a guarantee by the Federal Government, it was not an impossible task to build up the total cost of construction to the not inconsiderable sum of $90,944,180. (See Table II.)

Southern educators insist, and so do Southern editors, that Federal funds should be allocated between the South and the rest of the Nation according to need and not according to ability to pay or to population. So far, politics in Washington has blocked what the South holds to be the only equitable way to equalize educational needs of the Nation. Politics, on the other hand, functions in Atlanta, Austin, Nashville, and other state capitols in an identical groove as in Washington. Consequently, the distribution of public funds—Federal as well as State—in Southern states follows the line of votes and not of need just as in Washington. Had Southern educational administrators and politicians acted according to their well publicized lights, the figures in Table III would be reversed.

Are Negroes Wards of the South?

Southern states will have to spend many millions of dollars for plant and equipment for Negro colleges. Other millions will have to be found to employ more professors and increase the salaries of those already at work. Southern Negroes know this. They have shown a willingness, almost an eagerness, to realize their educational ambition over a reasonable number of years provided they are sure that the "powers that be" are honest with them and that they are included officially in formulating and working out a program for higher education. White and Negro citizens in the field of education need to plan together for the future. It cannot be left to white educators to acquire and distribute funds according to need.

How well the interests of Negroes are served by white educators and administrators, working behind doors closed to Negro educators, is shown by the distribution of funds in the building programs of the decade of the New Deal.

THE RICHMOND STATEMENT

June 16, 1943

COMMISSION ON INTERRACIAL COOPERATION, INC.

A group of Southern Negroes, acting as individuals but holding positions of influence in their race, held a conference in Durham, N. C., October 20, 1942. They met to discuss the Southern Negroes' status and the changes which, in their opinion, would benefit not only Negroes themselves but the South and the Nation. In December, the results of this meeting were given to the public in a statement which has become known as the "Durham Statement."

Since only Southern Negroes had participated in the conference and in the drafting of the statement, Southern white people could not ignore it. Whether or not there was agreement on their part with what the statement contained, they were impelled to make some formal reply. This reply, signed by more than three hundred Southern white people, was prepared at a conference in Atlanta, April 8, by a hundred and fifteen citizens of ten states. Like the Negroes, they spoke only as individuals, though each held some position of influence in Southern life. Their reply is known as the "Atlanta Statement."

Out of these two conferences grew a third. This one differed from its predecessors in that it was bi-racial in character and composed of delegated individuals. The "Richmond Statement" was made by the Collaboration Committee of Negro and white delegates of the Durham and Atlanta Conferences meeting in Richmond, Virginia, June 16, 1943.

The demand for these statements has become so great that for the convenience of the public, the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, Inc., with the permission of the drafting Conferences has brought them together in this single pamphlet. They may be obtained, singly or in quantity, for five cents a copy.

A BASIS FOR INTERRACIAL COOPERATION AND DEVELOPMENT IN THE SOUTH*

A STATEMENT BY SOUTHERN NEGROES

The war has sharpened the issue of Negro-white relations in the United States, and particularly in the South. A result has been increased racial tensions, fears, and aggressions, and an opening up of the basic questions of racial segregation and discrimination, Negro minority rights, and democratic freedom, as they apply practically in Negro-white relations in the South. These issues are acute and threaten to become even more serious as they increasingly block, through the deeper fears aroused, common sense consideration for even elementary improvements in Negro status, and the welfare of the country as a whole.

With these problems in mind, we, a group of southern Negroes, realizing that the situation calls for both candor and wisdom, and in the belief that we voice the sentiments of many of the Negroes of the Nation as well as the South, take this means of recording our considered views of the issues before us.

(1) Our Nation is engaged in a world-wide struggle, the success of which, both in arms and ideals, is paramount and demands our first loyalty.

(2) Our loyalty does not, in our view, preclude consideration now of problems and situations that handicap the working out of internal improvements in race relations essential to our full contribution to the war effort, and of the inevitable problems of post-war reconstruction, especially in the South where we reside.

(3) The South, with its twenty-five million people, one-third of whom are Negroes, presents a unique situation, not only because of the size of the Negro population but because of the legal and customary patterns of race relations which are invariably and universally associated with racial discriminations. We recognize the strength and age of these patterns.

We are fundamentally opposed to the principle and practice of compulsory segregation in our American society, whether of races or classes or creeds, however, we regard it as both sensible and timely to address ourselves now to the current problems of racial discrimination and neglect, and to ways in which we may cooperate in the advancement of programs aimed at the sound improvement of race relations within the democratic framework.

(4) We regard it as unfortunate that the simple efforts to correct obvious social and economic injustices continue, with such considerable popular support, to be interpreted as the predatory ambition of irresponsible Negroes to invade the privacy of family life.

(5) We have the courage and faith to believe, however, that it is possible to evolve in the South a way of life, consistent with the principles for which we as a Nation are fighting throughout the world, that will free us all, white and Negro alike, from want, and from throttling fears.

POLITICAL AND CIVIL RIGHTS

"1. We regard the ballot as a safeguard of democracy. Any discrimination against citizens in the exercise of the voting privilege, on account of race or poverty, is detrimental to the freedom of these citizens and to the integrity of the State. We therefore record ourselves as urging now:

a. The abolition of the poll tax as a prerequisite to voting.

---

*Statement of Negro leaders attending Southern Conference on Race Relations, Durham, N. C., October 20, 1942.

b. The abolition of the white primary.

c. The abolition of all forms of discriminatory practices, evasions of the law, and intimidations of citizens seeking to exercise their right of franchise.

2. Exclusion of Negroes from jury service because of race has been repeatedly declared unconstitutional. This practice we believe can and should be discontinued now.

3. a. Civil rights include personal security against abuses of police power by white officers of the law. These abuses, which include wanton killings, and almost routine beatings of Negroes, whether they be guilty or innocent of an offense, should be stopped now, not only out of regard for the safety of Negroes, but of common respect for the dignity and fundamental purpose of the law.

b. It is the opinion of this group that the employment of Negro police will enlist the full support of Negro citizens in control of lawless elements of their own group.

4. In the public carriers and terminals, where segregation of the races is currently made mandatory by law as well as by established custom, it is the duty of Negro and white citizens to insist that these provisions be equal in kind and quality and in character of maintenance.

5. Although there has been, over the years, a decline in lynchings, the practice is still current in some areas of the South, and substantially, even if indirectly, defended by resistance to Federal legislation designed to discourage the practice. We ask that the States discourage this fascistic expression by effective enforcement of present or of new laws against this crime by apprehending and punishing parties participating in this lawlessness.

If the States are unable, or unwilling to do this, we urge the support of all American citizens who believe in law and order in securing Federal legislation against lynching.

6. The interests and securities of Negroes are involved directly in many programs of social planning and administration; in the emergency rationing, wage and rent control programs. We urge the use of qualified Negroes on these boards, both as a means of intelligent representation and a realistic aid to the functioning of these bodies.

INDUSTRY AND LABOR

"Continuing opposition to the employment of Negroes in certain industries appears to proceed from (1) the outdated notions of an economy of scarcity, inherited from an industrial age when participation in the productive enterprises was a highly competitive privilege; (2) the effects of enemy propaganda designed to immobilize a large number of potentially productive workers in the American war effort; (3) the age-old prejudices from an era when the economic system required a labor surplus which competed bitterly within its own ranks for the privilege of work; (4) the established custom of reserving technical processes to certain racial groups; and (5) craft monopolies which have restricted many technical skills to a few workers.

Our collective judgment regarding industrial opportunities for Negroes may be summarized as follows:

1. The only tenable basis of economic survival and development for Negroes is inclusion in unskilled, semi-skilled and skilled branches of work in the industries or occupations of the region to the extent that they are equally capable. Circumstances will vary so as to make impossible and impracticable any exact numerical balance, but the principles enunciated by the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee are regarded by us as sound and economically essential.
2. There should be the same pay for the same work.
3. Negro workers should seek opportunities for collective bargaining and security through membership in labor organizations. Since there can be no security for white workers if Negroes are unorganized and vice versa, labor unions of white workers should seek the organization of Negro workers, on a fair and equal basis.

4. We deplore the practice of those labor unions which bar Negroes from membership, or otherwise discriminate against them, since such unions are working against the best interest of the labor movement. We hold that only those labor unions which admit Negroes to membership and participation on a fair and democratic basis should be eligible for the benefits of the National Labor Relations Board, Railway Labor Act, State Labor Relations Acts and other protective labor legislation.
5. It is the duty of local, state and federal agencies to insist upon and enforce provisions for the industrial training of Negroes equal in quality and kind with that of other citizens. We believe, further, that Negroes should have equal opportunity in training programs carried on by industries and by labor organizations.
6. We urge Negro representation on regional organizations concerned with the welfare of workers.
7. We regard the wage-and-job-freezing order of the War Manpower Commission as holding the seeds of a distinct disadvantage to Negroes and other marginal workers. Most of these workers are now employed in the lowest-income job brackets. The "freeze" order can remove the opportunity for economic advancement. There is as yet no assurance that under existing circumstances the War Manpower Commission can deal more equitably by the Negro in the future than it has in the past.
8. We are convinced that the South's economic and cultural development can be accelerated by increasing the purchasing power and skills of Negro workers.

SERVICE OCCUPATIONS

"Any realistic estimate of the occupational situation of Negroes supports the view that Negroes will be employed in greatest proportions for a long time in service occupations. We see, however, possibilities of making of these fields scientifically guided areas in which training and organization will play a greater part in bringing about results mutually beneficial to employer and employee. We believe that greater service will be rendered and greater good will be engendered in the service fields if the following principles are observed:

1. More thorough training should be provided workers who plan to enter the service field, but the reward of the job and treatment on the job should be such as to make the workers feel that their training is justified. Opportunity should be given the service worker to advance through the opening up of additional opportunities.
2. A wholesome environment, living accommodations, food, uniforms and rest rooms, all of an approved standard, should be provided service workers.
3. Opportunity should be given the service worker to live, after his stipulated hours of work, as an individual undisturbed in his private life by the whims and caprices of his employers.
4. In view of the strides made by labor in general, while the service worker's lot has remained about the same, service workers should be organized into unions with recognized affiliations.*
5. Service workers should be included in the provisions for old age insurance, unemployment compensation, workmen's compensation, the wage and hour act, and other benefits of Social Security legally provided to workers of other categories.

We believe that these provisions will help to insure some intelligent service and wholesome loyalty (which will improve both the quality of labor and personal relations) in service occupations.

EDUCATION

"As equal opportunity for all citizens is the very foundation of the democratic faith, and of the Christian ethic which gave birth to the ideal of democratic living, it is imperative that every measure possible be taken to insure an equality of education to Negroes, and, indeed to all underprivileged peoples.

*In the present hysteria of many housewives who are losing poorly paid servants to better paying war industries, it seems desirable to emphasize that this proposal bears no relation to the fantastic and probably Axis inspired rumors of so-called "Eleanor Clubs."

1. Basic to improvement in Negro education is better schools, which involves expenditures by States of considerably more funds for the Negro schools. This group believes that a minimum requirement now is (a) equalization of salaries of white and Negro teachers on the basis of equal preparation and experience; (b) an expanded school building program for Negro schools designed to overcome the present racial disparity in physical facilities; this program to begin as soon as building materials are available; (c) revision of the school program in terms of the social setting, vocational needs and marginal cultural characteristics of the Negro children; and (d) the same length of school term for all children in local communities. Our growing knowledge of the effect of environment upon the intelligence and social adjustment of children, in fact leads us to believe that to insure equality of educational opportunity it is not enough to provide for the under-privileged child, of whatever race, the same opportunities provided for those on superior levels of familial, social, and economic life. We feel it a function of Government to assure equalization far beyond the mere expenditure of equivalent funds for salaries and the like.

2. The education of Negroes in the South has reached the point at which there is increased demand for graduate and professional training. This group believes that this training should be made available equally for white and Negro eligible students in terms defined by the United States Supreme Court in the decision on the case of Gaines versus the University of Missouri.

3. Where it is established that States cannot sustain the added cost of equalization, Federal funds should be made available to overcome the differentials between white and Negro facilities and between southern and national standards.

4. It is the belief of this group that the special problems of Negro education make demands for intelligent and sympathetic representation of these problems on school boards by qualified persons of the Negro race.

5. The education of Negro youth can be measurably aided by the use of Negro enforcement officers of truancy and compulsory education laws.

AGRICULTURE

"The South is the most rural section of the Nation, and Negroes, who constitute 33 per cent of its population, are responsible for an important share of the agricultural production on southern farms.

We recognize that the South is economically handicapped and that many of its disabilities are deeply rooted in agricultural maladjustments. To win the war, there is need for increased production of food, fibre and fats. In the present organization of agriculture, Negroes are a large part of the sharecropper and tenant group and a great majority of the rural Negro workers are in this class. Circumstances deny the Negro farmer sufficient opportunity to make his full contribution as a citizen. We suggest the following measures as means of increasing the production of the area, raising the status and spirits of Negro farmers, and of improving the region's contribution to the total war effort.

1. Establishment of sufficient safeguards in the system of tenancy to promote the development of land and home ownership and more security on the land, by:
   a. Written contracts
   b. Longer lease terms
   c. Higher farm wages for day laborers
   d. Balanced farm programs, including food and feed crops for present tenants and day laborers.
2. Adequate Federal assistance to Negro farmers should be provided on an equitable basis. The war effort can be materially aided if adequate provisions are made now for the interpretation of governmental policies to rural Negroes.
3. The equitable distribution of funds for teaching agriculture in the Negro land grant colleges to provide agricultural research and experimentation for Negro farmers.

4. The appointment of qualified Negroes to governmental planning and policy making bodies concerned with the common farmer, and the membership of Negro farmers in general farmers' organizations and economic cooperatives, to provide appropriate representation and to secure maximum benefits to our common wealth.

MILITARY SERVICE

"We recognize and welcome the obligation of every citizen to share in the military defense of the nation and we seek, along with the privilege of offering our lives, the opportunity of other citizens of full participation in all branches of the military service, and of advancement in responsibility and rank according to ability.

Negro soldiers, in line of military duty and in training in the South, encounter particularly acute racial problems in transportation and in recreation and leave areas. They are frequently mistreated by the police. We regard these problems as unnecessary and destructive to morale.

SOCIAL WELFARE AND HEALTH

"1. We believe that some of the more acute problems of Negro health, family and personal disorganization are a reflection of deficiencies in economic opportunity, but that social and health services for Negroes will continue to be necessary in considerable amounts even with improvement of their economic status. As a means of reducing the mortality and public contagion resulting from inadequacies of medical attention and health knowledge, this group believes that minimum health measures for Negroes would include the following:

a. Mandatory provisions that a proportion of the facilities in all public hospitals be available for Negro patients;

b. That Negro doctors be either included on the staff for services to Negro patients, according to their special qualifications, or permitted as practitioners the same privilege and courtesy as other practitioners in the public hospitals;

c. That Negro public health nurses and social workers be more extensively used in both public and private organizations.

2. We advocate the extension of slum clearance and erection of low-cost housing as a general as well as special group advantage. The Federal government has set an excellent precedent here with results that offer much promise for the future.

It is a wicked notion that the struggle of the Negro for citizenship is a struggle against the best interests of the Nation. To urge such a doctrine, as many are doing, is to preach disunity and to deny the most elementary principles of American life and government.

The effect of the war has been to make the Negro, in a sense, the symbol and protagonist of every other minority in America and in the world at large. Local issues in the South, while admittedly holding many practical difficulties, must be met wisely and courageously if this Nation is to become a significant political entity in a new international world. The correction of these problems is not only a moral matter, but a practical necessity in winning the war and in winning the peace. Herein rests the chance to reveal our greatest weakness or our greatest strength."

STATEMENT OF CONFERENCE OF WHITE SOUTHERNERS ON RACE RELATIONS*

Atlanta, Georgia
April 8, 1943

In October, 1942, a representative group of Southern Negro leaders met in Durham, N. C., and issued a statement in which they addressed themselves "to the current problems of racial discrimination and neglect, and to ways in which we may cooperate in the advancement of programs aimed at the sound improvement of race relations, within the democratic framework."

Their statement is so frank and courageous, so free from any suggestion of threat and ultimatum, and at the same time shows such good will, that we gladly agree to cooperate.

We do not attempt to make here anything like a complete reply to the questions raised nor to offer solutions for all the vexing problems. We hope, however, to point the pathway for future cooperative efforts and to give assurance of our sincere good will and desire to cooperate in any sound program aimed at the improvement of race relations.

These Negro leaders rightly placed emphasis in their statement on discrimination in the administration of our laws on purely racial grounds. We are sensitive to this charge and admit that it is essentially just. From the Potomac to the Rio Grande there are some ten million Negroes. While all citizens are governed by the same laws, it is recognized that Negroes have little voice in the making and enforcement of the laws under which they must live. They are largely dependent upon the will of the majority group for the safety of life and property, education and health, and their general economic condition. This is a violation of the spirit of democracy. No Southerner can logically dispute the fact that the Negro, as an American citizen, is entitled to his civil rights and economic opportunities.

The race problem in any Southern community is complicated by our economic limitations. The factors which have kept the South a tributary section have also kept it poor and lacking in sufficient industry to develop and to provide enough jobs and enough public funds for every public need. Yet the only justification offered for those laws which have for their purpose the separation of the races is that they are intended to minister to the welfare and integrity of both races. There has been widespread and inexcusable discrimination in the administration of these laws. The white Southerner has an obligation to interest himself in the legitimate aspirations of the Negro. This means correcting the discrimination between the races in the allocation of school funds; in the number and quality of schools, and in the salaries of teachers. In public travel where the law demands a separation of the races, primary justice and a simple sense of fair play demand the facilities for safety, comfort and health should be equal. The distribution of public utilities and public benefits, such as sewers, water, housing, street and sidewalk paving, playgrounds, public health and hospital facilities should come to the Negro upon the basis of population and need.

It is recognized that there is often practical discrimination by some peace officers and in some courts in the treatment of Negro prisoners and in the abrogation of their civil rights. There is no such discrimination incorporated in the laws of any of the Southern states. False arrests, brutal beatings and other evils must be stopped.

In the economic field, unquestionably procedures should be undertaken to establish fully the right to receive equal pay for equal work. To do otherwise works a wrong to our entire economic life and to our self respect. With so large a proportion of our wage-earning population belonging to the minority race, if we cannot plan for a well-trained, well-employed and prosperous Negro population, the economic future of the South is hopeless.

*Conference of White Southerners on Race Relations, Atlanta, Georgia, April 8, 1943.

Most of the Negroes in the South are on farms and in rural communities. Failure to provide for them all the facilities for improving agricultural practices through schools, county agents, and supervision holds back all of the South. Fair wages, longer tenures of leases and increased opportunities for farm ownership are also necessary

All men who believe in justice, who love peace and who believe in the meaning of this country are under the necessity of working together to draw off from the body of human society the poison of racial antagonism. This is one of the disruptive forces which unless checked will ultimately disturb and threaten the stability of the nation. Either to deny or to ignore the increased tension between the white and the colored races would be a gesture of insincerity.

That there are acute and intricate problems associated with two races living side by side in the South cannot be denied. But these problems can be solved and will ultimately disappear if they are brought out into an atmosphere of justice and good will. If we approach them with contempt in one group and with resentment in the other group, then we work on hopeless terms. The solution of these problems can be found only in men of both races who are known to be men of determined good will. The ultimate solution will be found in evolutionary methods and not in ill-founded revolutionary movements which promise immediate solutions.

We agree with the Durham Conference that it is "unfortunate that the simple efforts to correct obvious social and economic injustices continue, with such considerable popular support, to be interpreted as the predatory ambition of irresponsible Negroes to invade the privacy of family life." We agree also that "it is a wicked notion that the struggle by the Negro for citizenship is a struggle against the best interests of the nation. To urge such a doctrine, as many are doing, is to preach disunity, and to deny the most elementary principles of American life and government."

It is futile to imagine or to assert that the problem will solve itself. The need is for a positive program arrived at in an atmosphere of understanding, cooperation and a mutual respect.

RESOLUTIONS OF THE COLLABORATION COMMITTEE*

Richmond, Virginia

June 16, 1943

This is a day of great differences, strong feelings, and epochal conflicts throughout the world. Yet the world's greatest need and hope is to find common ground for universal action and balanced harmony among all peoples. Manifestly, such a goal must be reached through cooperative approximation to the largest measure of agreement in line with the largest number of values and the largest number of people.

We face, therefore, the double crisis of standing firm for the conservation and preservation of human rights; yet to seek these ends by the way of peace and planning rather than by conflict and revolution.

In America, and particularly in the South, we face the problem of readjustments to meet the demands of present and post-war conditions with reference to the Negro and the future development of a great region of the Nation. This, exclusive of the war, is the great crisis of the South and Nation.

This is the problem of two great peoples caught up in the midst of transition between the powerful heritage of the past and the mighty pull of the future. For here is the white South, a great people often doing little things and good people often doing bad things. And here is the Negro South, caught as always between the upper and nether millstones of conflicting forces and also paying the price of extraordinary transition from level to level of cultural achievement, and needing plenty of understanding and cooperation. And here is the white South inexorably conditioned by cultural complexes, suffering terribly, too, and needing sympathy and help as few peoples have ever needed in the annals of man. And, even more important, the two, white South and black South, are part and parcel of the Nation, whose people need scarcely less than the two regional peoples the sense of time and wisdom.

The war has sharpened the issue of Negro-white relations in the United States, and particularly in the South. A result has been increased racial tensions, fears, and aggressions, and an opening up of the basic questions of racial segregation and discrimination, Negro minority rights, and democratic freedom, as they apply practically in Negro-white relations in the South. These issues are acute and threaten to become even more serious as they increasingly block, through the deeper fears aroused, common sense consideration for even elementary improvements in Negro status and the welfare of the country as a whole.

This is a rare challenge to the leadership of the South: to the white leadership to find new ways of cooperation and to justify increased confidence of the Negro leadership in the white South; to the Negro leadership, to sense the difficulties involved and to meet increasing demands, without slowing down their essential efforts.

As evidence of the promise of this leadership, two recent Southern conferences on race relations, one at Durham, under the auspices of Negro leadership, and one in Atlanta under the auspices of white leadership, have blazed new trails. As a follow-up of these and with the above problems and backgrounds in mind, we, a group of Southern whites and Negroes, representing both the Durham and Atlanta groups, meeting as a collaboration committee at Richmond, Virginia, June 16, 1943, and following the general trend of the Atlanta group, urge the general adaptation of the Durham statement entitled "A Basis for Interracial Cooperation and Development in the South," which has had extraordinary nation-wide endorsement.

*Joint committee of representatives of the Durham and Atlanta Conferences.

The framers of this covenant, realizing that the situation calls for both candor and wisdom, have included adequate and searching analysis of the principal issues involved, duly interpreted in their proper perspective. The problems so featured include political and civil rights, industry and labor, service occupations, education, agriculture, military service, social welfare and health.

In the area of political and civil rights: the essential problems featured were those of franchise and the ballot, jury service, personal security, services in public carriers, the elimination of violence, within and without the law, the elimination of lynching, and the employment of an increasingly larger number of Negroes in the public service.

In the area of work opportunities: the increased training for all skilled, semi-skilled, and unskilled labor, and opportunity for employment; the readaptation of labor union policies both for the best interests of Negroes and labor unions; the problems of dual standards of pay; support of, but guarding against discrimination in, local, state, and federal procedures; special problems of service workers and standards of living.

In the area of education: equalized opportunities in all aspects but especially including institutions of higher learning, professional training, and equal salaries.

In the area of agriculture: adequate opportunity for the Negro farmer, including a sound system of tenancy, adequate state and federal assistance, increased opportunity for farm ownership, fair farm wages, and the wider employment of Negro farm and home agents.

In the area of military service: along with the obligation to serve, the opportunity for full participation and advancement in the war activities and a continuing better adjustment of unsatisfactory situations.

In the area of social welfare and health: adequate provisions for safeguarding the public health, for training physicians and nurses, and for their employment. Also, the erection of low-cost housing and other facilities for improving community life.

We recognize now the importance of affirmative action, without which we shall fall far short of our hopes and possibilities. To this end, we direct that the continuing committee, as appointed by the two groups now consolidated in this larger collaboration committee, be charged with the responsibility for working out methods and practical means of approach. We urge especially that efforts be begun to prepare the post-war world for a wise and successful reception of our returning soldiers and to prepare both our soldiers and the people for attitudes and procedures adequate to carry the great load of post-war needs. In all these, we urge the public to a new sense of the meaning of these needs as they accord with our professed principles of Christianity and democracy.

S R C BOARD OF DIRECTORS MEETS

Report of Special Meeting

Important business was transacted and the work of the Southern Regional Council was greatly facilitated by a special meeting of the Board of Directors of the Council in Atlanta on April 28. The meeting was called by Dr. Howard W. Odum, President of the Council. The Board meeting was preceded by a meeting of the Executive Committee. The Executive Committee formulated a number of recommendations for presentation to the Board. The major actions taken by the Board are summarized below.

Standing Committees

Under the authority granted by Article V, Section 4, of the Council by-laws, the Board created the following standing committees: Committee on Membership, Committee on Finance, Committee on Public Relations, Committee on Publications, and Committee on Fellows. The Chairman was instructed to appoint the committees. The complete personnel of the committees will be published in the next issue of THE SOUTHERN FRONTIER.

Admission of New Members

Since the by-laws provide that members can be elected only by the members or by the Board of Directors, and since the Board of Directors, at its meeting just after the charter meeting in February, did not complete the details of a machinery for admitting new members in the intervals between meetings, the Board passed the following resolution defining the duties of the Committee on Membership: "The Committee on Membership shall have general supervision over questions pertaining to the election of members, shall receive nominations and requests for membership, and shall authorize the Executive Director or the Secretary to extend an invitation to membership to such persons as the Committee may approve, all such elections being subject to confirmation at the next meeting of members or of the Board of Directors." The Council is now able to enlarge its membership by bringing in some of the numerous persons who have been nominated by other members or who have requested the privilege of membership. The Committee on Membership will bring to the annual meeting in October some recommendations on the question of limited versus unlimited membership.

New Directors

The Board elected directors to fill three vacancies occasioned by the election of Dr. Odum to the presidency, the inability of one member to serve, and the death of Dr. J. R. E. Lee. It also voted to enlarge its membership in order to give better representation to several states. New directors who have already accepted election are: Charles W. Anderson, Jr., attorney and member of the Kentucky legislature, Louisville; O. D. Duncan, Department of Sociology and Rural Life, Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College, Stillwater; Z. Alexander Looby, attorney, Nashville; Walter J. Matherly, Dean of the School of Business Administration, University of Florida, Gainesville; Bishop Arthur J. Moore, Atlanta; N. C. Newbold, Department of Public Instruction, Raleigh; and Thomas S. Staples, Dean of Hendrix College, Conway, Arkansas.

Proposed Changes in the By-Laws

The Board voted to recommend to the members of the Council that they amend the by-laws so as to permit the Executive Director and the Associate Executive Director to be members of the Executive Committee. At present the executives cannot be members of the Executive Committee. Mr. Leonard Haas pointed out that their presence is essential to the functioning of the Executive Committee and that it is in keeping with common practice and in the interest of efficiency for them to be members of the Committee. He also pointed out that the laws governing corporations prohibit any officer or employee from voting on matters affecting his own personal interests.

At present the Executive Committee has eleven members, seven elected and four ex-officio, and a quorum must consist of four of the seven elected members. Hence it is possible to have seven persons present, three elected and four ex-officio, and

RESOLUTIONS

At its meeting in Atlanta on April 28, 1944, the Board of Directors of the Southern Regional Council unanimously adopted the following resolutions and voted that they be made public immediately.

1. The Race Issue in Politics

In the heat of current political campaigns in various parts of the South, the race issue has been raised by certain candidates or by their promoters. Vicious rumors have been circulated, and the spurious issues of "white supremacy," "social equality," and the like have been dragged forth in an attempt to arouse the passions and prejudices of voters.

We condemn all such tactics as unfair and destructive of the spirit of unity and cooperation which we need now as never before, and we appeal to all good citizens to consider carefully whether those persons who use such tactics are worthy of public trust.

2. The White Primary

The Supreme Court of the United States has ruled that the exclusion of Negroes from the Texas Democratic primaries is a violation of the Fifteenth Amendment to the Constitution. The Court has simply recognized the fact that primaries are effective instruments of government, and that the exclusion of the Negro voters from Democratic primaries in some of the Southern states is equivalent to denying them the right to vote on account of race.

This decision has far-reaching consequences, and we appeal to the people of the South to make these consequences positive and constructive rather than negative and destructive.

We deplore the statements of political leaders and others indicating a determination to disregard or nullify the decision of the Supreme Court, and we call on all fair-minded citizens of the South to respect the letter and the spirit of the Court's decision. Let us all, white and Negro, be calm and wise. Let us strive to serve the ends of justice and good government for all of the people of the South.

To allow Negro citizens to participate in the government under which they live

Editorial

Most of us have had the experience of dreading a trip to the dentist, or an operation which we know has to come, or an honest coming-to-grips with some personal moral problem. We worry, we procrastinate, we torment ourselves with terrible forebodings. Finally we get the thing over with in one way or another, and when we see that we are going to pull through all right, we say, "It wasn't so bad after all. What was I afraid of?"

Too many white Southerners are still in the worrying stage in their reaction to certain social issues which need to be met. Take the question of Negro voting in Democratic primaries, for example. They postpone it, they evade it, and when they begin to see that perhaps the thing is bound to come they work themselves into a frenzy by imagining that the whole social order is about to crumble. Most likely their fears are groundless, for they are based upon the very shaky assumptions that (1) every Negro of voting age will immediately rush to the ballot box and that (2) Negroes will vote as a solid racial bloc.

There is absolutely no evidence that Negroes will make a mass march on the ballot box. Fortunately or unfortunately, they have that same inertia and indifference toward political participation which white people have. A recent study in Virginia showed that although 32,000 Negroes paid their poll taxes in 1943, about 13,000 of them did not even bother to register. In Atlanta, in spite of the Georgia law which lowered the voting age to 18 (no poll tax is required until the age of 21) and in spite of an intensive campaign by Negro organizations to increase the registration of Negroes, the Fulton County Registrar announced at the close of registration that Negroes made up about 7 per cent of the total number of registered voters. Negroes form 31 per cent of the population of Atlanta. Whatever happens in this matter of Negro voting we can be quite certain that it is not going to be a sudden "revolution" in the political rights of Negroes in the South.

Neither is there any good evidence that Negroes will vote as a solid bloc. White people are likely to overestimate the extent of Negro unity, perhaps because they feel that if they were in the Negroes' shoes they would stick together. As a matter of fact, Negroes divide upon political and other issues in much the same way as white people do. The Negro banker is likely to have more in common with the white banker than with the Negro janitor. The nearest the Negro will come to a solid race front will be to show a tendency in the long run to support his "friends" and to defeat his "enemies," but, like other voters, he will frequently have difficulty in deciding who is "friend" and who is "enemy."

At any rate, we shall find that after the dust has settled the earth remains. We shall find that the right to vote, whether that right is exercised to the fullest or not, gives a tremendous boost to the morale and civic responsibility of the Negro. We shall find that the surest way to rid the South of demagoguery and to take the "race issue" out of politics is to take the Negro voter into the fold and train him to use the ballot intelligently. And no doubt we shall say—unless we are so enamored of our worries that we refuse to part with them—"It wasn't so bad after all. What were we afraid of?"

The FEPC and Negro Manpower

The Region VII Office of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice has satisfactorily adjusted several cases which involved discrimination in training against Negroes. Two of those cases arose in Jacksonville, Florida, where the training facilities for Negroes were not comparable to those for whites, and these cases were adjusted by an arrangement that a training school for Negroes which will be adequate to accommodate 600 students will be established immediately in that city.

The national policy with respect to training is set forth in Executive Order No. 9346, in part, as follows:

> . . . The Committee (FEPC) shall also recommend to the Chairman of the War Manpower Commission appropriate measures for bringing about the full utilization and training of manpower in and for war production without discrimination because of race, creed, color, or national origin.

As a result of recommendations made by the committee, on August 2, 1943, an Operating Agreement was entered into between FEPC and WMC. There it is provided:

> Procedures shall be established to assure that equal training facilities and opportunities are available to all trainees and prospective trainees without regard to race, creed, color, or national origin. Special procedures shall be established where, because of State or local laws, special training facilities are required for trainees solely because of race.

Thereafter, on September 3, 1943, the WMC issued an instruction to all its regional offices in which it is provided that such offices "shall take steps to have the discriminatory features" removed from training programs. Since, however, State laws generally require separate facilities for education in this region, it has been necessary for the Regional WMC and Regional FEPC to take this fact into account in devising procedures by which the national policy may be effectuated.

The Regional WMC has agreed that, as a matter of policy, it will "make every effort to provide training courses for qualified Negro applicants in all occupations for which training is being given (to whites)." If such facilities are absent, qualified Negro applicants are to be informed by the United States Employment Service offices to which they apply that immediate efforts will be made to provide training. Moreover, under no conditions are qualified Negro applicants to be regarded or classified as ineligible because of a present lack of training facilities since, upon receiving information from a USES office that training facilities are inadequate in a particular area, the Regional WMC will take immediate steps to provide training courses for all qualified applicants.

The question naturally arises as to what extent facilities must be provided for Negroes in courses similar to those being given to whites, in order to assure that discrimination in training is not present in an area where separate facilities are required by law. The WMC has determined that the minimum facilities which must be provided for Negro trainees shall bear the same ratio to the total number of Negro eligibles. Thus, in an instance where there are 80 white and 30 Negro eligibles for training, and facilities have been provided for 40 whites, or one-half of the total eligibles, at least one-half of the Negro eligibles must be provided with similar training facilities. This is not to be construed, however, as the test by which to determine the maximum number of Negroes to be trained. On the contrary, it is the viewpoint of both the Regional WMC and the Regional FEPC that qualified applicants of all races should be trained to the maximum extent that funds are available and that the above test should serve only as a guide below which the training of Negroes shall not fall.

Negro leaders, teachers, and those in charge of vocational training facilities for Negroes should make sure that eligible Negroes take all necessary steps to receive training for war work. In the event that they are unsuccessful, and feel that they have been discriminated against because of their race in either their efforts to secure training or to secure employment after being trained, they may make their complaints to the Regional FEPC at Rooms 524-7 Ten Forsyth Building, Atlanta 3, Georgia.

still not have a quorum. The Board voted to recommend a change in the by-laws so as to permit any six members of the Committee to constitute a quorum. The by-laws can be amended only by members, and these proposed amendments will be submitted to the annual meeting of members in October.

Two Statements

Feeling that the Supreme Court decision in the Texas primary case and the current efforts of certain political candidates to stir up racial issues presented a challenge to the Council, the Executive Committee approved two resolutions and recommended their passage by the Board. The Board unanimously adopted the statements and voted to give them immediate publicity. The statements are reprinted on the front page of this issue. They were given rather wide publicity in Southern newspapers, were published in the New York Times of April 30, and were mentioned in the May 15 issue of Life.

Cooperating Organizations

The by-laws provide that organizations having aims similar to those of the Council may become affiliates of the Council on such conditions as the Board may prescribe. It was pointed out in the discussion that since the structure of the Council is based on individual membership, affiliation of other organizations in the technical sense would involve legal and structural problems which could be met only by amending the charter of the Council. The Board therefore adopted the following resolution: "That the relation between the Southern Regional Council and all state and local organizations having aims and purposes similar to those of the council be informal and cooperative, the details to be worked out by the two Executive Directors." The Executive Directors have begun to compile a list of cooperating organizations.

Directors Present

Directors present were: Florida: Mrs. Henry Havens, G. D. Rogers; Georgia: L. D. Milton, Josephine Wilkins, Mrs. Grace Hamilton, Ryland Knight, T. James McNamara, R. L. Russell, Forrester B. Jaffe, Luther P. Jackson, J. Garland Pollard, Jr.

The anti-poll tax bill is apparently dead for the present session of Congress. After a move to invoke cloture had been defeated by a vote of 44 to 36, the Senate shelved the bill.

Southern Baptists and the Negro

At the recent meeting of Southern Baptists in Atlanta, the Social Service Commission of the Convention recommended that Baptist preachers and churches work for the "defense and protection of the civil rights" of Negroes.

The recommendations of the Social Service Commission stated:

"In view of the increasing acuteness of the race problem within the nation, and especially in the South, and the danger which crouches at our doors that we shall be guilty of un-Christian attitudes and actions, we recommend that the convention reaffirm and lay upon the hearts of the Baptists of the South the resolutions adopted at the 1941 convention:

"1. That we reaffirm our deep and abiding interest in the welfare of all races of mankind, and particularly our interest in the welfare and advancement of the Negro race, which lives in our midst to the number of some 10 or 11 millions.

"2. That this convention would urge the pastors and churches affiliated with the convention, and all our Baptist people, to cultivate and maintain the finest Christian spirit and attitude toward the Negro race, to do everything possible for the welfare of the race, both economic and religious, and for the defense and protection of all civil rights of the race."

Concerning the Supreme Court decision in the Texas primary case, the Commission's report said: "The issue will be between establishing a qualification for suffrage that will apply to white and colored alike and the invention of some nullifying device that will deprive an otherwise qualified Negro from voting because he is a Negro. What will be the course of Christian men and women? . . . Let it be urged again that we who are Christ's must exercise the utmost care to find the Christian thing to say and the Christian thing to do. We cannot achieve good by injustice."

Dr. J. B. Lawrence, Executive Secretary of the Baptist Home Mission Board, in an address before the Baptist assembly, said: "Southern Baptists have a responsibility to the Negro which can be met only by knowing their needs as a race and meeting these needs with a well devised program. No segmental approach to this task will suffice."

Resolutions

is to give democracy a chance in the South. To deny the vote to qualified Negro citizens is inconsistent with the American ideal of justice and equality before the law. The sooner we recognize these simple facts, the better off we shall be. We can not honestly wage a war for freedom and democracy in foreign lands when we deny to our own Negro citizens the rights and privileges which are justly theirs.

A Southern Business Man's Opinion

Mr. Alexander Fitz Hugh, of Vicksburg, Mississippi, has kindly given his permission to reprint the following excerpts from a letter which he wrote to Dr. Howard W. Odum.—Editors.

I note a growing desire on the part of the people to hear the views of all men who give them the facts.

* * *

I think that one trouble in the South has been that the masses of the people have formed their opinions of the economic and social questions that affect the section chiefly from their local and state leaders who are supplicants for votes. Sometimes what they have gotten from such leaders has been good, but often it has not been good, and I think it is an encouraging sign that the people are beginning to want the facts, which as you recall Jefferson said if you will give them they will make wise decisions, and the truth, which Jesus of Nazareth said will make them free.

* * *

The agitation about discrimination in freight rates is exaggerated, and is largely inconsequential. In all of the discussions of the Southern governors about the industrialization of the South, I have never heard them give consideration to the vital problem, namely: What is going to be the position of the Negro in such a movement? Forty-nine per cent of the population of Mississippi are Negroes, and about thirty-five per cent of the population of Alabama and Georgia are Negroes. The highly developed industries of the North and East have had the advantage of labor of European origin which has had generations of industrial background and experience. When we remember that the experience of the Negroes has been almost entirely agricultural or work in the heavy industries, and the experience of the poorer whites little different, I think it is remarkable that Southern industry has made the progress that it has. The paramount problem in all Southern industry is what place the Negro laborer is going to fill in it rather than the question of freight rates. Industries make freight rates rather than freight rates make industries.

* * *

I find an awakening interest on the part of the people in the problems of the biracial economy, and this is definitely encouraging.

Miss Margaret Fisher Joins SRC Staff

The Southern Regional Council is happy to announce that Miss Margaret Fisher, of the Atlanta regional office of the War Manpower Commission, is joining the staff of the Council on June 1 as Secretary of Public Relations.

By training, experience, and temperament, Miss Fisher is admirably equipped to make a significant contribution to the program of the Council. Following a period of business experience in the field of insurance, she did personnel and management work for a number of years in the Legal Division of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. She then went to the War Manpower Commission, where she has done industrial relations work since 1942. There her main task was to develop a regional program for the integration of women and minority groups into industrial employment in the South. This work has not only given her a first-hand acquaintance with industrialists but has brought her into contact with various public and civic groups in the South. She has, for example, helped to secure the cooperation of merchants in arranging evening shopping hours for the convenience of war workers, stimulated women's organizations to set up recreational programs for in-migrants, and encouraged labor groups to broaden the participation of women and colored workers in unions. Thus her wide contacts have given her a first-hand picture of what is going on in the Southeast in industrial and civic life.

In addition to this invaluable experience, Miss Fisher has qualities of personal charm, tact, persistence, and a sense of humor. One of her close friends has described her as "a liberal who has her feet on the ground."

Miss Fisher was born in North Carolina and received her college training at Greensboro Women's College. Gifted musically, she specialized in piano and voice and for several years did concert work as a contralto soloist. Then, as she puts it, "My whole pattern of life changed, for I knew that what I really wanted to do was to give my life to the building of a better South." She has retained her musical interests, however, and she will continue as soloist with the choir at St. Luke's Church in Atlanta, where her lovely contralto voice has been an inspiration to the congregation for the past seven years.

Lieutenant-General William S. Knudsen, War Department Production Chief, said in Nashville, Tennessee, recently, "We are capable of great production, but we have not reached top production yet." He added, "The South has demonstrated its industrial power, and there is no limit to what the South and the whole country can do. What we have done has not been miracles, it has been going to work and doing the job." On the question of America's future in the postwar period, General Knudsen commented, "We mustn't sell the hide until we've shot the bear."

In Kentucky

At a recent meeting sponsored by the Union for Democratic Action and the Louisville Committee of the Kentucky Council on Interracial Cooperation, various civic problems were discussed. Among the recommendations growing out of the meeting were the following:

That downtown stores be asked "to adjust their policy toward Negroes" and encourage instead of discourage Negro patronage.

That more Negroes be represented in the war housing units on the basis of need rather than population.

That the Louisville Railway Company be asked to employ Negroes as operators.

That training facilities be provided for Negro doctors and nurses.

That there be a minimum wage and hour law for domestic workers, and a city-wide educational campaign on domestic service problems.

That "some type of assurance against dismissal after the war be given the Negro who adjusts himself to industry."

That a Negro be named to the Louisville Board of Education.

An Institute of Race Relations

An Institute of Race Relations will be held at Fisk University, Nashville, Tennessee, July 3-21. The Institute will include the following areas of interest: Race and Racial Theories; Racial Aspects of Social Problems; Methods, Techniques and Community Planning; The Role of Personal Religion in Human Relations. Among the lecturers and consultants will be Will W. Alexander, formerly Director of Farm Security Administration, now Co-Director of the Race Relations Division of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, and member of the Board of Directors of the SRC; Fred L. Brownlee, General Secretary of the American Missionary Association; Edwin R. Embree, President of the Julius Rosenwald Fund; Ellsworth Faris, Emeritus Professor of Sociology, University of Chicago; Lester Granger, Executive Secretary of the National Urban League; Guy B. Johnson, Executive Director of SRC; Otto Klineberg, Professor of Psychology, Columbia University; Z. A. Looby, member of the legal staff of NAACP; Liston Pope Professor of Social Ethics, Yale University; Arthur Raper, Senior Social Science Analyst, United States Department of Agriculture; Robert Redfield, Dean of Division of Social Science and Professor of Anthropology, University of Chicago; Ira De A. Reid, Associate Director, SRC; T. Lynn Smith, Head of Department of Rural Sociology, Louisiana State University; Charles H. Thompson, Dean of Graduate School of Howard University and editor of the JOURNAL OF NEGRO EDUCATION, and Louis Wirth, Professor of Sociology, University of Chicago.

The Institute is under the auspices of the American Missionary Association, which is a Division of the Board of Home Missions of the Congregational and Christian Churches. Anyone wishing further information may write to the Institute of Social Sciences, Fisk University, Nashville 8, Tennessee.

An Alabama Statement

Just before the recent Democratic primary in Alabama, the following statement, which was signed by 400 leading white citizens, was made public. Judge Louise O. Charlton of Birmingham was influential in obtaining signatures endorsing the statement.

Fellow Citizens of Alabama:

We, the undersigned citizens of Alabama, are proud of the traditions of our great state and of the part that all its people are playing in this war. We are proud of the thousands of Alabama's young men and women who serve in all branches of our armed forces. Our industrial leaders, the working men and women of our state, the vast number of our farmers have a record of war service of which the entire nation can be proud.

American armed forces, among them the finest sons of Alabama, now await the signal for the invasion of fascist Europe. Now more than ever have we Alabamans a stake in keeping our war production in farm and factory uninterrupted. For this reason we view with patriotic alarm any effort to stir up racial strife and hatred among the people of Alabama.

We consider it our sacred obligation to Alabamans in the armed forces and to their fathers and mothers at home to protest the actions of those men and those newspapers which seek to disturb the present peaceful relations between the races, and divert the attention of Alabama from the cause of speedy victory.

It is our conviction that all papers, whether Negro or White, which incite race hatred, constitute a serious threat to Alabama's war production.

We especially deplore the injection of the race issue into Alabama's political campaign. We believe that those who resort to such tactics misjudge the people of Alabama and their devotion to the democratic faith and to the ideal of Christian brotherhood.

In the same patriotic "spirit of neighborliness" as the citizens of Dallas County evidenced in their condemnation of the Greensboro Watchman, we call upon patriotic citizens to condemn all efforts now being made by press and radio to arouse or stimulate race and religious hatred and antagonisms among our people, and to strengthen our common effort for a speedy victory and a lasting peace.

The American Council On Race Relations

A new national organization has been formed for the promotion of interracial adjustment and "full democracy." The organization will be known as the American Council on Race Relations, and will seek to develop a well-rounded program of research, popular education, assistance to local community organizations in meeting their interracial problems, and cooperation with other agencies in the interracial field. The officers of the Council will be Clarence E. Pickett, President, Charles H. Houston, Vice-President, Will W. Alexander, Vice-President and Treasurer, and Mrs. Mary Jane Grunsfeld, Secretary. The headquarters of the Council will be in Chicago.

What Do Negroes Ask of America?

Durham Conference States Their Case; Southern White Leaders Respond

Summaries by R. B. Eleazer

Of late numberless disturbing rumors have been floating about as to what Negroes are thinking and preparing to do in this hectic time of war. Most of these rumors, to be sure, are utterly absurd; some of them almost certainly were started by enemy agents with intent to make trouble. Nevertheless, many people have taken them seriously and have been genuinely disturbed by them. The question seems timely, therefore: What actually are the Negroes of America, especially those of the South, asking of the white majority?

The best answer yet given to that question—the fullest and the most authoritative—is embodied in the famous "Durham Statement" of October 20, 1942. This statement was formulated by a conference of 78 of the ablest Negro leaders from twelve Southern States, from Maryland to Texas—ministers, educators, social workers, business and professional men, labor leaders and editors. The signers represent as complete and responsible a cross section of Negro life and thought as it would be possible to find.

Recognizing that, for various reasons, there had recently been a serious growth of interracial tension, this group assembled not to increase the tension by militant protests and demands, but rather to relieve it as much as possible by a friendly, calm, and constructive discussion of the major issues involved. Their basic hope and confidence was thus expressed in the preamble to their statement:

"We have the courage and faith to believe that it is possible to evolve in the South a way of life, consistent with the principles for which we as a nation are fighting throughout the world, that will free us all, white and Negro alike, from want and from throttling fears."

Follows then an extended statement, dealing with practically every important problem involved in the situation, under the heads Political and Civil Rights, Industry and Labor, Service Occupations, Education, Agriculture, Military Service, and Social Welfare and Health. For the readers' convenience all important points of the statement are summarized below.

Political and Civil Rights

1. Naturally the group's first concern under this head was the suffrage. "The ballot," they say, "is the safeguard of democracy;" hence they hold that discrimination against any group in the exercise of the ballot is "detrimental to the freedom of these citizens and to the integrity of the State." They record themselves, therefore, as favoring abolition of the poll tax, the "white primary," and all other "forms of discriminatory practices, evasions and intimidations" by which citizens are denied their right of franchise.

2. The unconstitutional practice of excluding Negroes from jury service, the statement declares, should be discontinued at once.

3. Abuses of police power in the treatment of Negroes should be stopped, it is held, both "out of regard for the safety of Negroes and of common respect for the diginity and purpose of the law." In this connection the employment of Negro police is recommended.

4. In public carriers and terminals where segregation is mandatory by law and custom, it is held to be the duty of all citizens to insist that provisions for the two races shall be equal in kind and quality, as the law presumes they shall be.

5. The States are asked to take effective steps to eradicate completely the crime of lynching. Should they prove unable or unwilling to do so, popular support of a Federal anti-lynching law is urged.

6. Since the interests of Negroes are deeply involved in many of the programs of social welfare, it is urged that qualified Negroes be used on the boards administering such programs.

Industry and Labor

1. Opportunity for Negroes to work at all levels of industry for which they are equally capable is regarded as "the only tenable basis of economic survival and development" for the race.

2. Negro workers, it is held, should receive equal pay for equal work.

3. Negro workers should seek membership in labor organizations; and the latter, as a matter of self-interest as well as of justice, should seek to organize them.

4. Public agencies should provide "industrial training of Negroes equal in quality and kind to that provided for other citizens."

5. Negro representation on regional agencies concerned with the welfare of workers is urged.

Service Occupations

Recognizing that probably for a long time Negroes will be employed chiefly in service occupations, the conviction is expressed that better service and greater goodwill may be secured by more thorough training for service workers. Along with this should go corresponding improvement of wages and conditions, including "wholesome environment, living accommodations, food, uniforms and rest rooms," and reasonable and definite hours of work. The opinion is expressed that "service workers should be organized into unions with recognized affiliations," and that they should be included in all social security benefits provided for workers of other categories.

Education

Under the head of education the statement enunciates this fundamental principle:

"As equal opportunity for all citizens is the very foundation of the democratic faith and of the Christian ethic which gave birth to the ideal of democratic living, it is imperative that every measure possible be taken to insure an equality of education to Negroes."

Basic to such opportunity, the statement holds, is the improvement of Negro schools, involving more liberal expenditure of public funds, equal salaries for teachers of equal training and experience, an expanded building program, and equal school terms.

Pointing to the increasing need among Negroes for graduate and professional training, it is held that the States should make such training "available equally for white and Negro eligible students in terms defined by the United States Supreme Court" in the Gaines decision.*

In the case of States financially unable to "sustain the added cost of equalization, Federal funds should be made available to overcome the differentials between white and Negro facilities and between Southern and national standards."

The statement expresses the belief that, because of the special problems involved, Negroes should have "intelligent and sympathetic representation on school boards," and that Negro truancy officers could be used to advantage.

Agriculture

As a means of "increasing the production of the (Southern) area, raising

*This decision ("Gaines vs University of Missouri") held that the several States must either provide equal facilities for Negro graduate and professional students, or else admit them to existing State institutions.

the status and spirits of Negro farmers, and improving the region's contribution to the total war effort," the following measures are suggested:

Better conditions of tenancy and farm labor, including written contracts, longer lease terms, higher farm wages, and balanced production programs to provide food and feed crops for tenants and laborers.

It is held that adequate Federal assistance should be provided Negro farmers on an equitable basis; that Federal funds for agricultural improvement should be more fairly distributed to the Negro land grant colleges; that qualified Negroes should be appointed to public agricultural planning and policy-making bodies; and that Negro farmers should be included in the membership of farm organizations and co-operatives.

Military Service

Under this head we quote the statement in full:

"We recognize and welcome the obligation of every citizen to share in the military defense of the nation and we seek, along with the privilege of offering our lives, the opportunity of other citizens of full participation in all branches of the military service, and of advancement in responsibility and rank according to ability.

"Negro soldiers, in line of military duty and in training in the South, encounter particularly acute racial problems in transportation and in recreation and leave areas. They are frequently mistreated by the police. We regard these problems as unnecessary and destructive to morale."

Social Welfare and Health

"As a means of reducing mortality and public contagion" the statement recommends the following as minimum health measures:

That an adequate proportion of the facilities of all public hospitals be made available to Negro patients;

That qualified Negro doctors, like other practitioners, be permitted to serve their patients in such hospitals;

That Negro public health nurses and social workers be used more extensively;

That the public program of slum clearance and low-cost housing be extended.

That None Misunderstand

All the above suggestions, the statement is careful to point out, represent merely "simple efforts to correct obvious social and economic injustices," and indicate no disposition whatever "to invade the privacy of family life." The two concluding paragraphs, summing up the situation in its world-wide significance, are as follows:

"It is a wicked notion that the struggle of the Negro for citizenship is a struggle against the best interest of the Nation. To urge such a doctrine, as many are doing, is to preach disunity and to deny the most elementary principles of American life and government.

"The effect of the war has been to make the Negro, in a sense, the symbol and protagonist of every other minority in Amercia and in the world at large. Local issues in the South, while admittedly holding many practical difficulties, must be met wisely and courageously if this Nation is to become a significant political entity in a new international world. The correction of these problems is not only a moral matter, but a practical necessity in winning the war and in winning the peace. Herein rests the chance to reveal our greatest weakness or our greatest strength."

Southern White Leaders Respond

Since this reasonable and friendly statement was addressed to the white South, it is not surprising that the fair-minded white leadership of the region should feel that an answer in kind was due. Such an answer, in fact, was formulated and given to the public on April 8, 1943, over the signatures of 241 men and women in the front rank of the South's religious, cultural and business life. There were, for example, the Governor of Virginia, nine or ten bishops, six of them Methodists, a dozen presidents of colleges and theological schools, many ministers and teachers, editors, lawyers, industrialists, business men, church and club women, labor leaders, and social workers. It was in every sense a group fully competent to speak for the best opinion of the white South. From the statement of this group we quote the following significant paragraphs:

"In October, 1942, a representative group of Southern Negro leaders met in Durham, N. C., and issued a statement in which they addressed themselves 'to the current problems of racial discrimination and neglect, and to ways in which we may co-operate in the advancement of programs aimed at the sound improvement of race relations, within the democratic framework.'

"Their statement is so frank and courageous, so free from any suggestion of threat and ultimatum, and at the same time shows such good will, that we gladly agree to co-operate.

"We do not attempt to make here anything like a complete reply to the questions raised, nor to offer solutions for all the vexing problems. We hope, however, to point the pathway for future co-operative efforts and to give assurance of our sincere good will and desire to co-operate in any sound program aimed at the improvement of race relations.

"These Negro leaders rightly placed emphasis in their statement on discrimination in the administration of our laws on purely racial grounds. We are sensitive to this charge and admit that it is essentially just. From the Potomac to the Rio Grande there are some ten million Negroes. While all citizens are governed by the same laws, it is recognized that Negroes have little voice in the making and enforcement of the laws under which they must live. They are largely dependent upon the will of the majority group for the safety of life and property, education and health, and their general economic condition. This is a violation of the spirit of democracy. No Southerner can logically dispute the fact that the Negro, as an American citizen, is entitled to his civil rights and economic opportunities. . . .

"All men who believe in justice, who love peace and who believe in the meaning of this country are under the necessity of working together to draw off from the body of human society the poison of racial antagonism. . . .

"That there are acute and intricate problems associated with two races living side by side in the South cannot be denied. But these problems can be solved and will ultimately disappear if they are brought out into an atmosphere of justice and good will. If we approach them with contempt in one group and with resentment in the other group, then we work on hopeless terms. The solution of these problems can be found only in men of both races who are known to be men of determined good will. The ultimate solution will be found in evolutionary methods and not in ill-founded revolutionary movements which promise immediate solutions. . . .

"It is futile to imagine or to assert that the problem will solve itself. The need is for a positive program arrived at in an atmosphere of understanding, co-operation and mutual respect."

Southern Regional Council Set Up

Following this friendly and constructive interchange of views, representatives of the two groups were appointed to work out plans for a practical approach to the interracial situation. The result was the organization of the Southern Regional Council, with headquarters in the Standard Building, Atlanta. To this body the former Commission on Interracial Co-operation has turned over its work. The Council will continue to foster a program of research, education, and organization of state and local committees to deal with interracial conditions involving neglect and injustice. The religious and civic leadership of the South is conspicuous in the membership of the Council, and it is believed that the organization merits the confidence and co-operation of all persons interested in a constructive approach to the racial situation.

HOW THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL BEGAN

The Southern Regional Council, which began its existence as a formally organized body in February, 1944, is the product of many factors, but primarily it is the outgrowth of two parent movements. One of these was the Commission on Interracial Cooperation. The other was the Durham-Atlanta-Richmond series of conferences.

1. The Commission on Interracial Cooperation

In 1919, during the dark days of racial conflict and Ku Kluxism which followed World War I, the Commission on Interracial Cooperation was born. It represented a new idea in race relations—the idea that white people and Negroes should come together and strive to reach a "meeting of minds" on their mutual problems. This idea spread until there were scores of interracial committees operating in the South and elsewhere.

No one contends that the Commission did a perfect job, but no one who has observed the work of the Commission over a period of years can say flatly that it failed. It never claimed that its program would "solve" the race problem. Indeed, its leaders always made it clear that they were trying to take "the next steps" toward greater racial understanding and tolerance. This work has been of inestimable value to the South and to the nation. In its 25 years of operation, the Commission has made interracial conferences respectable almost everywhere in the South, has marshalled thousands of the church women of the South in opposition to lynching and other injustices, has sponsored significant researches on race relations, has issued two million copies of pamphlets and leaflets, and has symbolized the faith of the Southern white people and Negro people in the processes of understanding and cooperation.

In 1939 the Commission leaders, feeling that the educational program which it started out to do had become thoroughly established, and recognizing the need for new blood and new ideas, began to explore the possibility of broadening the scope of the organization and improving its techniques. In October, 1940, the Commission instructed its executive committee to "take whatever steps are necessary to carry out the plans for the formation of a council on Southern regional development," which would include in its program "the work of the Commission and other activities connected with the economic, educational, and social development of the South." Accordingly, an evaluative study of the Commission was made and a plan for expansion was drawn up. In the meantime, the Durham-Atlanta-Richmond conferences matured to a similar purpose, and the outcome was that on the day of the charter meeting of the Southern Regional Council, the Commission met and formally merged its program with, and transferred its assets to, the Southern Regional Council.[1]

The main efforts of the Council in its first few months of existence have been directed toward conserving and stimulating the state and local interracial committees throughout the South, because the Council believes that they must continue to play an important role in race relations and in implementing the program of the Council. The Commission will keep its legal entity for a time, but its program, revitalized and expanded, will be carried on as one phase of the work of the Southern Regional Council.

2. The Durham-Atlanta-Richmond Conferences

The younger parent of the Southern Regional Council was the Durham-Atlanta-Richmond series of conferences. The first chapter in the story of these conferences began with the meeting of a group of Southern Negro leaders at Durham in October, 1942. This conference was an outstanding event in the history of the South. It was a product of the rising tide of racial friction, and it was also in a sense a product of both the successes and the failures of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation. These Negro leaders expressed their purpose as follows:

1. See Appendix E.

> We are proposing to set forth in certain "Articles of Cooperation" just what the Negro wants and is expecting of the post-war South and nation. Instead of letting the demagogues guess what we want, we are proposing to make our wants and aspirations a matter of record, so clear that he who runs may read. We are hoping in this way to challenge the constructive cooperation of that element of the white South who express themselves as desirous of a New Deal for the Negroes of the South.

A Committee was appointed to draw up a "Charter" embodying the ideas agreed upon at the Conference, and on December 15, 1942, the Conference issued a document entitled "A Basis for Inter-Racial Cooperation and Development in the South . . . a statement by Southern Negroes."[2] This is a remarkable document. It deserves a place of honor in the annals of American democracy. It tells in plain and dignified language what the Negro wants—not what one or two Negroes want, not what white people say Negroes want, but what a large group of representative Negroes say for themselves. Never before had such a large and distinguished group of American Negro leaders come together and agreed upon something. The statement covers the following areas: Political and Civil Rights, Industry and Labor, Service Occupations, Education, Agriculture, Military Service, and Social Welfare and Health.

The second chapter in this movement was written on April 8, 1943, when a group of Southern white leaders met in Atlanta to consider the statement which had been issued by the Durham Conference. These white leaders said, among other things:

> Their statement is so frank and courageous, so free from any suggestion of threat and ultimatum, and at the same time shows such good will, that we gladly agree to cooperate. All men who believe in justice, who love peace and who believe in the meaning of this country are under the necessity of working together to draw off from the body of human society the poison of racial antagonism.
> It is futile to imagine or to assert that the problem will solve itself. The need is for a positive program arrived at in an atmosphere of understanding, cooperation and mutual respect.[3]

A third chapter was written on June 16, 1943, when a collaboration committee, composed of representatives from the Durham and Atlanta conferences, met in Richmond to work out further details. This meeting urged "the general adaptation of the Durham statement" and directed that a continuing committee be charged with "the responsibility for working out methods and practical means of approach."[4]

A fourth chapter in this movement was written at Atlanta on August 4, 1943, when a continuing committee of white and Negro delegates again met, this time to draw up specific plans for implementing the Durham statement. The conferees agreed upon "a new declaration of American principles and a new dedication of ourselves to the task of covenanting together with all regions and all races for the continued better ordering of our society," and the resolution which they passed said:

> We urge the South to pool its efforts and set up a strong, unified, Southern Regional Council, constituted of representatives of both races and of private and public groups. Such a council, in subscribing to the new declaration of principles, would work with and utilize all other available agencies and individuals in private and in public life and especially with a similar national group when established.[5]

As in any movement, there were in these conferences conflicts of personalities and of ideas, there were mistakes and limitations; but, considering the unusual variety of persons and interests represented, there was a remarkable spirit of unanimity. The important thing was that Southern Negro leaders had spoken out courageously, that white leaders had accepted the challenge, and that the two groups had covenanted to take the offensive for constructive social action in the South.

3. Organization of the Council

Following the Atlanta Resolution of August, 1943, there was much necessary committee work on procedure, finance, incorporation, etc. On January 6, 1944, the Southern Regional Council was chartered as a corporation by the State of Georgia "for the improvement of economic, civic, and racial conditions in the South, . . . to attain through research and action programs the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the region; . . ." [6]

Afterwards the Incorporators met and designated charter members: all persons who had participated in one of the preliminary conferences and all members of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation residing in the Council's area. Of approximately 270 persons thus designated, over 90% accepted charter membership. About 100 were present at the charter meeting in Atlanta on February 16-17, 1944, and they participated wholeheartedly in the meeting. For two days they discussed, they worked over by-laws, they elected officers, Board of Directors, executive directors, and executive committee. When they had finished, they had constructed a thoroughly democratic structure and government for their Council.

II

THE STRUCTURE OF THE COUNCIL

The Southern Regional Council belongs to its members. It has a Board of Directors and an Executive Committee, but all actions of these groups are subject to review by the annual meeting of members. At the annual meetings, which will be held on the second Wednesday in October, every member in good standing is entitled to vote, either in person or by proxy. The membership can be increased indefinitely, if the members desire to do so. The conditions of membership are: (1) an affirmation of belief in the purposes of the Council, (2) residence in the Council area, and (3) payment of annual dues (at present one dollar). All new members must be confirmed by the members or by the Board of Directors.

The By-laws adopted at the charter meeting define the Council's area as the states of Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia. Voting members must be residents of this area. Persons who live elsewhere and who wish to keep in touch with the work of the Council by receiving its literature regularly, may become Associates of the Council by paying a fee of one dollar a year.

The Board of Directors is at present composed of 64 persons of whom 58 are elected members and 6 are ex officio members. Every one of the thirteen states in the Council area is represented on the Board. The racial composition of the Board is 27 (42%) Negro members and 37 (58%) white members. The occupational distribution of Board members is as follows: education and related interests, 23; business, law, and medicine, 14; religion, 8; public office and civic work, 9; journalism, 4; labor, 4; miscellaneous, 2. In order to prevent the usual ills of ageing and ingrowing, the By-laws provide that no Board member may serve more than two consecutive terms of four years each.

The Council's By-laws provide for a National Advisory Committee, whose function will be the coordination of the work of the Southern Regional Council with the work of similar organizations in other parts of the nation. There will also be one hundred Honorary Fellows of the Council, drawn from the ranks of young Southerners who show promise of progressive leadership, whose function will be to assist the Council as observers, correspondents, and special investigators.

6. For the Charter of the Council, see Appendix F.

III

PROGRAM AND METHODS

The Southern Regional Council represents the combined efforts of liberal and progressive people of both races to give democracy a chance in the South. Its long-time goal is the improvement of social, civic, economic, and racial conditions in the South. The Council is not exclusively a "race relations" organization, nor does it pretend to believe that it can "solve" the race problem, but it does believe that any sound movement for social progress must be based on the realization that the South cannot go far without democratizing its social order and giving all of its human resources a chance to develop their potentialities.

The Council's functions may be summarized as follows: (1) clearing-house and coordinating work with numerous agencies working on Southern problems; (2) research and survey to determine the facts and the state of public opinion as a basis for sound social action; (3) educational activities through a monthly paper, The Southern Frontier, and through pamphlets, press, radio, conferences, and personal contacts; (4) consultative services to private or official agencies; (5) constructive action at every possible point on the social, economic, political and racial problems of the South.

The immediate objectives of the Council are: (1) to develop its staff and facilities for effective work, (2) to conserve and revitalize the work of existing state and local interracial groups, (3) to promote a strategy conference of the major agencies working on social problems in the South, and (4) to initiate studies and conferences in the areas of police administration, post-war employment, and household service.

As for specific methods, the Council must rely upon the age-old techniques of propaganda, conference, petition, public appeal, personal influence, and the like. It is a voluntary organization, and it has no more power than the combined will, moral conviction, and integrity of its members. It does not believe in miracles, but it does believe that in spite of obstacles there is a range within which hard work and intelligent strategy can induce constructive social change.

IV

THE REGIONAL APPROACH

It is generally admitted, by Southerners and non-Southerners alike, that the South is "a state of mind," and the researches of distinguished scholars have shown beyond all doubt that there are social, economic, political, and cultural traits which set the South off as different from other American regions.

Every region has a certain amount of pride and self-consciousness, and in the South—a region which has long been the object of sympathy, contempt, ridicule, philanthropy, exploitation, and free advice—there is a particularly sensitive reaction to criticism and reform efforts which stem from the "outside." As a matter of fact, in such a situation "outside influences," however well intentioned, can and sometimes do retard progress by provoking defensive attitudes and providing alibis for inaction and demagoguery.

Critics of the SRC have tried to picture it as a "defensive" organization. It is dangerous, they say, because it is trying to solve, on a regional or sectional basis, problems that are really national. However, there is nothing inherently superior about an organization or reform movement merely because it is "national," and nothing inherently inferior or dangerous about it merely because it is "regional." Many problems are national or even international in their scope, but it does not follow that they will be worked out everywhere at the same time and by the same methods. The test of the value of any movement or strategy is in what it achieves, and the Southern Regional Council believes that the surest and sanest way to achieve social progress in the South is to mobilize the efforts of liberal and progressive people within the region. The statement that "the South must work out its own salvation" is sound common sense and sound psychiatry. Certainly the South cannot achieve its fullest development and share equally with other regions in national affairs until it has taken the lead in working out its own problems.

The Southern Regional Council has posted no "keep out" signs and it has declared its willingness to cooperate with likeminded organizations—state, regional, and national. It has come neither to defend nor defame the South, but to help build a better South in a better nation. It dedicates itself to the task of doing the most and the best that can be done here and now.

APPENDIX A

THE DURHAM CONFERENCE STATEMENT

On October 20, 1942, a group of Negro Southerners met in Durham, North Carolina, to discuss their problems and the changes which, in their opinion, would benefit not only Negroes themselves but the South and the nation. A committee was instructed to prepare a statement embodying the thinking of the Conference. In December, 1942, the following document was given to the public. It was entitled: "A Basis for Interracial Cooperation and Development in the South: a Statement by Southern Negroes."

The war has sharpened the issue of Negro-white relations in the United States, and particularly in the South. A result has been increased racial tensions, fears, and aggressions, and an opening up of the basic questions of racial segregation and discrimination, Negro minority rights, and democratic freedom, as they apply practically in Negro-white relations in the South. These issues are acute and threaten to become even more serious as they increasingly block, through the deeper fears aroused, common sense consideration for even elementary improvements in Negro status, and the welfare of the country as a whole.

With these problems in mind, we, a group of southern Negroes, realizing that the situation calls for both candor and wisdom, and in the belief that we voice the sentiments of many of the Negroes of the Nation as well as the South, take this means of recording our considered views of the issues before us.

(1) Our Nation is engaged in a world-wide struggle, the success of which, both in arms and ideals, is paramount and demands our first loyalty.

(2) Our loyalty does not, in our view, preclude consideration now of problems and situations that handicap the working out of internal improvements in race relations essential to our full contribution to the war effort, and of the inevitable problems of post-war reconstruction, especially in the South where we reside.

(3) The South, with its twenty-five million people, one-third of whom are Negroes, presents a unique situation, not only because of the size of the Negro population but because of the legal and customary patterns of race relations which are invariably and universally associated with racial discriminations. We recognize the strength and age of these patterns.

We are fundamentally opposed to the principle and practice of compulsory segregation in our American society, whether of races or classes or creeds; however, we regard it as both sensible and timely to address ourselves now to the current problems of racial discrimination and neglect, and to ways in which we may cooperate in the advancement of programs aimed at the sound improvement of race relations within the democratic framework.

(4) We regard it as unfortunate that the simple efforts to correct obvious social and economic injustices continue, with such considerable popular support, to be interpreted as the predatory ambition of irresponsible Negroes to invade the privacy of family life.

(5) We have the courage and faith to believe, however, that it is possible to evolve in the South a way of life, consistent with the principles for which we as a Nation are fighting throughout the world, that will free us all, white and Negro alike, from want, and from throttling fears.

Political and Civil Rights

1. We regard the ballot as a safeguard of democracy. Any discrimination against citizens in the exercise of the voting privilege, on account of race or poverty, is detrimental to the freedom of these citizens and to the integrity of the State. We therefore record ourselves as urging now:

a. The abolition of the poll tax as a prerequisite to voting.
b. The abolition of the white primary.
c. The abolition of all forms of discriminatory practices, evasions of the law, and intimidations of citizens seeking to exercise their right of franchise.

2. Exclusion of Negroes from jury service because of race has been repeatedly declared unconstitutional. This practice we believe can and should be discontinued now.

3. (a) Civil rights include personal security against abuses of police power by white officers of the law. These abuses, which include wanton killings, and almost routine beatings of Negroes, whether they be guilty or innocent of an offense, should be stopped now, not only out of regard for the safety of Negroes, but of common respect for the dignity and fundamental purpose of the law.

(b) It is the opinion of this group that the employment of Negro police will enlist the full support of Negro citizens in control of lawless elements of their own group.

4. In the public carriers and terminals, where segregation of the races is currently made mandatory by law as well as by established custom, it is the duty of Negro and white citizens to insist that these provisions be equal in kind and quality and in character of maintenance.

5. Although there has been, over the years, a decline in lynchings, the practice is still current in some areas of the South, and substantially, even if indirectly, defended by resistance to Federal legislation designed to discourage the practice. We ask that the States discourage this fascistic expression by effective enforcement of present or of new laws against this crime by apprehending and punishing parties participating in this lawlessness.

If the States are unable, or unwilling to do this, we urge the support of all American citizens who believe in law and order in securing Federal legislation against lynching.

6. The interests and securities of Negroes are involved directly in many programs of social planning and administration; in the emergency rationing, wage and rent control programs. We urge the use of qualified Negroes on these boards, both as a means of intelligent representation and a realistic aid to the functioning of these bodies.

Industry and Labor

Continuing opposition to the employment of Negroes in certain industries appears to proceed from (1) the outdated notions of an economy of scarcity, inherited from an industrial age when participation in the productive enterprises was a highly competitive privilege; (2) the effects of enemy propaganda designed to immobilize a large number of potentially productive workers in the American war effort; (3) the age-old prejudices from an era when the economic system required a labor surplus which competed bitterly within its own ranks for the privilege of work; (4) the established custom of reserving technical processes to certain racial groups; and (5) craft monopolies which have restricted many technical skills to a few workers.

Our collective judgment regarding industrial opportunities for Negroes may be summarized as follows:

1. The only tenable basis of economic survival and development for Negroes is inclusion in unskilled, semi-skilled and skilled branches of work in the industries or occupations of the region to the extent that they are equally capable. Circumstances will vary so as to make impossible and impracticable any exact numerical balance, but the principles enunciated by the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee are regarded by us as sound and economically essential.

2. There should be the same pay for the same work.

3. Negro workers should seek opportunities for collective bargaining and security through membership in labor organizations. Since there can be no security for white workers if Negroes are unorganized and vice versa, labor unions of white workers should seek the organization of Negro workers on a fair and equal basis.

4. We deplore the practice of those labor unions which bar Negroes from membership, or otherwise discriminate against them, since such unions are working against the best interest of the labor movement. We hold that only those labor unions which admit Negroes to membership and participation on a fair and democratic basis should be eligible for the benefits of the National Labor Relations Board, Railway Labor Act, State Labor Relations Acts and other protective labor legislation.

5. It is the duty of local, state and Federal agencies to insist upon and enforce provisions for the industrial training of Negroes equal in quality and kind with that of other citizens. We believe, further, that Negroes should have equal opportunity in training programs carried on by industries and by labor organizations.

6. We urge Negro representation on regional organizations concerned with the welfare of workers.

7. We regard the wage-and-job-freezing order of the War Manpower Commission as holding the seeds of a distinct disadvantage to Negroes and other marginal workers. Most of these workers are now employed in the lowest-income job brackets. The "freeze" order can remove the opportunity for economic advancement. There is as yet no assurance that under existing circumstances the War Manpower Commission can deal more equitably by the Negro in the future than it has in the past.

8. We are convinced that the South's economic and cultural development can be accelerated by increasing the purchasing power and skills of Negro workers.

Service Occupations

Any realistic estimate of the occupational situation of Negroes supports the view that Negroes will be employed in greatest proportions for a long time in service occupations. We see, however, possibilities of making of these fields scientifically guided areas in which training and organization will play a greater part in bringing about results mutually beneficial to employer and employee. We believe that greater service will be rendered and greater good will be engendered in the service fields if the following principles are observed:

1. More thorough training should be provided workers who plan to enter the service field, but the reward of the job and treatment on the job should be such as to make the workers feel that their training is justified.

Opportunity should be given the service worker to advance through the opening up of additional opportunities.

2. A wholesome environment, living accommodations, food, uniforms and rest rooms, all of an approved standard, should be provided service workers.

3. Opportunity should be given the service worker to live, after his stipulated hours of work, as an individual undisturbed in his private life by the whims and caprices of his employers.

4. In view of the strides made by labor in general, while the service worker's lot has remained about the same, service workers should be organized into unions with recognized affiliations.*

5. Service workers should be included in the provisions for old age insurance, unemployment compensation, workmen's compensation, the wage and hour act, and other benefits of Social Security legally provided to workers of other categories.

We believe that these provisions will help to insure more intelligent service and wholesome loyalty (which will improve both the quality of labor and personal relations) in service occupations.

Education

As equal opportunity for all citizens is the very foundation of the democratic faith, and of the Christian ethic which gave birth to the ideal of democratic living, it is imperative that every measure possible be taken to insure an equality of education to Negroes and, indeed, to all under-privileged peoples.

1. Basic to improvement in Negro education is better schools, which involves expenditures by States of considerably more funds for the Negro schools. This group believes that a minimum requirement now is (a) equalization of salaries of white and Negro teachers on the basis of equal preparation and experience; (b) an expanded school building program for Negro schools designed to overcome the present racial disparity in physical facilities; this program to begin as soon as building materials are available; (c) revision of the school program in terms of the social setting, vocational needs and marginal cultural characteristics of the Negro children; and (d) the same length of school term for all children in local communities. Our growing knowledge of the effect of environment upon the intelligence and social adjustment of children, in fact leads us to believe that to insure equality of educational opportunity it is not enough to provide for the under-privileged child, of whatever race, the same opportunities provided for those on superior levels of familial, social, and economic life. We feel it a function of Government to assure equalization far beyond the mere expenditure of equivalent funds for salaries and the like.

2. The education of Negroes in the South has reached the point at which there is increased demand for graduate and professional training. This group believes that this training should be made available equally for white and Negro eligible students in terms defined by the United States Supreme Court in the decision on the case of Gaines versus the University of Missouri.

3. Where it is established that States cannot sustain the added cost of equalization, Federal funds should be made available to overcome the differentials between white and Negro facilities and between southern and national standards.

4. It is the belief of this group that the special problems of Negro education make demands for intelligent and sympathetic representation of these problems on school boards by qualified persons of the Negro race.

5. The education of Negro youth can be measurably aided by the use of Negro enforcement officers of truancy and compulsory education laws.

*In the present hysteria of many housewives who are losing poorly paid servants to better paying war industries, it seems desirable to emphasize that this proposal bears no relation to the fantastic and probably Axis inspired rumors of so-called "Eleanor Clubs."

Agriculture

The South is the most rural section of the Nation, and Negroes, who constitute 33 per cent of its population, are responsible for an important share of the agricultural production on southern farms.

We recognize that the South is economically handicapped and that many of its disabilities are deeply rooted in agricultural maladjustments. To win the war, there is need for increased production of food, fibre and fats. In the present organization of agriculture, Negroes are a large part of the sharecropper and tenant group and a great majority of the rural Negro workers are in this class. Circumstances deny the Negro farmer sufficient opportunity to make his full contribution as a citizen. We suggest the following measures as means of increasing the production of the area, raising the status and spirits of Negro farmers, and of improving the region's contribution to the total war effort.

1. Establishment of sufficient safeguards in the system of tenancy to promote the development of land and home ownership and more security on the land, by:
   a. Written contracts
   b. Longer lease terms
   c. Higher farm wages for day laborers
   d. Balanced farm programs, including food and feed crops for present tenants and day laborers.

2. Adequate Federal assistance to Negro farmers should be provided on an equitable basis. The war effort can be materially aided if adequate provisions are made now for the interpretation of governmental policies to rural Negroes.

3. The equitable distribution of funds for teaching agriculture in the Negro land grant colleges to provide agricultural research and experimentation for Negro farmers.

4. The appointment of qualified Negroes to governmental planning and policy making bodies concerned with the common farmer, and the membership of Negro farmers in general farmers' organizations and economic cooperatives, to provide appropriate representation and to secure maximum benefits to our common wealth.

Military Service

We recognize and welcome the obligation of every citizen to share in the military defense of the nation and we seek, along with the privilege of offering our lives, the opportunity of other citizens of full participation in all branches of the military service, and of advancement in responsibility and rank according to ability.

Negro soldiers, in line of military duty and in training in the South, encounter particularly acute racial problems in transportation and in recreation and leave areas. They are frequently mistreated by the police. We regard these problems as unnecessary and destructive to morale.

Social Welfare and Health

1. We believe that some of the more acute problems of Negro health, family and personal disorganization are a reflection of deficiencies in economic opportunity, but that social and health services for Negroes will continue to be necessary in considerable amounts even with improvement of their economic status. As a means of reducing the mortality and public contagion resulting from inadequacies of medical attention and health knowledge, this group believes that minimum health measures for Negroes would include the following:
   a. Mandatory provisions that a proportion of the facilities in all public hospitals be available for Negro patients;
   b. That Negro doctors be either included on the staff for services to Negro patients, according to their special qualifications, or permitted as practitioners the same privilege and courtesy as other practitioners in the public hospitals;

c. That Negro public health nurses and social workers be more extensively used in both public and private organizations.

2. We advocate the extension of slum clearance and erection of low-cost housing as a general as well as special group advantage. The Federal government has set an excellent precedent here with results that offer much promise for the future.

* * * *

It is a wicked notion that the struggle of the Negro for citizenship is a struggle against the best interests of the Nation. To urge such a doctrine, as many are doing, is to preach disunity and to deny the most elementary principles of American life and government.

The effect of the war has been to make the Negro, in a sense, the symbol and protagonist of every other minority in America and in the world at large. Local issues in the South, while admittedly holding many practical difficulties, must be met wisely and courageously if this Nation is to become a significant political entity in a new international world. The correction of these problems is not only a moral matter, but a practical necessity in winning the war and in winning the peace. Herein rests the chance to reveal our greatest weakness or our greatest strength.

APPENDIX B

THE ATLANTA CONFERENCE STATEMENT

On April 8, 1943, a group of white Southerners met in Atlanta, Georgia, to consider the statement which had been issued by the Durham Conference. The results of their deliberations were made public in the following document.

In October, 1942, a representative group of Southern Negro leaders met in Durham, N. C., and issued a statement in which they addressed themselves "to the current problems of racial discrimination and neglect, and to ways in which we may cooperate in the advancement of programs aimed at the sound improvement of race relations, within the democratic framework."

Their statement is so frank and courageous, so free from any suggestion of threat and ultimatum, and at the same time shows such good will, that we gladly agree to cooperate.

We do not attempt to make here anything like a complete reply to the questions raised nor to offer solutions for all the vexing problems. We hope, however, to point the pathway for future cooperative efforts and to give assurance of our sincere good will and desire to cooperate in any sound program aimed at the improvement of race relations.

These Negro leaders rightly placed emphasis in their statement on discrimination in the administration of our laws on purely racial grounds. We are sensitive to this charge and admit that it is essentially just. From the Potomac to the Rio Grande there are some ten million Negroes. While all citizens are governed by the same laws, it is recognized that Negroes have little voice in the making and enforcement of the laws under which they must live. They are largely dependent upon the will of the majority group for the safety of life and property, education and health, and their general economic condition. This is a violation of the spirit of democracy. No Southerner can logically dispute the fact that the Negro, as an American citizen, is entitled to his civil rights and economic opportunities.

The race problem in any Southern community is complicated by our economic limitations. The factors which have kept the South a tributary section have also kept it poor and lacking in sufficient industry to develop and to provide enough jobs and enough public funds for every public need. Yet the only justification offered for those laws which have for their purpose the separation of the races is that they are intended to minister to the welfare and integrity of both races. There has been widespread and inexcusable discrimination in the administration of these laws. The white Southerner has an obligation to interest himself in the legitimate aspirations of the Negro. This means correcting the discrimination between the races in the allocation of school funds; in the number and quality of schools, and in the salaries of teachers. In public travel where the law demands a separation of the races, primary justice and a simple sense of fair play demand the facilities for safety, comfort and health should be equal. The distribution of public utilities and public benefits, such as sewers, water, housing, street and sidewalk paving, playgrounds, public health and hospital facilities should come to the Negro upon the basis of population and need.

It is recognized that there is often practical discrimination by some peace officers and in some courts in the treatment of Negro prisoners and in the abrogation of their civil rights. There is no such discrimination incorporated in the laws of any of the Southern states. False arrests, brutal beatings and other evils must be stopped.

In the economic field, unquestionably procedures should be undertaken to establish fully the right to receive equal pay for equal work. To do otherwise works a wrong to our entire economic life and to our self respect. With so large a proportion of our wage-earning population belonging to the minority race, if we cannot plan for a well-trained, well-employed and prosperous Negro population, the economic future of the South is hopeless.

Most of the Negroes in the South are on farms and in rural communities. Failure to provide for them all the facilities for improving agricultural practices through schools, county agents, and supervision holds back all of the South. Fair wages, longer tenures of leases and increased opportunities for farm ownership are also necessary.

All men who believe in justice, who love peace and who believe in the meaning of this country are under the necessity of working together to draw off from the body of human society the poison of racial antagonism. This is one of the disruptive forces which unless checked will ultimately disturb and threaten the stability of the nation. Either to deny or to ignore the increased tension between the white and the colored races would be a gesture of insincerity.

That there are acute and intricate problems associated with two races living side by side in the South cannot be denied. But these problems can be solved and will ultimately disappear if they are brought out into an atmosphere of justice and good will. If we approach them with contempt in one group and with resentment in the other group, then we work on hopeless terms. The solution of these problems can be found only in men of both races who are known to be men of determined good will. The ultimate solution will be found in evolutionary methods and not in ill-founded revolutionary movements which promise immediate solutions.

We agree with the Durham Conference that it is "unfortunate that the simple efforts to correct obvious social and economic injustices continue, with such considerable popular support, to be interpreted as the predatory ambition of irresponsible Negroes to invade the privacy of family life." We agree also that "it is a wicked notion that the struggle by the Negro for citizenship is a struggle against the best interests of the nation. To urge such a doctrine, as many are doing, is to preach disunity, and to deny the most elementary principles of American life and government."

It is futile to imagine or to assert that the problem will solve itself. The need is for a positive program arrived at in an atmosphere of understanding, cooperation and a mutual respect.

APPENDIX C

THE RICHMOND CONFERENCE STATEMENT

On June 16, 1943, a Collaboration Committee, composed of delegates from the Durham Conference and the Atlanta Conference, met in Richmond, Virginia. The following statement was issued by the Richmond Conference.

This is a day of great differences, strong feelings, and epochal conflicts throughout the world. Yet the world's greatest need and hope is to find common ground for universal action and balanced harmony among all peoples. Manifestly, such a goal must be reached through cooperative approximation to the largest measure of agreement in line with the largest number of values and the largest number of people.

We face, therefore, the double crisis of standing firm for the conservation and preservation of human rights; yet to seek these ends by the way of peace and planning rather than by conflict and revolution.

In America, and particularly in the South, we face the problem of readjustments to meet the demands of present and post-war conditions with reference to the Negro and the future development of a great region of the Nation. This, exclusive of the war, is the great crisis of the South and Nation.

This is the problem of two great peoples caught up in the midst of transition between the powerful heritage of the past and the mighty pull of the future. For here is the white South, a great people often doing little things and good people often doing bad things. And here is the Negro South, caught as always between the upper and nether millstones of conflicting forces and also paying the price of extraordinary transition from level to level of cultural achievement, and needing plenty of understanding and cooperation. And here is the white South inexorably conditioned by cultural complexes, suffering terribly, too, and needing sympathy and help as few peoples have ever needed in the annals of man. And, even more important, the two, white South and black South, are part and parcel of the Nation, whose people need scarcely less than the two regional peoples the sense of time and wisdom.

The war has sharpened the issue of Negro-white relations in the United States, and particularly in the South. A result has been increased racial tensions, fears, and aggressions, and an opening up of the basic questions of racial segregation and discrimination, Negro minority rights, and democratic freedom, as they apply practically in Negro-white relations in the South. These issues are acute and threaten to become even more serious as they increasingly block, through the deeper fears aroused, common sense consideration for even elementary improvements in Negro status and the welfare of the country as a whole.

This is a rare challenge to the leadership of the South: to the white leadership to find new ways of cooperation and to justify increased confidence of the Negro leadership in the white South; to the Negro leadership, to sense the difficulties involved and to meet increasing demands, without slowing down their essential efforts.

As evidence of the promise of this leadership, two recent Southern conferences on race relations, one at Durham, under the auspices of Negro leadership, and one in Atlanta under the auspices of white leadership, have blazed new trails. As a follow-up of these and with the above problems and backgrounds in mind, we, a group of Southern whites and Negroes, representing both the Durham and Atlanta groups, meeting as a collaboration committee at Richmond, Virginia, June 16, 1943, and following the general trend of the Atlanta group, urge the general adaptation of the Durham statement entitled "A Basis for Interracial Cooperation and Development in the South," which has had extraordinary nation-wide endorsement.

The framers of this covenant, realizing that the situation calls for both candor and wisdom, have included adequate and searching analysis of the principal issues involved, duly interpreted in their proper perspective. The problems so featured include political and civil rights, industry and labor, service occupations, education, agriculture, military service, social welfare and health.

In the area of political and civil rights: the essential problems featured were those of franchise and the ballot, jury service, personal security, services in public carriers, the elimination of violence, within and without the law, the elimination of lynching, and the employment of an increasingly larger number of Negroes in the public service.

In the area of work opportunities: the increased training for all skilled, semi-skilled, and unskilled labor, and opportunity for employment; the readaptation of labor union policies both for the best interests of Negroes and labor unions; the problems of dual standards of pay; support of, but guarding against discrimination in, local, state, and federal procedures; special problems of service workers and standards of living.

In the area of education: equalized opportunities in all aspects but especially including institutions of higher learning, professional training, and equal salaries.

In the area of agriculture: adequate opportunity for the Negro farmer, including a sound system of tenancy, adequate state and federal assistance, increased opportunity for farm ownership, fair farm wages, and the wider employment of Negro farm and home agents.

In the area of military service: along with the obligation to serve, the opportunity for full participation and advancement in the war activities and a continuing better adjustment of unsatisfactory situations.

In the area of social welfare and health: adequate provisions for safeguarding the public health, for training physicians and nurses, and for their employment. Also, the erection of low-cost housing and other facilities for improving community life.

We recognize now the importance of affirmative action, without which we shall fall far short of our hopes and possibilities. To this end, we direct that the continuing committee, as appointed by the two groups now consolidated in this larger collaboration committee, be charged with the responsibility for working out methods and practical means of approach. We urge especially that efforts be begun to prepare the post-war world for a wise and successful reception of our returning soldiers and to prepare both our soldiers and the people for attitudes and procedures adequate to carry the great load of post-war needs. In all these, we urge the public to a new sense of the meaning of these needs as they accord with our professed principles of Christianity and democracy.

APPENDIX D

THE ATLANTA RESOLUTION

On August 4, 1943, a Continuation Committee, appointed by the Richmond Conference, met in Atlanta to consider ways and means of implementing the recommendations of the preceding Conferences. The Committee resolved itself into the nucleus of the Southern Regional Council and elected Dr. Howard W. Odum and Dr. Charles S. Johnson as Co-Chairmen. The following resolution was adopted unanimously by the Committee.

We are gathered together here in solemn assembly, conscious of our heritage and opportunity. In the name and spirit of America and all her resources and institutions we covenant together in harmony and unanimity to make this day, or what this day should bring to pass, epochal in a new purpose, a new understanding, and a new fellowship.

In the name and spirit of America's science and education we seek to find and to tell the truth. In the name and spirit of America's democracy we seek the way of equal opportunity. In the name of America's patriotism, we strive for loyalty to the American dream, for leadership to guide, and for statesmanship adequate to carry the burden of the new America. In the name and spirit of America's Christianity, we search for the new faith of fellowship. In the name of humanity, we propose to substitute the measures of the good society for the old biological struggle for physical survival. In the name and spirit of all these and the living reality of a complex world, we dedicate ourselves to the task of doing the most and the best that can be done here and now.

Four ways there are, and perhaps more, of approaching these laudable and attainable ends. First, we agree upon a new declaration of American principles and a new dedication of ourselves to the task of covenanting together with all regions and all races for the continued better ordering of our society. We recognize fully that in the present crisis this covenant is as important as the earlier compacts of the forefathers, and that the framework within which we covenant together must comprehend a concept and a charter which guarantees equality of opportunity for all peoples. This means more specifically as bearing upon the burden of our present counseling that the Negro in the United States and in every region is entitled to and should have every guarantee of equal opportunity that every other citizen of the United States has within the framework of the American democratic system of government.

Second, we dedicate ourselves unswervingly to the successful achievement of this task. Since in the order of all nature and creations and of the growth and development of the people and society there are always certain features peculiar to each society; since in the order of democracy there are certain elemental principles of self-government that are inherent in each folk and regional society; and since in both the physical and cultural heritage of the South there are certain cumulative and tragic handicaps that represent powerful factors in the situation, we appeal to the Nation, in covenant with the South, to exercise a wisdom and maturity through which methods, procedures, and rates of change may be worked out in the spirit of, and in conformity with, the principles of our American democracy.

Third, to the end that there will be actual realistic accomplishments rather than mere words and that there may be possible ways and means of actually insuring progress in all approaches to these goals of equal opportunity, we urge the South to pool its efforts and set up a strong, unified, Southern Regional Council, constituted of representatives of both races and of private and public groups. Such a council, in subscribing to the new declaration of principles, would work with and utilize all other available agencies and individuals in private and in public life and especially with a similar national group when established.

Fourth, since the crisis is not only southern but national, not only for whites but for Negroes and other races as well, and since the central purpose of the new council is cooperation and the building of active good will, we urge the formation of a National Committee on race and regional development, constituted of representatives of all races and of public and private groups. Such a committee, subscribing to the declaration of principles, would work with and utilize all available agencies and individuals in private and public life.

We recognize the sweep and power of the emotions in time of war and crisis and the rights and tendencies in the democratic way of life for thousands of individuals and groups to agitate, organize, and promote their own peculiar programs. This is and must be the essence of a democracy. But it is also the way of democracy to focus upon fundamentals and to give opportunity to responsible leadership through the orderly agencies of government and of private citizens. To this end no greater service can be rendered to the Nation than to covenant together in responsible organizations, to provide leadership and clearing house, and to avoid conflicts, waste and overlapping, on the one hand, and, on the other, to minimize the harmful influence of irresponsible forces in this great hour of need for good will and for effective ways of doing what is needed. We feel that in these councils may be approximated needs more nearly than in any other ways that now appear.

The Nation is committed now to what is generally called, both in private business and in public life, post-war planning to the end that we may be ready for the demobilization and reintegration of our millions of returning soldiers into the best possible American way of life. Recognizing that the problems of the folk and of race constitute a more difficult problem than that of physical planning, by the same token we urge all the more the obligation to apply to this great area of our democracy the best the sciences, social sciences, the humanities, and religion can do in the realistic working out of next steps.

To this end, the present membership of the Continuation Committees of the Durham and Atlanta Conferences is hereby constituted the nucleus of the new Council; and the officers are authorized (1) to take immediate steps for the legal incorporation of the Council; (2) to appoint immediately the necessary staff personnel to implement this program, and (3) to enlarge the present membership in order to make it fully representative of all the interests encompassed by this program.

It is also respectfully urged that the President of the United States appoint a National Committee such as is suggested above.

APPENDIX E

RESOLUTION OF THE COMMISSION ON INTERRACIAL COOPERATION

On February 16, 1944, just before the opening of the Charter Meeting of the Southern Regional Council, the Commission on Interracial Cooperation met in Atlanta and passed the following resolution merging the Commission with the Council.

It being made to appear to the meeting that all of the Commission's obligations and liabilities have been fully discharged, and further that the Southern Regional Council, having been duly incorporated to carry on the work with ideals and program similar to those of this corporation:

It was, upon motion duly made and seconded—Resolved that the corporation transfer and convey to the Southern Regional Council, Inc., a corporation of Fulton County, Georgia, all of its property of every nature whatsoever and wherever situated, absolutely and in fee simple.

APPENDIX F

CHARTER OF THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

STATE OF GEORGIA
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE

I, John B. Wilson, Secretary of State of the State of Georgia, do hereby certify that was on the 6th day of January, 1944, duly incorporated under the laws of the State of Georgia by the Superior Court of Fulton County for a period of thirty-five years from said date, in accordance with the certified copy hereto attached, and that a certified copy of the charter of said corporation has been duly filed in the office of the Secretary of State and the fees therefor paid, as provided by law.

"SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC."

(SEAL)
STATE OF GEORGIA
1776

In Testimony Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of office, at the Capitol, in the City of Atlanta, this 7th day of January, in the year of our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Forty-four and of the Independence of the United States of America the One Hundred and Sixty-eighth.

JOHN B. WILSON
Secretary of State, Ex-Officio Corporation Commissioner of the State of Georgia.

STATE OF GEORGIA,
FULTON COUNTY.
TO THE SUPERIOR COURT OF SAID COUNTY:

The Petition of DR. RUFUS E. CLEMENT, RALPH McGILL, BISHOP ARTHUR J. MOORE, DR. CHARLES S. JOHNSON, and DR. HOWARD W. ODUM respectfully shows:

1.

That they desire for themselves, their associates and successors, to be incorporated under the name and style of

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.

for a period of thirty-five (35) years, with the privilege of renewal at the expiration thereof, and from time to time, as is now or may hereafter be provided by law.

2.

The principal office and place of business of said Corporation shall be located in the City of Atlanta, County of Fulton, State of Georgia. The Corporation desires the privilege of establishing branch offices elsewhere, either within or without the State of Georgia, as may be desired.

3.

Said Corporation shall not be organized or operated for pecuniary gain or profits to its members, and shall have no capital stock.

4.

The objects and purposes of said Corporation are to exist and function as an eleemosynary organization, and more particularly to organize and maintain a Regional Council for the improvement of economic, civic and racial conditions in the South, in the endeavor to promote a greater unity in the South in all efforts toward regional and racial development; to attain through research and action programs the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the region; to reduce race tension, the basis of racial tension, racial misunderstanding, and racial distrust; to develop and integrate leadership in the South on new levels of regional development and fellowship; and to cooperate with local, State, and regional agencies on all levels in the attainment of the desired objectives.

The Corporation shall have the right to receive donations, endowments, devises and bequests, and shall enjoy all rights and powers, and be subject to all limitations, of the Corporation Act of the State of Georgia, approved

January 28, 1938, and all Amendments thereto, which may hereafter be adopted, excepting those rights, powers and limitations relating to capital stock, and other matters not pertinent to its organization.

The membership of said Corporation shall be self-perpetuating, and shall be composed of the Incorporators, and such others as said Incorporators shall, at any time after the organization of said Corporation, designate, according to such Rules and By-Laws as may be adopted by said Corporation. The Incorporators, and such other members as may be elected at the first Incorporators Meeting, shall be designated as "Charter Members" of the Corporation.

7.

The rights of any member in the Corporation shall not be assignable or transferable, and his rights shall cease with his death, resignation, or termination of membership for any cause.

8.

All corporate meetings, whether of the members or of the Board of Directors or of any other bodies established by the Corporation, may be held either within or without the State of Georgia.

9.

The Corporation may at any time, by the affirmative vote of a majority of the members of the Corporation, amend, either in form or in substance, its By-Laws and Charter, or either of them, and for any reason, approved by the affirmative vote of two-thirds of the members of the Corporation, sell and dispose of any or all of its assets, and dissolve and liquidate its affairs.

10.

The name and post office address of each of the Incorporators are as follows:

Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Atlanta University, Atlanta, Georgia,
Mr. Ralph McGill, 3399 Piedmont Road, N. E., Atlanta, Georgia,
Bishop Arthur J. Moore, 1976 North Decatur Road, Atlanta, Georgia,
Dr. Charles S. Johnson, Fisk University, Nashville, Tennessee
Dr. Howard W. Odum, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, North Carolina

11.

If and when said Corporation, for any reason whatever, shall liquidate or cease to exist as a body corporate, or to function as an eleemosynary organization, the title to all property, money and effects, of whatever kind or character, of such Corporation, after discharging its own obligations and liabilities, shall vest in some organization having ideals and a program similar to those of said Corporation, such organization to be designated by said Corporation before its dissolution.

WHEREFORE, petitioners pray to be incorporated under the name and style aforesaid, with all the powers, privileges and immunities herein set forth, and as are now, or may hereafter be, allowed a Corporation of similar character under the laws of Georgia.

A Case Study Prepared for Its Members

by

Southern Regional Council

Atlanta, Georgia

This summary of events attending the "White Primary" in the South was compiled from news stories appearing in the press of Georgia (especially the Atlanta Constitution and the Atlanta Journal) from findings obtained in conferences with groups and individuals, and from certain specific reports mentioned herein. It is designed to give a chronological account of the action and reaction attending the United States Supreme Court decision on the Texas White Primary Case: Smith vs. Allwright.

This report was prepared for the the Southern Regional Council by Margaret L. Fisher during the period of her services as Public Relations Secretary. It is one stop in the Council's program for the South which is based upon the principles - There are things to Know - There are Things to Believe - There are Things to Do.

The Southern Regional Council wishes to acknowledge its indebtedness to the Citizens Fact-Finding Movement of Georgia which permitted use of its extensive news files for the research encompassed by this report.

THE WHITE PRIMARY, 1944

Introduction

When the United States Supreme Court decision in the Texas white primary case, Smith vs. Allwright, was released, the forces of opposition were already hard at work in the South. A well-organized campaign to kill the New Deal and the threat it represents to 1) the big economic interests and 2) the "tradition" of the South had long been under way. In order to view the reaction to and the effect of the decision in proper perspective, it is necessary to take into account the ground work which has been skillfully laid in the South during the last several years.

In 1936 the famous "grass roots" convention was held in Macon, Georgia. It was planned and sponsored by the Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution, and purported to represent southern business men and farmers. Eugene Talmadge and other well-known "Democrats" participated. It is an accepted fact that the convention was financed by northern Republican millionaires to a large degree. In his column of July 17, 1944, Drew Pearson stated that these business magnates conceived the abortive southern revolt that was launched at the Macon convention.

Certainly one can follow the same interests and personalities through the following years right up to the collapse of the threatened revolt this fall. Talmadge, O'Daniel, the late "Cotton Ed" Smith, Harry Byrd, Harry Woodring, Jim Farley, and others were all active in this anti-Roosevelt, anti-fourth term, anti-New Deal movement. A significant little side-light occured in September, 1944 when "Cotton Ed" Smith held a rally in South Carolina at which time a new party was to be formed and plans were to be laid to "sweep the South and the Nation". The rally was attended by eight people!

During the last two years the South has experienced, and to a considerable degree resisted, certain developments: large numbers of Negro soldiers were stationed in camps in the South; the resistance to segregation in military forces increased throughout the country; the poll tax fight had been intensified; equalization of teachers' salaries had become an issue; the FEPC threatened the entrenched system of cheap labor; union organization had made great headway -- the hold of the northern Republican-southern Democratic bosses seemed to be losing its grip.

So, the Supreme Court decision was seized upon, blown up, and the "white supremacy" issue was raised. The threat of a political revolt as a result of the application of the Supreme Court decision grew rapidly. However, one after another the threats fell by the way side: using the race issue in the Pepper-Hill campaign in Florida didn't work; southern rebels were forced to drop their fight for a "white" race plank at the Democratic National Convention; plots to defeat the will of the people through a revolt in the electoral college failed in the face of practical common sense.

Over and above the state of confusion and turmoil, which was brought about in the South during this critical period, were many encouraging developments: a large number of leading daily and weekly newspapers went on record as favoring abolition of the poll tax by the states; several influential papers took a stand for Negro participation in the primaries - most of them after the primary elections were held, it is true; an attempt by 38 men to start a secret Klan-like organization in Atlanta was quickly stopped by violent editorial attack; the Klan itself reportedly was disbanded; and the number of southern white people who are articulate in their support of a practical democracy, with particular reference to the Negro participation in the franchise, increased. All of these things were encouraging and significant.

The decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Texas case was released to the press on April 3, 1944. It stated, among other things, that "the right to vote in such a primary for the nomination of candidates without discrimination by the state, like the right to vote in a general election, is a right secured by the Constitution. By the terms of the fifteenth amendment that right may not be abridged by any state on account of race. Under the Constitution the great privilege of choosing his rulers may not be denied a man by the state because of his color."

Throughout the South state officials and Democratic Party leaders exercised considerable caution in making immediate comment upon the decision. Some party leaders are known to have made unofficial statements to the effect that the Negro has secured the vote under the decision, but that it would have been "political suicide" to have admitted it this year.

There follows a narrative digest of developments in Georgia as reported in the Atlanta press, together with a supplement covering other states to the extent that information was available in the Atlanta press.

I. Georgia and the Franchise

In January 1944, the Atlanta Chapter of NAACP opened the question of Negro participation in the Democratic primary with a request to Governor Ellis Arnall that such steps as were necessary be taken to make sure that the pending soldier vote measure would extend the franchise to all members of the armed service, without regard to race. The NAACP stated that at that time Georgia had approximately 100,000 Negro men and women in the military service. Governor Arnall replied that "The State Democratic Executive Committee officials advise that, under the laws of this state and rules of the Democratic Committee, Negroes, whether soldiers or civilians, are not permitted to participate in the white Democratic Primary." (Atlanta Journal 1/28/44).

Immediately following the release of the Supreme Court decision on the Texas case, J. Lon Duckworth, chairman, Georgia State Democratic Committee, said that the Court's action in a Texas case "is not a decision affecting the Georgia primary, and I would say Negroes are not qualified to vote in the Democratic white primary of this state." Attorney General T. Grady Head of Georgia declined comment until such time as he was asked for an official ruling. Governor Ellis Arnall said he would not comment until " I read the decision." In Washington, Senator Walter F. George took the position that primaries should be regarded as private affairs of the courts. He said that the United States Supreme Court decision seemed "essentially unrealistic and inevitably leads into a field into which the courts ought not to go." On April 4, 1944, Ralph Smith, Washington correspondent of the Atlanta Journal, headlined his column "Ruling is Meaningless in Primary, George Says. Senator Thinks Decision, However, May be First Step to Break Down Color Line."

It might be mentioned here that at the time of George's statement the entries had been closed and Talmadge was not opposing him for the Senate.

The following excerpts are taken from an editorial in the Atlanta Journal of April 4, 1944, entitled Theory Versus Condition: "Law can be declared, but respect for and observance of the law come only from public sentiment... the decision of the Supreme Court opening Democratic or white primaries to Negroes must rest on public opinion in those communities in which its application involves a political and social revolution... Negroes as a race were disqualified from voting in sections in which they predominated for practical reasons... It is difficult to see how the Supreme Court could have ruled other than it did. The question before it was one which it could consider only in the abstractions of justice and the Constitution. But, unfortunately, we in the South are faced by a condition, not a theory.... It is a matter in which time and education and the development of tolerance on the one hand and of civic responsibility on the other are required." The editorial recognized that disenfranchisement is a grave injustice to many individual Negroes, but stated that the consideration must be the greater good for the greater number.

The Atlanta Constitution editorial of April 5, 1944, on the subject stated that the decision of the United States Supreme Court cannot be ignored, and recommended that southern states should study the effect, examine codes, and set up adequate and fair regulations within the meaning of the court's decision. It called attention to the fact that Negroes vote in the primaries in North Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee, and Kentucky, and said that in view of the facts and conditions in those states it is possible that the problem "is not as serious as first appears." "It can be solved fairly and within the meaning of the decision."

The press reported that some leaders said that the Georgia Democratic Party may return to the convention method of picking candidates. Solicitor General Charles H. Garrett of Macon, Georgia, was reported as saying the decision sounds "the death knell of primaries and ... party politics." In an editorial in the Georgia Market Bulletin, published by the State Department of Agriculture, Tom Linder, Commissioner, urged southern states to withdraw from the Democratic convention. He also said that the New Deal is attempting to destroy the traditions of the South. Linder was denounced by the Atlanta Journal and the Bartow Herald for this use of a state publication. Congressman Welchel was reported as opposing the Texas decision, and the press stated that Georgia legal authorities were in disagreement on the applicability of the decision in Georgia.

C. A. Scott, Chairman of the Public Affairs Committee of the NAACP in Atlanta said, "The Supreme Court decision is clear and cleancut... I expect to cast one (vote) in the primary July 4." A few days later Mr. Scott announced that Georgia Negroes would attempt to vote.

On April 6, Attorney General T. Grady Head ruled that no poll tax would apply to persons from 18 to 21 years of age. He stated that those who were 17 years old might register provided they would be 18 prior to the next general election. A few days later it was reported from Brunswick that 30 teen-age Negroes had registered in Glynn County, one group having been accompanied by a teacher.

The opening of a Negro voting school in Atlanta, to be sponsored by NAACP, was announced by C. A. Scott on April 30. Mr. Scott said that Georgia Negroes desired integration in the present Democratic Party, and that it was unlikely that they would seek representation on the state's delegation to the national Democratic convention, as in the case of the Progressive Democratic Party in South Carolina, because Georgia had not moved to circumvent the Supreme Court's decision as South Carolina did. Church and civic leaders in various Negro communities began educational programs in citizenship, and the program of registration continued throughout the state. It was reported that one Negro paid back poll taxes for eleven years and another for nine.

The first public support of the Supreme Court decision from a group of white citizens was the published resolution of the Georgia Committee for Interracial Cooperation, passed April 14, 1944, which called upon its "beloved state" to respect the letter, the implication, and the spirit of the Texas decision. On April 28, the Board of Directors of the Southern Regional Council, Inc., meeting in Atlanta, passed a similar resolution appealing to the people of the South to respect the "letter and the spirit of the Court's decision." Letters from "southern white women" and from men began to appear in the daily press urging that the rights and privileges of full citizenship be extended to Negroes. Many effective letters from Negroes were published. It is interesting to note that the number of letters favoring the action of the Court which were published in the Atlanta papers considerably exceeded the number in opposition.

On April 10, the Atlanta Constitution carried a special news story from Barnesville, Georgia, which stated that a movement was under way to ask the Governor to call a special session of the Legislature for the purpose of repealing all primary rules so as to "beat" the Supreme Court decision. About a week later it was reported that the Governor had refused to take such action upon the ground that the revised State Constitution would take care of the needs of Georgia.

The first definite statement from Democratic officials reported in the press was carried in the Atlanta Constitution on May 7,1944. Augusta officials were reported as having said that Negroes would not be permitted to vote because their names would not appear on the lists of eligible voters; that the registrar would be requested to furnish lists of white voters only.

In Columbus, Georgia, Negro leaders agreed to make only "a token effort" to vote. That agreement was publicized in the press on May 21, and received widespread approval from white officials. The leaders chose the sheriff's race to make a test, and upon refusal of ballots planned to bring a suit in the state courts. Throughout the state there began to appear recommendations that Negroes in Georgia follow the "token vote" procedure.

On June 7, a subcommittee of the Democratic State Executive Committee ruled that the primary would be restricted to white voters and directed chairmen of county executive committees accordingly. The following day Guy B. Johnson, Executive Director of the Southern Regional Council was quoted in the Atlanta Journal as hoping the action of the subcommittee "is only a temporary expedient and that the party will solve the problem right." Atlanta Negro Democrats immediately protested the action of the subcommittee and requested the full State Democratic Executive Committee to reverse the subcommittee ruling.

The educational program and registration campaign continued. The importance of quiet and orderly conduct was emphasized in church and other meetings. It was estimated by NAACP that 25,000 of Georgia's 1,300,000 Negroes were registered by the middle of June. Plans for participation in the primary proceeded in orderly fashion, and statements were made that court action would be taken if Negroes were refused ballots.

Shortly before the State Democratic Executive Committee met, a group of Negro leaders in Atlanta called upon Mr. Duckworth, chairman, and other officials and requested that the ruling of the subcommittee be reversed. Messrs. C. A. Scott and A. T. Walden were among the group. During the conference, it is reported by Mr. Walden that Democratic officials asked that an agreement be made for a "token vote." Mr. Walden stated that the group replied that such an arrangement would not be possible, inasmuch as the Negro leadership had already taken the position in the community that all registered Negroes should apply at their respective precincts and request the right to vote. Mr. Walden stated positively that no agreement was made with the Democratic Executive Committee at this or any later time. (Interview September 22, 1944).

Meanwhile, support for Negro participation in the primary increased in letters to the press. The most notable statement was a letter written by Mrs. Dorothy Q. Rainey, member of the State Democratic Executive Committee, addressed to the full committee and delivered to the chairman. A copy of the letter was released to the press and was given national publicity. Mrs. Rainey made a strong plea that the Executive Committee respect the supreme law of the land, and asked that her letter be read to the committee.

Talk of a southern revolt in the electoral college increased, and on June 20 Governor Arnall requested the Democratic State Executive Committee to pledge Georgia electors to support the nominees of the Democratic party. Governor Arnall deplored the action of those who were trying to sabotage the party.

The State Democratic Executive Committee met on June 22, confirmed the ruling of the subcommittee that the primary would be restricted to white voters, and ruled that electors would be required to pledge party regularity. On the same date, the Calhoun Times, a county weekly edited by Roy McGinty, carried an editorial favoring the Negro vote. Mr. McGinty was an unopposed candidate for the State Legislature. It is reported that several hundred struck his name from the ballot as a result of his editorial stand.

The Georgia Association of Citizens Democratic Clubs (Negro) met in Macon on June 26, with representatives from eleven clubs attending. The leadership urged all registered and otherwise qualified Negroes in Georgia to attempt to vote in the primary on July 4. The importance of maintaining order and avoiding any kind of trouble was emphasized.

The movement to persuade Negro leaders to agree to a "token vote" grew. Numbers of Georgia newspapers carried strong editorials favoring and urging such a procedure. Rumors and tensions increased.

On June 29, the Citizens' Democratic Club of Fulton County met and passed a resolution recommending that the attempt of Negroes to vote in the Democratic primary be restricted to officers and members of the executive committee of the club. "B e it also resolved that all Negro registered voters of the Democratic faith comply with the advice of the Citizens Democratic Club of Fulton County in this restricted vote attempt on July 4." The resolution was signed by C.A. Scott, Dr. R. A. Billings, Birdie Wallace, J. A. Batts, A. T. Walden, Rev. L. M. Terrill, J. A. Pierce, and C. A. Bacote. It is reported that the resolution was passed with only one dissenting vote. One of the signers has since stated that the action was taken because of the greatly increased tension in both the white and Negro community, and because it was felt that a token vote effort would be the most expedient manner in which the groundwork could be laid for a court case. He stated emphatically that no agreement was made with the State Democratic Executive Committee; that the resolution was in the form of a recommendation; that the Citizens Club was not empowered to speak for the Negroes of Fulton County; and that no official contact was made with the State Democratic Committee with regard to any token vote arrangement.

This action was given wide publicity in the press and the general impression was prevalent in the white community that Negroes in Fulton County had "agreed" to the token vote procedure. However, it might be noted that the Atlanta Constitution stated on July 1 that only a small group of Negroes would attempt to vote in Atlanta and Fulton County " if the recommendations of the Citizens Democratic Club are followed."

The following excerpts from the July 2 column of Dr. M. Ashby Jones, prominent retired minister in Atlanta, should be of record: "Their (Negroes') progress educationally and commercially is really unmatched in the story of races ..." (taken out of paragraph which points out the needs for recognizing changes since reconstruction days.) " We cannot much longer continue to subject Negroes to 'taxation without representation' or draft them to jeopardize their lives in defense of a democracy which denies them the right of franchise." Dr. Jones' column is a regular Sunday feature carried on the editorial pages of the Atlanta Constitution.

On the same date there was carried in the Atlanta papers a petition signed by 138 white citizens of Georgia asking the State Democratic Executive Committee to permit Negro participation in the primary. The statement was sent out by the Associated Press and received national coverage.

On either July 1 or 2, the Atlanta Journal stated that Mr. Neill Leach, secretary of the Fulton County Democratic Executive Committee, had stated that that Committee would ask for the names of white registrants only when requesting official registration lists, and that Negroes would not be permitted to vote because box managers would not have their names on the lists of eligible voters.

Registration had closed on May 8. Seven percent of the Fulton County registration was Negro: approximately 64,000 white and 5,000 Negro.

The Attempted Negro vote in Georgia on July 4, 1944 -

Negro leaders were refused ballots at three precincts in Atlanta on July 4. The procedure was reported as follows: each citizen prepared a standard application for a ballot which he handed to an election official who in turn handed it to another official who informed the applicant that his name was not on the registration list, therefore he was not eligible for a ballot. The performance was orderly and "polite." One New York newspaper account stated that probably never in history had people been "robbed" of their rights with such courtesy!

At Precinct E in the 3rd Ward: Mr. A. T. Walden presented a receipt from the tax collector's office which certified he was qualified to vote in the general election on November 7 to O. L. Walker, election official (box manager), who passed it to Mrs. T. H. Leather, who compared the slip with the registration list and informed Mr. Walden that his name and address did not appear on the registration list. Other Negro citizens who attempted to vote in this group were: V. W. Hodges, assistant publisher of the Atlanta Daily World; Eugene M. Martin, insurance executive; C. A. Bacote, professor at Atlanta University.
At Precinct C, Ward 4: C. A. Scott, publisher of the Atlanta Daily World; Henry F. Shorter, barber; and J. A. Batts, insurance executive, made a similar attempt to vote.
At Precinct B, Ward 4 another group whose names were not listed in the press made an effort to vote.

Others who attempted to vote were:

Cliff Mackay
John Hope, Jr.
Wallace Van Jackson
Ira DeA. Reid
Alfonso Elder
Warren Cochrane
Grace Towns Hamilton
Irene Harris
Rev. M. L. King
H. C. Edwards
C. B. Mitchell
George W. Towns
W. O. Yancey

According to all available reports, substantially the same procedure was followed in each instance, and no Negroes were permitted to vote.

Very little information was available concerning other cities in Georgia. The token effort was made in Columbus.

Shortly after the primary, the press in the state took a much more positive stand on the Negro vote issue. The Calhoun Times on July 6 again editorialized affirmatively on the subject; the Macon News had previously and again supported the decision; on July 18 the Atlanta Journal outlined a four point program for the betterment of race relations in the South in which it recommended that measures be taken to open primary elections to Negroes.

A civil suit was filed in the United States District Court in Columbus, Georgia, brought in the name of Primus King, Negro minister and barber, and naming the eleven members of the Muscogee County Democratic Executive Committee as defendants, on August 24, 1944 (Atlanta Journal). The suit asked for $5,000 damages for the alleged violation of King's civil rights, and the petition claimed that the committee violated Sections One and Two of Article I and the 14th, 15th, and 17th amendments to the Constitution of the United States. King stated that he was prepared to present evidence to prove that he believes in the tenets of the Democratic Party, and that he was denied the right to vote "solely because of race and color." Oscar D. Smith, attorney for King, said that the case was brought in behalf of a group of Negroes for the purpose of ascertaining the applicability of the United States Supreme Court decision in the Texas case, and that the King case would be carried to the Supreme Court if necessary. J. E. Chapman, Jr., Chairman of the Muscogee County Democratic Executive Committee, stated that the Committee would contest the suit.

On August 25, 1944, the following exchange of communications between the Governor and the Attorney General of Georgia took place:

Letter from Governor Ellis Arnall to Attorney General T. Grady Head, dated August 24, 1944, as reported in the Atlanta Journal and the Atlanta Constitution, August 25, 1944:

"It is my belief that the holding in the so-called Texas primary election case is not applicable to primary elections in the state of Georgia because in Georgia the Democratic white primary is not specifically provided for by law nor are all the qualifications of voters determined by constitutional provision or statutory law. Under Georgia procedure, as I understand it, the party convention and committee promulgate the rules and regulations appertaining to the Democratic white primary and the qualifications provided for participation in the primary are to a great extent controlled by the party itself.

"The matter at issue in the Muscogee county suit is of great import and importance to the people of Georgia. Accordingly, I am directing you and the State Department of Law to offer your assistance to the Muscogee county Democratic executive committee, defendants in the said action, and you are directed to take all necessary and proper steps to uphold the rules and regulations of the Democratic party relating to primary regulations in this state."

Commenting on the Governor's letter, the Attorney General was quoted as having said:

"Yesterday when the Governor noticed in the press that a suit had been instituted in the Federal Court against the members of the Muscogee County Democratic Committee complaining of the exclusion of Negroes from the Democratic primary, he wrote me that the matter at issue was of great importance to the people of Georgia.

"He directed the State Department of Law to appear as amicus curiae or in such capacity as it was possible to bring to the attention of the court that the exclusion, if any, was party action which did not offend the Constitution of the United States."

The Attorney General announced, so it was reported, that any action in the Muscogee County primary suit will be as a friend of the court. He pointed out that inasmuch as there is no state law regulating party primaries, he cannot become a party to actual litigation in the case.

It is known that the Department of Justice, through the FBI, has been conducting an investigation in Atlanta as a result of a complaint filed by

A. T. Waldon, Negro attorney. The Department was requested by Mr. Waldon to institute criminal proceedings. So far as is known, no civil suit has been filed in Atlanta.

Meanwhile, a rift developed in the Republican ranks in Georgia in connection with Negro participation in party affairs. The Republicans in Georgia held their state convention on May 22nd and named two Negro delegates to the national convention. The Georgia meeting split into two groups when an all-white delegation withdrew because the District convention seated the Negro-white faction. The mixed group was later recognized and seated at the national convention on June 26.

A coalition was formed between the Anti-Roosevelt Democrats and the "lily-white" Republicans. The Anti--- Democrats had held a meeting in Atlanta on June 20 which was attended by seventy-five delegates from twenty-eight states. Talmadge was reported as forecasting a split in the Democratic Party if the national convention adopted a racial equality plank. On August 9, the Atlanta Constitution reported that the coalition mentioned above had combined to get their electors on the general election ballot in Georgia. On August 20 it was reported that Secretary of State John B. Wilson had certified the joint slate of "lilly-white" Republican and "Independent" Democratic electors for the general election ballot. The Republican group which had been recognized and seated at the national convention charged a conspiracy between former Governor Talmadge and Wilson, and filed an action in the Fulton County Superior Court. On September 9, the Republican National Chairman asked Governor Arnall to use his authority to see that the certification be changed and that Secretary of State Wilson certify the electors of the "regular" Repbulican organization. Arnall refused to interfere. On September 12, the Republican National Committee asked the Georgia Supreme Court to reverse the Fulton County Superior Court's ruling that Secretary of State Wilson was not required to place the names of the "regular Republican candidates for electors" on Georgia's ballot for the November general election. The appeal to the Georgia Supreme Court was originally placed on the calendar for argument on November 13 - one week after the general election. Later the date was changed to October 2. On October 6 it was reported that the Georgia Supreme Court had upheld the Secretary of State, and that the rebel-coalition electors would be placed on the official ballot.

Revised Constitution for Georgia

Almost simultaneously with the release of the Supreme Court decision, public hearings began in Georgia in connection with the revision of the State Constitution. Two actions on the part of the commission have direct bearing upon the problem and require especial attention: 1) recommendations for uncontrolled primaries -- obviously designed to circumvent the Supreme Court decision on the Texas white primary case; and 2) refusal to recommend elimination of the poll tax requirement from the Constitution. A list of the membership of the Commission is included in this report for reference purposes:

Ellis Arnall, Chairman
Fred Hand, Pelham, speaker pro tem of the house of representatives, vice-chairman
B. E. Thrasher, Jr., state auditor, secretary
Roy V. Harris, Augusta, house speaker
A. N. Durden, Albany, house floor leader
Charles Gowan, Brunswick, house member
Jess Pope, Cairo, senator
Justice Warren Grice, Macon, of the state supreme court Judge Hugh MacIntyre, Thomasville, of the court of appeals
Judge Tom Candler, Blairsville
Judge Will R. Smith, Nashville
J. W. Culpepper, Fayetteville, house member
R. E. L. Majors, Claxton, editor
Mrs. Leonard Haas, Atlanta
Hatton Lovejoy, LaGrange, attorney
Frank Foley, Columbus, attorney
J. V. Carmichael, Marietta, house member
David J. Arnold, Griffin, senator and president of the Georgia Bankers' Association
T. Grady Head, Ringgold, attorney general
J. Roy McCracken, Louisville, editor
David S. Atkinson, Savannah, senator
Hamilton Holt, Macon

On April 11, 1944, the jurists on the commission recommended revamping the voting requirements because of the implications of the Texas decision. It was stated that elimination of present voting laws would enable the Legislature to draft new ones. Justice Warren Grice of the Georgia Supreme Court stated that the Texas decision would affect primaries in Georgia under present laws. The commission voted to abolish the provision in the Georgia Constitution relating to party primaries, with Mrs. Leonard Haas, wife of a prominent Atlanta attorney, casting the lone dissenting vote. On April 16 the commission completed action to kill all reference to primary laws in the state constitution. In May the League of Women Voters vehemently protested the elimination of provisions regulating primaries. A few days later, on May 29, Governor Arnall was quoted in the press as saying, " I am against any regulation of primaries in the constitution or on the statute books of this state." As it now stands, the commission will recommend to the next session of the Legislature that the proposed revised constitution shall contain no provision to regulate primaries.

On the subject of the poll tax, on April 11 the commission voted to retain the poll tax as a requirement for voting in the revised Constitution. James Carmichael, a member of the commission, and Judge Edgar Watkins, a citizen who appeared before the commission, argued for abolition of the tax, pointing out that it encourages machine politics. Governor Arnall was reported as having remarked that no poll tax was required of persons from 18 to 21 years of age nor from men and women in the armed forces - "I wonder just who is left to pay poll taxes.... I have not made up my mind that it should be eliminated," said the Governor. Mrs. Haas and Mr. Carmichael cast the only votes to abolish the poll tax provision. (The "Grandfather" clause was eliminated).

A growing sentiment could be noted in the Georgia press for abolition of the poll tax by the next General Assembly; the Georgia State Industrial Union Council (CIO) urged repeal by the commission; the League of Women Voters urged elimination of the poll tax provisions from the revised constitution, and the Atlanta Constitution on the following day, October 5, disagreed with the League's position, saying it was opposed to elimination of the tax "at this time." The Augusta Herald on September 17 recommended repeal of the tax as a requisite for voting by the next Georgia Legislature, and suggested retaining the tax for cost of education as in the cases of Louisiana, North Carolina, and Florida. Louis D. Newton, Atlanta minister, urged abolition of the tax by the next session of the Legislature.

It will be recalled that during this period of time the poll tax issue had been before the United States Senate with violent opposition to any Federal action being expressed by southern representatives and the southern press. On April 21 the Atlanta Constitution carried an account which stated that Senator Russell was a member of an unofficial three-man committee planning strategy to fight the anti-poll tax measure in the Senate. Both Russell and George were later reported by the Atlanta Journal (September 3) as favoring abolition by the states, but opposing Federal "interference" on the states' rights issue. By and large the press of Georgia took that same position.

Almost without exception Georgia representatives and the Georgia press justified their opposition to any Federal action on the ground that abolition of the poll tax should be left to states -- and almost without exception they approved abolition by the states.

As it now stands, the commission on revision of Georgia's constitution will recommend that the poll tax provisions be left in the constitution without change.

Some Miscellaneous Notes from the Atlanta papers:

April 7, 1944: Georgia led the nation in non-white net loss in population 1935-1940. Decreased net 30,801. (Constitution)

April 13, 1944: A proposal by State Senator David S. Atkinson that membership in the Georgia House of Representatives be based on population was supported only by Mrs. Haas and voted down by the commission to revise the constitution.

June 30, 1944: Atlanta Journal editorial urges "all qualified electors" to vote on July 4, as state officials who will frame new state constitution will be elected, which makes necessary "full participation in the primary.... to the end that the greatest number of Georgians will have participated at least indirectly in the adoption of a new constitution."

July 2, 1944: Excerpt from Constitution editorial entitled Vote in Tuesday's Primary: "Our way of life and our form of government are based on the ballot box. Thousands of men are dying for that way of life and that form of government."

June 30, 1944: United States Court may try Negro's case on school salary. Samuel L. Davis seeks injunction to prevent the Atlanta Board of Education from continuing an alleged discrimination against him and other Negro teachers in pay scale, on the grounds that they are required to have the same qualifications as white teachers.
